Selectmen ask review by A.G.

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen have asked the U.S. Attorney General and the state Attorney General to investigate the Dec. 17 approval by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), which granted at least two more years of life to Cohasset Heights Ltd.

The resolution, prepared by members of Concerned Citizens of Cohasset, stated that the Dec. 17 DEQE decision which granted conditional approval for expansion of the commercial landfill "gives the appearance of impropriety, administrative malfeasance, violation of due process, the exertion of undue influences and an abrogation of the DEQE's protective duties."

In addition, the board of health's special town counsel Michael Leone, who gave his approval to the resolution, has submitted an appeal of the DEQE decision in superior court. The claim for an adjudicatory proceeding requests that the conditional approval to CHL be revoked and the CHL be ordered to comply with the prerequisites of an operating plan established by DEQE on July 18, 1987 and Sept. 15, 1987.

Atty. Leon also requested the court schedule a meeting among representatives of CHL, the board of health, the state Water Pollution Control Commission, the state Solid Waste Management and state legislators to "establish a timeframe within which CHL must comply with the provisions of the Department's (DEQE) July 28 letter."

Sewer pact may prompt special town meeting

The sewer commissioners, hopeful that an intermunicipal agreement is about to be signed, may request a special town meeting in February to seal the deal with Hull.

Sewer commission chairman Charles DeSantis said this week it appears the two towns will soon agree to connect Cohasset's sewer district into the Hull wastewater treatment facility. But because design of the system must be submitted to the state by June 1, town meeting approval of the agreement must soon be completed.

Town meeting must also appropriate the money necessary to begin construction of the force main connection into Hull. If the state approves the design in June, 90 percent construction grant monies will be available by Sept. 30.

"If an agreement is finalized, we'll ask for a special town meeting in February," the chairman stated. "Then

Town officials hopeful for January housing policy

By David Foley

An agreement could be signed by the end of this month which would release all state discretionary funds frozen after negotiations to change what a state agency claimed were the town's restrictive housing policies stalled last October.

In fact, town counsel Richard Henderson is in the process of having typed up and sent to the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) what he hopes will be the final version of the agreement. It outlines goals for affordable housing and suggests specific projects.

An increase of the two below-market rental units at Government Island and the use of the town's office building at 43 Elm Street for subsidized housing will probably be included in the plan, according to housing authority attorney Charles Humphreys.

There will also be an emphasis on scattered site affordable housing and renovations of existing buildings as opposed to the erection of dense housing projects.

"In some respects, they're an agreement, in some respects a contract and in some respects a social statement," said Humphreys of the agreements. The state requires these "memorandums of understanding," as Marcia Hertz of EOCD terms the documents, only of towns which have been slow to implement what EOCD feels are adequate plans to increase affordable housing.

EOCD broke off talks with the town in October after what Hertz termed its "lengthy efforts" to negotiate affordable housing goals and froze all discretionary state funds. Cohasset's State Representative Jeanette Murray

Fire chief asks for bigger budget

Next week, the fire chief will propose a budget that includes five additional positions and about $100,000 more to operate his department.

Among his suggestions for an "ideal" budget is a second fire station located near Rte. 3A.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock will propose a $991,960 annual budget for fiscal year 1989 when he meets next week with selectmen. That budget includes $800,609 in salaries - $85,000 more than the current fiscal year.

"This is the budget I will recommend to the town for the level of protection the town needs and uses," he said.

Among the proposals he will be discussing next week are five additional firefighters to bring the total manpower from 25 to 30, and the appointment of a deputy chief and four lieutenants.

In addition, Chief Brock has outlined the future need for a second fire station located in the area of King Street, Sohier Street or Rte. 3A. He made the suggestion to advise selectmen and the capital outlay committee at this time, "simply for their consideration."

The chief continued, "At this point, it is simply a

Longevity pay

Selectmen voted Monday night to recommend an article for the town meeting warrant which will provide longevity pay for three elected town officials.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew explained that currently the highway surveyor, town clerk and town treasurer do not receive longevity pay like all other town employees. He recommended the three elected officials be granted the same provision which provides the longevity pay.

Selectmen agreed the recommendation should be included in the warrant for the annual town meeting.

Athletic field members

With some difficulty, selectmen voted to appoint three members to the new athletic field study committee.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle suggested the three present selectmen each nominate one candidate. But when Selectman Martha Gjesteby nominated her candidate, the nomination failed. "I think you men are voting against me because I'm a woman," she said, half-jokingly.

"You're right, I was being sexist," Selectman James Gallagher admitted, as he cast the deciding vote in favor of nominee Stephen Endriss.

Along with Endriss, selectmen appointed Joseph Connolly, a two and a-half year resident of the town with experience in public relations. Connolly, who attended Monday night's meeting, told selectmen that whatever plan is endorsed by the study committee, it should be well publicized and presented in a thorough fashion to the voters. The third appointment was Herbert Crehan.

The recreation commission still has one member to appoint to the study committee. Director Jack Worley is an ex-officio member along with Selectman Gallagher and Tree and Park Supt. Peter Laugelle.

Christmas tree disposal

Because of an order from the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, the Cedar St. landfill can no longer accept brush on a regular basis even from residents.

However, arrangements have been made to dispose of Christmas trees at the landfill Saturday, Jan. 9, 1988 from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. - the regular operating hours of the landfill. Jan. 9 is the only day Christmas trees will be accepted for disposal.

No more poles

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew will write a letter to the New England Telephone Co., explaining that no new poles may be installed in town until the company submits a timetable for their installation.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle requested that Andrew write the letter after he received several complaints from residents regarding the practice of leaning one pole against another along their property. Despite selectmen's attempts to find out when the support poles would be dismantled, there has been no answer from the telephone company.

"Until we get a timetable from them," Selectman Laugelle said, "they shouldn't even apply for any new poles here."

Rink legislation

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray (R-Cohasset-Hingham) has re-filed a bill for the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) to build a skating rink to replace the closed Winter Garden rink in Cohasset.

State Representative Frank Hynes (D-Scituate, Marshfield) also supports the bill.

Legislation Murray filed during the last session for this purpose did not get any further than the Urban and Housing committee, according to the representative.

She expects the bill to be numbered today and a hearing to be called at the end of February or the beginning of March.

"I'd like to make sure as many parents as possible from the South Shore...appear before the committee," said Murray. She will know the hearing date five to six days beforehand.

She has also filed a separate bill for a swimming pool to be built alongside the rink.

Meanwhile, the effort to establish another privately-owned rink has stalled, according to Linda Zimmer of the South Shore Ice Sports Association. Zimmer is president of the Seahawks youth hockey organization, whose 400 members used the Winter Garden facility for practice.

No one has stepped forward to donate the necessary land, she said in an interview.

Winter Garden's owner James Hoban of Cohasset sold the rink early last year to Scituate's Richard Garvey after fighting a losing financial battle with rising liability insurance premiums. Unlike other towns, Cohasset refused to subsidize the rink's operation.

The rink site has now been turned into a boat yard.

Wetlands violators stopped by commision

By David Foley
Mariner staff

The Conservation Commission stopped two wetlands violators Tuesday night when it told Theodore A. Ingemanson that he cannot add any more fill to his 441 King Street property and must stop mowing the part of his lawn accidentally built over wetlands.

Ingemanson mistakenly put about 15 cubic yards of fill into bordering wetlands around 1985, according to conservation Commission chairman Merle S. Brown.

Several neighbors complained about the filling but only after town counsel pursued Ingemanson did he appear before the board with his attorney late last year to discuss the filing of a Notice of Intent, albeit after the fact, of the illegal filling.

The board agreed to issue the Notice if Ingemanson agrees to no more filling. The hearing is still technically open until he or his lawyer informs the commission that he does not want to continue the proceedings in order to better safeguard the re-sale value of his home through more accurate wetland delineation.

Brown scolded Robert Johnston for illegally clearing a swath through wetlands in front of his 300 South Main Street house down to the edge of the Gulf River. The property is located off the cul-de-sac Murray Road.

"It looked like you went in there with a bulldozer," claimed Brown, who alleged that only a few plants remained after the June clearing. He said he and three other board members were "very upset" when they examined the property last year after the clearing had been done

Johnston claimed he had only meant to clear poison ivy hazardous to his two children as well as what he considered unsightly crab apple trees.

He also claimed brush on the slope was creating harborage for rats.

Johnston was actually appearing before the board Tuesday night to file a Notice of Intent to build a gazebo on the slope.

Johnston also denied that a stream of clear water which Brown observed last year emptying into the river originates from his property. He suggested it may be starting from underneath a neighbor's dirt pile.

He agreed to re-plant the slope with suitable wetlands vegetation.

Johnston is restoring a 1903 estate designed by the renowned American architect H.H. Richardson, the architect of Boston's Trinity Church.

In other business, the Commission:

Agreed to ask the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) for technical asistance to determine if there have been wetlands violations at the North Main Street junkyard owned by William "Sonny" Barnes.

Barnes claims his site, where junked vehicles are stored, is protected from present-day hazardous waste laws by having been in existence before they were enacted.

However, informed sources in town government said confidentally that Barnes has added junk to the site since the passage of the laws, and so they may be applicable to his site.

The commission refused to indefinitely continue the hearing on Thomas Cummings' plan to expand his Jonathan Livingston Seagull Square shopping mall at 130 King Street. State regulations forbid indefinite postponements, according to the commission.

Resolution to state officials . . .

In a letter to DEQE Acting Commissioner Russell Sylva, Atty. Leon stated none of the "threshold issues" regarding CHL were resolved prior to the expansion approval. He said DEQE's "about-face" from its July, 1987 statements rejecting the expansion application demonstrates "a lack of intra-agency coordination, at best, or a surrender to political influence, at worse."

Selectmen reviewed the resolution which was handed to them prior to their Monday, Jan. 4 meeting. Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle questioned town counsel whether they could endorse the proposal. Town Counsel Richard Henderson replied that selectmen should seek the advise of special town counsel - "someone you pay good money to represent you in this matter," before making any decision. Atty. Henderson said before selectmen make public statements in the press regarding pending legal cases, they should consult with the attorney who represents them in each particular case.

But members of Concerned Citizens of Cohasset said Atty. Leon had reviewed the resolution and approved the document. Member Ron Goodwin argued the town won't be held liable in court by asking the attorney general to investigate an issue. "We are not asking you to appeal anything. I have the board of health's appeal to the DEQE right here. The board of health feels this is a problem, but we're not asking you to appeal anything," he stated. Goodwin noted if selectmen delay an endorsement of the resolution, then "the whole thing is falling apart again."

But Elm Court resident Peter Whittemore said he had talked with special counsel Leon who said to "go ahead" with the resolution. "He said he had no problem with it being reviewed by the attorney general," Whittemore argued.

Selectman Burt Pratt agreed, noting, "Special town counsel agrees the decision (by the DEQE) is wrong. I see no harm in having this thoroughly investigated."

The board then voted 4-0 to endorse the resolution.

The resolution stated the the operations of Cohasset Heights have a potentially detrimental impact upon the public water supply, public health and safety and other environmental resources of the town. It also noted that DEQE is charged by the law with the protection of those resources. "Therefore, we the Board of Selectmen of the Town of Cohasset do hereby request that the United States Attorney for the Massachusetts district and the Attorney General of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts initiate an investigation into the activities of the DEQE which resulted in the issuance of said conditional approval Dec. 17, 1987," the resolution concluded.

In a letter to DEQE Acting Commissioner Russell Sylva, which accompanies a copy of the health board's appeal, Atty. Leon stated the board was "perplexed and dismayed last week upon receipt of the department's conditional plan approval (of CHL)."

Atty. Leon continued, "none of the threshold issues has been resolved before the department could even commence review of the plan approval application. This inexplicable about-face can only be construed as an egregious lack of intra-agency coordination, at best, or a surrender to political influence, at worse.

"Either scenario is unacceptable to the board of health and the residents it represents who hereby call for you to revoke the conditional plan approval and withhold any apporval until CHL has satisfied all requirements set forth in the Dept.'s July 28, 1987 letter."

Atty. Leon was referring to a document submitted last summer by DEQE following Cohasset Heights' application for expansion into Area 4A. At that time, DEQE enumerated several conditions at the landfill that were unacceptable or unresolved. At that time, DEQE stated that all conditions must be met or expansion could not be granted. But in its Dec. 17 decision, DEQE did not refer to those conditions, and granted conditional approval to expand the landfill.

Among the unresolved issues, Atty. Leon stated in his letter to Acting Commissioner Sylva, is the leachate treatment and disposal facility at the landfill; site assignment for the landfill; a special permit, which Atty. Leon stated, is necessary under the Cohasset zoning bylaws but has not be issued to CHL; hydrogeological information - in the July 28 letter, DEQE stated more hydrogeological information was necessary; surface water collection system - the design, construction, operation and maintenance plan as required in July by DEQE but not yet submitted; and leachate containment system plans which were not submitted to DEQE despite an order issued in the July 28 letter.

Animal control department budget increases

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted to recommend a budget for "improved" animal control services that nearly doubled last year's amount.

Included in the proposed fiscal year 1989 budget is a ten percent salary increase for Animal Control Officer William Quigley. In the proposed budget for 1989, Quigley will be paid $3,750.

Executive Secretary Donald Andrew recommended the increase, explaining that all other town employees are entitled to step increases in the first six months of a job, along with annual cost of living increases. The animal control officer's salary has remained the same for the past three years, he stated. The ten percent figure includes an amount equal to a step rate increase and the cost of living raise. "You're getting someone who is available to answer calls, who is more knowledgeable and has more contacts in the business. We are getting a much better service," he stated.

Quigley was named Cohasset's animal control officer last April. It is a part-time position, although he is on call to answer and respond to emergencies.

During selectmen's review of the proposed budget Monday night, Quigley explained that he now carries a pager to constantly alert him when there is an emergency call. That pager, which was authorized by Executive Secretary Andrew, costs $25 a month. He receives about two calls per day on the pager.

Although selectmen thought the pager was a good idea, Selectman Martha Gjesteby said in the future they should be made aware of such expenditures.

The general expenses portion of the proposed budget is $1,590 higher than last year's budget appropriation. The total for fiscal 1989 is $3,750 for that section of the budget.

Selectmen endorsed the budget, with Selectman Gjesteby opposed. "All these budgets are going up and up. I can't see approving everything - we're responsible to the citizens," she said. "I've noticed all the budgets are going up, from one-quarter to one-half. If we keep this up, we're looking at a 2 1/2 override. " Gjesteby said she was not prepared to vote on the salary increase for the animal control officer, and noted that a ten percent raise was "quite a large percentage."

But Selectman James Gallagher defended the increase, saying the new animal control officer is performing his duties well.

In other action Monday night, selectmen voted to increase Fire Chief Daniel Brocks' annual salary by eight percent. The contract calls for an annual increase from eight percent to 13 percent.

Members of the fire department subcommittee, including selectmen Rocco Laugelle and Cliff Mitman, agreed an eight percent raise is warranted this year. Last year, Chief Brock was awarded a ten-and-a-half percent raise.

"We also looked into what other fire chiefs in the area are getting. He's in the middle of nine towns we surveyed," Selectman Laugelle said. "At the time he was hired, we wanted to bring the money up, we thought it was a little low. We did that, and now he's in the middle."

Although Selectman Gallagher suggested a nine percent raise, that motion failed. The board voted to issue Chief Brock an eight percent raise retroactive to Jan. 1, 1988.

Selectmen voted Monday night to wait until the "latest date possible" to accept a proposal to join SEMASS, the trash-to-energy faciliy in Rochester.

After listening to the recommendation of the disposal area study committee, selectmen agreed they would wait until the last possible moment to sign a contract with the organization. In the meantime, members of the disposal committee will continue to investigate alternatives, including a facility in Orrington, Maine which could be less expensive than SEMASS.

Arthur Pompeo, a member of the committee, told selectmen that a SEMASS contract was received by Cohasset's town counsel. Although a town meeting vote allowed selectmen to sign the contract, the disposal area study committee is "still looking at other things," Pompeo said. "SEMASS is the only contract we have right now. So we are recommending you sign it, but not until the last possible moment."

SEMASS has not yet issued a date by which the contract must be signed by Cohasset selectmen.

The problem with the Orrington plant is that transportation of the trash cannot be guaranteed to and from the Maine facility, he explained. Until that can be arranged, SEMASS may actually be the only alternative for the town.

Selectmen also decided to schedule a meeting with Sen. William Golden at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 25 at town hall. As a proponent of the Solid Waste Bill recently enacted by the state legislature, Sen. Golden is seeking a regional solution to the area's solid-waste disposal problems. According to disposal area study committee member Jeff Power, Sen. Golden would like to speak with selectmen and the board of health regarding a joint application by the South Shore Coalition to develop a regional disposal plan. Through the solid-waste legislation, there will be money available to communities to develop these plans.

"The resolution will not cost the towns any money. His proposal is to get funds from this bill to develop a regional approach," Power said, adding that Sen. Golden will not discourage the town from participating in SEMASS.

Fire budget jump . . .

discussion about a second station. I know there are a lot of other capital projects, and I simply want this included when selectmen and the capital outlay committee consider priorities.

"It's something to consider for the future, depending on the development of the town, particularly along Rte. 3A or in Beechwood," he said.

According to the proposal he will make to selectmen, Chief Brock suggested a 5,400-square-foot second station. The total construction costs of the proposed station would be approximately $810,000, bonded over a 20-year period.

Chief Brock is proposing this budget to selectmen in an effort to bring the department back to its pre-Proposition 2 1/2 form. In 1980, he explained, there were 29 men on board with one deputy chief. With the comparative growth of residential and commercial areas in town, there is a need for at least one additional man above the 1980 level, he said.

He explained the town is in danger of slipping from a good insurance rating, based on its level of fire protection, to a less-impressive rating. Chief Brock explained the Insurance Service Organization rates each town on a scale of one to nine as to its level of fire protection. Cohasset is currently at a "4" level, but is in danger of slipping to a "5". "We've received a letter stating that our rating is being reviewed," he said, "and there appears to be some question whether we will be dropped to a five."

That insurance rating affects each homeowner in town, the chief explained, because nine out of ten homeowners' insurance use this national rating service to help determine their cost to the consumer. "Fire protection has a large bearing on the cost of homeowners' insurance," he said. "And one of those factors is the town's rating according to Insurance Service Organization.

"The estimate I've been given is if the town drops from a four to a five rating, the individual's homeowners' insurance costs will increase by about four percent. That varies according to policy."

The current "4" rating was established in 1980 when the department operated three fire stations, five credited pumpers and a staff of 28 firefighters. "The present level has been reduced to one station, three or four pumpers and 24 firefighters on shift. I feel that when this is considered in the review that the town's rating may drop to a "6".

According to the chief, a drop to a "6" level would add approximately four percent more to individual homeowners' insurance costs from the "5" rating. "For my home currently," the chief explained, "that would be $28.76 for one step and $57.52 for two steps. This would be an insurance cost increase with no additional insurance benefits to the homeowner."

That is in contrast, he noted, to a $47.68 per year increase in real estate taxes if the additional manpower

Landscape artist exhibit this month

The bold energetic landscapes by artist Janet Blagdon will hang in the invitational gallery of the South Shore Art Center during the month of January.

Running concurrently in the Margaret Dillon Members Gallery at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset will be an exhibit of works by faculty members of the Center's education department.

An opening reception for both exhibits will be held on Sunday, Jan. 10 from 2 - 4 p.m., directly after the annual winter open house kicking off the winter term at the Center.

Blagdon's works, familar to South Shore art patrons, are large-scale acrylics on paper. She has received numerous awards including second prize in the 1987 South Shore Arts Festival, a blue ribbon in the Center's 1986 Blue Ribbon Exhibit, a first prize in the 1985 Plymouth Outdoor Art Show and a first prize in the Center's 1983 All New England Juried Exhibit. She has had exhibits at the Center, the Queen Ann Gallery, the Enchanted Eye Gallery in Hollis, N.H., the Needham Public Library and Quincy Co-op Bank.

Both exhibits close on Jan. 29. The public is invited to view the works Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to noon and Saturdays 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For further information please call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

☐ Gregory P. Igo of Cohasset, a sophomore at Colby College (Waterville, Maine,) has been named a Julius Seelye Bixler Scholar for the 1986-87 academic year.

The award is given annually to top-ranking students in recognition of their academic achievement.

Igo is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul F. Igo of North Main Street in Cohasset. He is a graduate of the Cohasset Junior/Senior High School.

☐ Congratulations to F. Allen Weisenfluh on his recent promotion at John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co. as Vice-President Bond and Corporate Finance. In addition to heading up the Trading Department, he will manage the company's high yield account and will be in charge of investment banking relations for the entire country. Al has also rcently become chairman of the Investment Committee for all John Hancock employee profit sharing funds.

☐ Cohasset resident Lena Genello Goldberg recently was elected to the New England Baptist Health Care Corporation. The Corporation is the parent organization for New England Baptist Hospital and NEB Enterprises, Inc. Each elected member serves a five year term.

Goldberg is an attorney with Sullivan & Worcester in Boston. She received her undergraduate degree from Chatham College in Pittsburgh and her Juris Doctorate from Harvard Law School.

☐ Some interesting news from St. John's College . . . Simon McNabb is president of the King William Players at St. John's College and is captain of the Green Waves, a duty that results in his playing in every campus sport from football to soccer. He is president of The College Polity, and co-chaired last spring's Parent's Weekend. He is also campus coordinator for Michael Dukakis's primary campaign.

Cohasset's new police officer, William Oliver stands along side his sister Marie Condon during his recent graduation from the police academy.
(J. Paul Mac Donald)

As president of the King William Players, McNabb has moved from acting and directing to administering its new season. A member of the KWP's Steerage Committee, ha has helped oversee the move of its costume room from the basement of Mellon to a newly constructed back-stage room.

McNabb acted in many plays at Xaverian Brothers Higher School in Cohasset, where he graduated in 1981 and where he also served as assistant editor of the school paper and editor of the year book.

At St. John's he has appeared as the devil in George Bernard Shaw's Don Juan in Hell, filled a small role in a one-act play, Leonce and Lena, took the parts of the Sexton, the Lad, and a Lord in Much Ado About Nothing, played another small role, that of Curtis, in The Taming of the Shrew and last year directed Eugene Ionesco's Improvisation.

In addition to everything else, McNabb also is a student aide in the college library.

Last summer he worked for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts doing research and promotion for a "wonderful program" in human services and employment that has brought Massachusetts much attention.

McNabb is interested in government. His senior essay will be about Billy Budd and, like a major freshman paper, will center on such questions as how best to serve when governmental policy conflicts withone's own point of view.

After St. John's there awaits a big decision: whether to go into the Peace Corps for a year or two or whether to begin studies in international relations, perhaps in Boston.

☐ Congratulations to Debbie Hartley on an early decision to Rochester University.

Matt and Heidi were Cohasset High School sweethearts and are planning a 1988 wedding.

☐ At the recent Annual American Red Cross Volunteer Recognition Night held by the South Shore Chapter at the Neighborhood Club in Quincy, several Cohasset volunteers were given Recognition Awards. The awards went to Wayne Robbins for 10 years of service, Mary Davis for ten years of service, and Nancy Anderson for 10 years of service. Alfred Odermatt received a twenty year award. Special recognition was given to Marie Dolan. Cohasset was also complimented for having the most successful Bloodmobile held on the South Shore for the month of September!

☐ Dont forget that this Saturday (Jan. 9) is the day to bring your Christmas Tree to the Cedar Street landfill. The tree has to be chipped to be accepted, and the Tree and Park Department chipper will be there from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. to do the work for you. The landfill is not allowed to accept whole trees (per order of the DEQE). No trees will be accepted before that date, so don't forget it!

☐ Let us know what you did over the Christmas vacation. Surely there are lots of you out there that did something that you can't wait to tell us! Give me a call; evenings are the best time to catch me at home.

Sticky situation

The board of health is embroiled in yet another legal fist-fight with Cohasset Heights Ltd., and this week, selectmen joined the scofflaw.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) decided two weeks ago the commercial landfill could expand. That was good news for CHL; bad news for those who have been struggling to close down the operation. The expansion will extend the life of the landfill by more than two years. Without expansion into area 4A, CHL would be closed by next fall, according to its owners.

The special counsel for the board of health, Michael Leon, is angry about this latest decision by DEQE. It is, he contends, a complete reversal of the state's position from last summer. At that time, it appeared quite clearly that DEQE would not allow the expansion, based on a number of engineering factors.

As Leon stated, it appears this "inexplicable about-face" by DEQE may have been the result of no communication between the state headquarters and their regional office, or a "surrender to political influences."

Several residents argued that DEQE was pressured into approving the expansion application just hours before a more stringent solid waste bill was passed by the legislature. Was it simple circumstance that on the same day this expansion was approved, the DEQE commissioner resigned, and a deputy commissioner rushed through approval of the CHL application in time to avoid the more stringent regulations of the new legislation? Many residents, including Atty. Leon, are suspicious of the timing.

There is certainly no proof at this time that any state official was coerced into signing that expansion application. But it is strangely coincidental, and deserves continued questioning and scrutiny by the court system.

The only alternative for the board of health is to pursue a legal appeal of that decision. It has been done, and we feel it is a justified move for the town to make.

We are not so convinced, as are many residents, that expansion of Cohasset Heights Ltd. is connected with the abrupt resignation of the DEQE commissioner. Although CHL is a primary concern within our community, we doubt it is a critical matter in the eyes of state officials who oversee hundreds of similar landfills, commercial and public.

In our opinion, at least until some concrete proof is uncovered, we believe this "about face" was caused by a lack of coordination and communication between departments of the DEQE. It has surely been done before. DEQE is not noted for its speedy deliberations, or its bureaucratic efficiency. It is an understaffed division of the state government, bound by red tape and an increasing backlog of cases.

But this is not to say concerned residents should surrender to their latest defeat. If anyone is concerned that the state may have been manipulated into this decision, then you should work to uncover the truth. It may be a sound decision based on engineeering facts and concerns, as DEQE has stated.

Or expansion of the commercial landfill may have been the result of political dealings on Beacon Hill. If this is true, it is necessary for all concerned residents to work together and fight this latest affront to the democratic process. If political manipulation occurred here, when or where will it end?

Recreation department registration

Registrations will take place during January for after school sports programs and creative dramatics. Details will be announced.

A few openings remain for the Martin Luther King holiday ski trip to Gunstock, the cost is $30. The February ski trips will be Sunday, Feb. 14, to King Ridge, and Sunday, Feb. 28, to Gunstock again. Registrations will begin during mid-January for both trips.

For those registered for the Blue Hills Ski lessons; remember we are scheduled to begin on Thursday, Jan. 7, 1988. The bus will leave from town hall at about 3:20 p.m., and return to town hall at about 6:45 p.m. Town hall will be open both during arrival and departure times. Parents who wish to leave their children's ski equipment off at the registration office during the day of the ski lessons may do so, if it is not convenient for your child to go home after school.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday evenings, at the GAR Hall, Scituate, starting Wednesday, Jan. 13, 1988.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m., both on Wednesday evenings. The fee for the eight-week program will be $25. Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class on Wednesday, Jan. 13. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department beginner class.

For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding 4 inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed! It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes: the fee is $25 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, beginning Monday, Jan. 4, 1988. Registrations will be accepted on a first call, first enrolled basis, and classes are limited in size.

With cold weather, hence, ice skating season approaching, the following should be used as a guideline for safe ice. Common sense is the most important denominator, however.

Ice Safe For:	0-3 degrees	30-40 degrees	40-50 degrees
Single skaters:	1-3/4 inches	2-3/4 inches	6 inches
Couples:	2-3/4 inches	3-3/4 inches	8 inches
Crowds:	3-3/4 inches	4-3/4 inches	12 inches

These figures are for clear, fresh water ice only; for snow ice, add two inches; for water logged ice, add three inches; if skates cut in — Go Home! Salt water in mild climates is always treacherous — keep away from it. Also thickness in 40-50 degree column are safe depths for short periods of time only.

ELMS MEADOW SKATING

The deepest portion of Elms Meadow is towards the Spring Street dam (about 12"-18") the shallowest is towards the back of the area, which is 3" or so.

Do not throw debris on the ice to check for safety. This only clutters up the ice, making skating dangerous, and does not give you an accurate indication of ice strength.

Fire department budget . . .

for the fire department is approved, along with construction of the second station along Rte. 3A. "I would rather have the additional fire protection since I will have to pay the money either way," the chief stated.

Chief Brock said that in various reviews of the Cohasset department by other chiefs or outside consultants, "they generally recommend 28 men for the department." He explained that although the cost of hiring additional manpower is greater than paying overtime salaries, it makes better fire protection sense to have additional manpower on the shifts. "Right now if we have a box alarm, I have to put just four men out on the road, each having a certain function to perform at the fire. With seven men on a shift, it gives me the two additional men I actually need to respond to a fire," he stated.

The chief is seeking to appoint one deputy chief and four lieutenants, along with the four captains currently in the department. This is an ideal system of rank, he said, which provides trained officers to head each shift, or to take the place of the next ranking officer in his absence.

"Right now if the captain is out, I have no officer to take command of that shift. The senior man will take his place, although he has not been trained to be in charge. If I had someone designated to take the place of the commanding officer, there would be requirements and training for that position," he said.

The chief realized his proposed budget will probably meet with some resistance from fiscal-minded town officials. "I know that for selectmen and for town meeting, this budget is going to be a balance between what the town can afford and what it needs," he said.

Winter sports start-up at Cohasset High

By David Foley
Mariner staff

Sports is a never-ending passion at Cohasset High School.

The high school wrestling team is 2-2 so far this year, according to coach Torin Sweeney, 23.

Cohasset finished fifth among 16 towns at the Christmas Tournament, which Sweeney calls "very respectable, seeing as how 3 of the teams above us were [in] Divison 1."

For the first time ever in the team's eleven year history, there were four finalists: senior Doug Bennett, winning his 125 pound weight category for the second year in a row; senior captain Glen Froio winning in his 152 pound category; junior Paul Froio, taking second place in his 160 pound category and 119-pound Tim Pieroti, who took second place.

Senior Captain Peter Buckley took fourth place in his 140 pound category, which Sweeney termed a "very competitive weight class."

"Overall, the whole crew has been wrestling very well," said Sweeney. The coach, who spent four years on the team while he attended Cohasset High, said he thinks the team can at least match last year's season record of 11-6.

Among the team's leading strong men is 112-pound John Rhodes, Jr., whom the coach describes as "wrestling very well, although he's had some tough competition." Sweeney also expects victories from 130-pound senior Greg Butler and 145-pound Adam Hill, who achieved a 30-second pin against a Needham opponent.

The most improved wrestler is 135-pound Dennis Mulligan.

In hockey, the lack of a rink in Cohasset for practice has not kept the 17-member team from achieving a perfect 5-0 record, according to coach Dennis J. Walsh. The team is top-ranked in the South Shore League.

However, the sale of the Winter Garden facility in March and the elimination of the Lobster Pot hockey tournament has caused a reduction from a 20 to a 16-game schedule.

In addition, Walsh is seeing the result of a drop in hockey interest for the last ten years. The team can muster only enough players for one line,with 3 fewer players than most of the teams opposing it.

"Hockey is a game you have to play for several years before you can pick it up in high school," he said. He bemoans the fact that ice hockey rinks are not "a priority around here" as in his native Canada, where he claimed every town has at least an outdoor rink.

Despite the lean pickings, Walsh declares the team has 4 to 5 players good enough to win college athletic scholarships and declares there's "a good chance" of making it to the state finals.

The leading scorer is co-captain Todd Fitzpatrick, who has already racked up 22 points playing center, with an equal number of assists and goals.

Close behind Fitzpatrick is co-captain Daniel Pompeo with 19 points as the result of 10 assists and 9 goals.

Daniel's brother Brian has accumulated a respectable 15 points with 11 assists and 4 goals.

So far, there have been no injuries.

Walsh praised Fitzpatrick and Dan Pompeo as well as defenseman Craig Mulcahy for "really stellar performances."

He termed 15-year old Brian Pompeo the most improved player, said junior defenseman Ned Chase is "doing a heck of a job" and praised the goal tending of senior Peter Sandblom.

They will play their next game this Saturday in Duxbury at 6:00 p.m.

The gymnastics team lost its first meet December 22 against Norwell High. Coach Ruth Ann Sargent reports she had only nine girls available because of to vacation travel.

"We usually don't have our first meet until January," said the former gym team member. Consequently, she had to "stretch" her available girls to compete in all four of the gymnastic events.

Rockland forfeited Tuesday night's scheduled meet. That town has been able to muster only four girls for its team this year and may have to drop out of the season, reducing the number of competitions for all towns.

A weak point this year is that the oldest of the 14 team members are sophomores. "It's a young team...in the building stages," said Sargent. The possible sidelining of Melissa Rousseau due to a recent back injury, possibly suffered as the result of last month's competition, is another cloud on the horizon of a team which has been in a losing streak for the last few years.

The good news is that Sargent sees a turnaround in the team, which she claims last year showed her disrespect but this season is showing initiative by setting up the gym equipment on their own and starting warm-up exercises without being told.

Heartened by their new attitude, Sargent hired a choreographer with her own money to help the girls plan their floor exercise routines and is encouraging them to train year-round instead of just seasonally.

Sargent looks forward to last year's state finalist Michelle Hartley, a sophomore, to qualify for the finals again. Tara Gallagher and co-captain Liz Buckley are also doing well this year, she said.

In basketball, the boys varsity team is 5-1 having lost to Waterville, Maine during a game this past Christmas. The leading scorer was senior Bryan Edwards, who has averaged 30 points a game this season.

The team has beaten Hull, East Bridgewater, Sandwich and Norwell, the last game having ended in double overtime.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton calls Edwards the "best basketball player in the state." Edwards has already accepted an athletic scholarship to Boston College.

Two other leading scorers on the team are seniors Matt Maloney, 6' 2", and Michael Smith at 6' 5". Both play forward. Chatterton also has commendations for guards David Schultz and Jay Marsac.

The boys junior high school team lost its first game of the season December 17 to Hull by eleven points. Seventh-grader Sheldon Morgan led the team by scoring ten points, with 8th grader Billy Murphy scoring six. Temporary coach Robert Shultz also commended the playing of seventh grader Doug Ellinger.

Shultz, who once played on the junior high basketball team himself, expects Murphy to become a team leader.

There are no final playoffs for junior high school teams, which Shultz calls "a shame." However, there is a purpose to the Jr. High basketball teams.

"This is where they refine their skills and prepare themselves to play on the varsity" and have fun at the same time, said the Cohasset High School graduate.

"The numbers of boys playing basketball between seniors and the 8th grade aren't as great as years past. These kids are going to be looked upon in a couple of years to lead the [varsity] team," he continued.

One thing Shultz does regret is the reduced number of opposing teams available to play, since many towns eliminated their junior high school teams after the implementation of Proposition 2 1/2.

This accounts for the relatively late date of the team's first game, whereas the schoolboy basketball season usually begins the first Saturday after Thanksgiving.

He also wishes the team had a regular coach. In the meanwhile, he and Anthony Bonano, parent of team player Tony Bonano, are coaching the 25 boys.

Bonano, a Hull school teacher, calls the team "eager and energetic, good listeners. Blow the whistle once and you can't hear a dribble."

Both men have coached many of these same players in the town's recreational basketball program.

The girls varsity basketball team is 5-2, having lost to Plymouth at East Bridgewater Dec. 21. The team is tied for first place in the South Shore League with the town of Sandwich, according to coach Bill Fallon.

The girls have beaten teams from Sandwich, Hull, Holbrook, and Hingham, the last town having been played at the Christmas Tournament Championship.

Senior Marge Murphy is the leading scorer, averaging 12 points a game as forward. Forward Cindy Spooner and guard Liz O'Leary have averaged 10 points a game.

Unfortunately, Spooner suffered a knee injury and consequently missed a few games. Murphy missed two games with an ankle injury.

Fallow said he thinks the team may have lost to East Bridgewater because Murphy could not play on account of her injury and it was Spooner's first game after knee surgery.

The two are South Shore league All-Stars and were All-Scholastic last year.

Fallon calls Kristin Ellinger his "best defensive player."

The team is only one game behind where it was last year and Fallon expects the girls will qualify for the state tournament again this season and compete for the league title.

His disadvantage is that this year's team contains younger players who "don't have as much experience as [the team] a year ago," he said.

"We've been improving steadily and by February we'll have a good basketball team," he added.

The girls junior high basketball team has lost their only game so far this season to Hull, according to coach Larry C. Keenan. Catie Beggan was the leading scorer on both sides, with Bridget Leung also making her share of the baskets. Keenan also commended Michelle Woodland for a good game.

Keenan said that though he is intent on winning, he hopes every one of the 15 girls on the team will have a chance to play at least once this season.

Obituaries

Eve Duggan

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 5 in Immaculate Conception Church, East Weymouth, for Eve (Dittoe) Duggan, 48, who died Jan. 1 after a long illness. Burial was in St. Paul's Cemetery.

Mrs. Duggan was coordinator of high school religious education at Immaculate Conception Church.

She was a teacher in the Cleveland and Washington school systems before moving to Hingham 20 years ago.

She was born in Cleveland and was a 1960 graduate of St. John's College in Cleveland.

She leaves her husband, Dr. Paul J. Duggan; two sons, Frank Duggan and Michael Duggan; and two daughters, Beth Duggan and Meg Duggam all of Hingham; three brothers, Michael Dittoe of Dallas, Richard Dittoe of South Bend, Ind., and Patrick Dittoe of Ohio; a sister, Mary Kelley of Texas, and several nieces and nephews.

Memorial donations may be made to the Religious Education Porgram, c/o Immaculate Conception Church, 1199 Commercial St., East Weymouth, 02189, or to the gynecology/oncology department of New England Medical Center, c/o Dr. Harrison Ball, Harrison Avenue, Boston, 02118.

David D. Cuddahy

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 5 in St. Anthony's Church for David D. Cuddahy Sr., 51, who died Jan. 2 at Carney Hospital after a long illness. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Born in South Boston and a graduate of South Boston High School, Mr. Cuddahy was a retired Boston firefighter.

He was appointed to Ladder Co. 2 in South Boston in February, 1969 and transferred to Ladder Co. 41 in Brighton in May, 1974 which was a month before he retired.

Mr. Cuddahy was a member of the Boston Firefighters Union and was a former member of the Boston Fire Department Drill Team.

A member of the George Mealy American Legion Post, he was a Marine Corps sergeant during the Korean War.

He leaves his wife, Ann (Mahoney) Cuddahy; two sons, Daniel T. Cuddahy of Cohasset and Corporal David D. Cuddahy Jr. with the U.S. Army in West Germany; a daughter, Kimberly Ann Cuddahy of East Boston; his mother, Christina (McInerney) Cuddahy of South Boston; two brothers, William Cuddahy and Roy Cuddahy, both of South Boston; and two sisters, Christina Frew of Roslindale and Beverly Sandri of South Boston. He was the son of the late Joseph A. Cuddahy and the brother of the late Donald F. Cuddahy.

Louise E. Conroy

A funeral Mass was celebrated Jan. 4 in St. Anthony's Church for Louise E. (Grassie) Conroy, 81, who died last week at South Shore Hospital. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mrs. Conroy was a former chairman of the Cohasset Board of Registrars, and was chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Town Committee for 30 years and a member for 50 years.

She was an operator for the New England Telephone Co. for 45 years until her retirement in 1968. Mrs. Conroy was a member of the Telephone Pioneers of America.

A charter member of the George H. Mealy Post 118 Auxiliary, she was a life member of the American Legion.

Mrs. Conroy was a Cohasset native.

Wife of the late Frank X. Conroy, she leaves a son, Joseph S. Conroy of Cohasset; a daughter-in-law, Mary Leahy Conroy of Cohasset; and a sister, Muriel F. Trapp of Hull. She was the sister of the late Grace R. Reddy.

Memorial donations may be made to the American Cancer Society, 47 W. Elm St., Brockton, 02401.

Mormon Church services

The sermon subject of the Jan. 10 service at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner Street, will be "Enduring to the End." Brother John Abell, of Newport, R.I., a member of the Stake High Council, will be the speaker.

By themselves, the Ten Commandments might be simple enough to follow, but for Latter-day Saints the Lord has given instructions to also keep "the Word of Wisdom", and to fulfill all teaching callings and service to our fellow man, and, to quote, "endure to the end." Not an easy lot. But, we know, that when we are in the service of others we are in the service of our Heavenly Father — and rich blessings are insured.

The Family Worship Hour begins at 9 a.m. and is followed by scripture study and classes for youths, children and adults, until twelve noon. Visitors are welcome to attend any of these meetings.

New faculty members join art center

As the New Year rings in, the South Shore Art center unveils a host of new courses within its education department and introduces several new faculty members.

Such courses as Drawing on the Artist Within, Defining Style and Expression, Tapestry Weaving, Clay for Adults, Masters of Photography and others will make their debut during the winter term which begins January 18 at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. All prospective students are invited to come to the Center's annual winter open house on Sunday, January 10 from 1-3 p.m.

During the open house sculptor Walter Horak will demonstrate wood sculpting and artist Lee Shortridge will demonstrate creative anatomy drawing. Visitors will have a chance to meet Center instructors, learn about the educational opportunities at the Center and attend the opening of the Janet Blagdon invitational exhibit in the main gallery and the faculty exhibit in the Margaret Dillon Members Gallery.

Susan Rodgerson's Defining Style and Expression is a painting workshop designed to help expand personal style through brave experimentation. Often an artist reaches a comfortable technical level and stays at that level. This workshop will attempt to bring participants to new heights in their work. The course meets Tuesdays from 7:30-10 p.m. beginning Jan. 19.

Also new to the Department of Drawing and Painting is Lis Wyman's course Drawing on the Artist Within. The program of study for this course will be based on Betty Edwards' book Drawing on the Artist Within. Wyman will work with students to develop new strategies for thinking as they study the art of seeing. This course meets Fridays from 9:30 to noon beginning Jan. 22.

A third new course to the Painting and Drawing Department is Life Drawing/ Artistic Anatomy taught by Lee Shortridge. She will work with students on using anatomy and structure as a guide to drawing a model. She will incorporate into the course a study of the Old Masters and their techniques of life drawing. Shortridge who is new to the faculty has studied in both Florence and Rome. Her course meets on Saturdays from 9:30 to 12:30 p.m. starting Jan. 23.

Basic drawing courses offered on the winter schedule include Albert Abany's Workshop for People Who Can't Draw a Straight Line, David Tandy's Introductory Drawing and Mary Lizotte's Draw and Paint in Watercolor and Acrylic. Painting courses include Virginia Avery's Watercolor for all levels of ability, Tandy's Introductory Painting and Abany's Oil and Acrylic Painting. Katherine Smit will teach a Basic Portrait Course and Clement Micarelli will teach Portraiture for intermediate and advanced artists.

The 3-D Department expands to offer new courses. Working together Judy Rossman and George Dalton will teach Clay for Adults on Tuesday evenings from 7:-9:30 p.m. starting Jan. 19. Alternating the weeks, Rossman will work with handbuilding techniques and Dalton with intensive wheel throwing. Individual attention will begiven to all skill levels and students will be able to glaze finished pieces. Dalton is currently an M.A. candidate at Bridgewater State College and Rossman is on the faculty at Massachusetts College of Art.

Sculptor Walter Horak will teach Carved Wood Sculpture on Thursday evenings from 7:30-9:30 starting Jan. 21. Beginning with drawings and/or clay models, students will develop a design and during the course complete the piece in wood. Horak's course is designed for all ability levels.

Weaver Joan Hausrath will teach Tapestry Weaving using the Gobelin techniques of weaving. She will have students construct portable tapestry looms in the first class to be used for weaving small pieces during the remaining periods. Her course meets on Mondays from 9:30 to noon.

Massachusetts College of Art graduate Audrey Colby will teach Collage/ Assemblage on Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. She will explore methods, history and ideas of collage through class projects, home assignments and slides. Individuals will combine found materials with painting and drawing techniques to create artwork.

Artist Berj Kailian will teach Monotype/ Collage on Fridays, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Her workshop will utilize a combination of collage techniques and the printing press to help students explore their individual creativitiy as they work towards a greater self-expression.

A non-historical slide course Understanding the Visual Arts taught by Judith Hanhisalo is designed to promote a deeper understanding of art. By learning "the language" students can engage in dialogues with art giving them a deeper appreciation of what they are seeing in a work of art. The winter term will focus on painting and the course will meet on Thursdays from 7:30-9 p.m.

The Center's half-day tours to galleries and museums continues on Thursdays once a month with the next one on January 21. Louise Kalish conducts tours of contemporary art in Boston and Cambridge galleries and museums. Participants are asked to meet at 10 a.m. at the designated facility.

Additional courses are taught in the photography department and the young artist department. Advanced registration is required for all courses.

For a complete listing of all educational opportunities and to enroll in courses, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center's programs are supported, in part, by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Photography course at art center

Don't let your camera intimidate you; learn the ins and outs of good photography by enrolling in a South Shore art Center photography course.

The Center's photography courses are designed to take amateur photographers beyond the automatic setting and to teach them how to use the creative features of a camera.

Camera buffs wanting to learn more about the Center's photography department are invited to the Winter Open house on Sunday, Jan. 10 from 1-3 p.m. at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. The Center's photo classes are co-sponsored by Noble's Camera Shop.

Photographer Tom Hannon will teach Beginning Photography on Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. starting January 18. The basic components of the course include camera mechanics, lenses, accessories, films, composition and natural and artificial lighting. He will conduct one field trip so students may have actual on location shooting experience.

Paul Fortin will teach the intermediate level photography course where students will concentrate on various subjects including portrait, people and landscape. Emphasis in this course is on how to train the student's eye and to learn to evaluate the work. This course meets on Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. starting Jan. 20.

Fortin will also introduce a new series, The Masters of Photography in which he will emphasize the visual influence of photographers Edward Weston, Eugene Atget, Paul Strand, Henri Cartier-Bresson and Walker Evans. Subject matter will include documentary, landscape and portrait. The course meets on Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

Learning to develop one's own film can be fun and rewarding. Photographer Amy Whorf will teach Beginning Darkroom on Wednesdays from 7:00-10:00 p.m. She will cover step-by-step instruction in basic darkroom skills beginning with "how the camera works." Students will learn how to develop black and white film, how to enlarge and print, how to burn and dodge and how to mount and matt finished work.

Once photographers have mastered the darkroom procedures, they can, for a fee, use the Center's darkroom for two-hour sessions. The fee includes darkroom chemicals.

The Center's photography courses offer photographers the chance to learn to take their camera settings off automatic and to reach out and capture a moment in history, creatively. All Center courses require advanced registration.

For further information or to enroll call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported, in part, by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Gourmet Guild meeting to be held

The January meeting of the Scituate Gourmet-Decorator Guild will be held Tuesday January 12 at 8 p.m., at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

The meeting, which is entitled, "A Quilt in a Day" will feature a beautiful display of many, different, colorful quilts made by committee members.

These quilts were created at an all day workshop under the direction of Irene Craig of Hingham.

Members of this committee will explain how using a sewing machine, precut materials, and Seminole Indian Patterning, you too, can construct your own unique and beautiful quilt in ONE DAY!

History of seafaring piracy found in archives

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

An unusual tale of an early Cohasset-owned merchant sailing vessel engaged in activities bordering on seafaring piracy recently came to light in the maritime archives of the Cohasset Historial Society.

An old hand-written paper was found, telling of an 18th century sea voyage which led to stolen Spanish silver and then to a Caribbean island prison. The writer of the paper was Benjamin Pratt, Senior; the vessel was his great-grandfather Aaron Pratt's "Three Sisters", an early Cohasset sloop, its Shipmaster of piratical nature was Capt. Zebulon Wade, and the year was 1750. According to the author Benjamin Pratt, the sloop "Three Sisters" actually was owned by Cohasseters Aaron Pratt (born in 1690), Stephen Stoddard (born in 1674) and Isra l Whitcomb (born in 1700), and an otherwise unidentified Mrs. Binney "of Nantastick". The 75 ton sloop, locally built and on its maiden voyage, left local waters in late spring of 1750, presumably bound on a trading voyage to southern ports. "Three Sisters" soon was in sight of the dreaded shoals of Cape Hatteras, North Carolina. There, the ship's crew spotted a vessel in distress, shipwrecked on the treacherous sands near the Cape. The wrecked vessel was found to be Spanish, and its crew was still on board. Capt. Wade and "Three Sisters" "fell in" with the Spanish ship and found her to be carrying a cargo of silver bars, coined. Her voyage had originated in Spain's American colonies, called "New Spaine", and her destination had been "Old Spaine" in Europe. The ship was carrying part of the Spanish treasure famed in both the Old and New Worlds.

A second vessel soon arrived on the scene of the wreck, and both Captains struck a bargain with the doomed vessel's Master, each agreeing to take aboard part of the silver treasure, and to transport it to the original destination in Old Spaine. Capt. Wade's "Three Sisters" took on board seventy tons of silver bars, and the remainder was placed aboard the other vessel, whose identity is not given. Unknown to the Spanish Captain, the Masters of both ships had already reached an agreement not to take the silver to Spain, but to take it to a West Indies Island and bury it for their own future use. Thus is was that "Three Sisters" and its Captain Zebulon Wade soon arrived at "Statia" (St. Eustacius, today an island of the Netherlands Antilles), and part of the silver was buried. The piratical venture soon was discovered by the authorities, however, when the second vessel became stranded on a sand bar and was boarded. Before he could bury all of the silver, Capt. Wade was "found, taken, and put into Jail"

Benjamin Pratt's story continues, "Wade by having so much silver managed to get out of Jail and came home but the vessel was detained and became a total loss to her owners." It then appeared that the two like-minded ship's Captains, by now apparently experienced in the ways of pirates, "became adventurers all over the world." The buried silver was recovered by the "Spanyards". Benjamin Pratt reported that a second vessel was sent to Statia by Mrs. Binney, one of the owners of "Three Sisters". Aboard was Stephen Stoddard's "negro man" named Mingo, who had been on "Three Sisters" and had helped Capt.Wade bury the silver originally. Mingo and the second ship returned home empty handed. "It was reported," wrote Benjamin Pratt, "that the Spanyards had ploughed and dug the island near all over and had found probably the most of it."

The Cohasset owners of "Three Sisters", Aaron Pratt, Stephen Stoddard and Israel Whitcomb were neighbors residing on Beechwood Street. The story of Capt. Zebulon Wade and the sloop "Three Sisters" had been passed down through several generations of Aaron Pratt's descendants before Benjamin wrote it down. He reported taking down the story of the ill-fated voyage from brothers Henry and Benjamin Pratt, grandsons of Aaron, who, he wrote, had often heard their father Thomas recount the tale. Aaron's son Thomas had recalled having helped his father "haul the timber to build the vessel, and she was builded over in Briggs' building yard being on the Scituate side of the Gulf Stream on Turner's pasture."

As for "Three Sisters", her first voyage for her owners also was her last, for she never returned to her original home port. Of Capt. Zebulon Wade, he was known to have moved from his native Scituate to "Carrolina", where his son later was found to be a Ship's Pilot on the North Carolina rivers.

In writing of the voyage of "Three Sisters", Benjamin Pratt notes having before him several bills of account charged to the sloop, including one from Charleston dated June 28, 1750, from a J. Peck, apparently for supplies or services, in the amount of 17 Pounds 12 Shillings and 10 Pence, Sterling. This story written perhaps a century and a half ago, was recently found among papers in the account book of Marshall Pratt's store, Beechwood Street. The tale of Capt. Zebulon Wade and the sloop "Three Sisters" is unusual, for it dates from the earliest years of Cohasset's maritime ear, a time from which few records have survived and of which little is known.

Puppet show at Community Center

The Cohasset Community Center will have a puppet show for very young children on Friday, Jan. 15, at 10:30 a.m. The title of the main story is "The Three Little Pigs."

Very young children derive the greatest enjoyment from a puppet show designed especially for them. Above all, they love stories with familiar and beloved characters. With this in mind, Pat Boylan, noted New England puppeteer and teacher, has put together an enchanting puppet program sure to delight and stimulate the imagination of youngsters ranging in age from preschool to first grade. Each of Ms. Boylan's stories is seven or eight minutes long and is performed with breezy informality which brings it newly alive.

She performs three or four of these stories using colorful hand puppets and chats informally about how "you can be a puppeteer too" between each play. The result is a thirty-five minute program of superb creative fun for very young audiences. . .with that added something a television screen cannot give; an opportunity to visit "backstage" after the show. meet the puppets and ask questions.

Admission for the show is $2 per person payable at the door. No reservations required. The Cohasset Community Center is located at 3 North Main St.

Sewer pact may be finalized . . .

funding "wherever we go," DeSantis explained. "For every one dollar we put into this system, comes another nine dollars of state and federal money. This will result in substantial improvements to the Hull facility."

The Cohasset-Hull connection plan includes the construction of a force main into Hull and the construction of a pumping station in the West Corner that will serve Hingham and Cohasset and an area of Hull that is presently unsewered.

Whatever the construction costs, the state and the feds will kick in 90 percent of the amount because of their commitment to Cohasset, he noted.

"Because of our program," he explained, "Hull is getting a a lot of sewer extension work free."

As part of the negotiated agreement, Cohasset will pay about $130,000 a year for 30 years toward the operating costs of the Hull wastewater treatment plant. In addition, Cohasset will be gaining a sludge treatment facility at the same cost currently provided Hull customers. All septic waste from Hull is dumped at the plant for $50 per ton, as opposed to the $100 fee for out-of-towners.

DeSantis figued with about 1000 loads per year from Cohasset, Hull is guaranteed an extra $50,000 income from sludge disposal.

The sewer commission chairman noted that a special town meeting is necessary to appropriate the money for the design of this system. And because it requires some bonding, a two-thirds majority vote is necessary.

Although optimistic that an agreement will soon be reached, DeSantis noted the commission will not be dispondent if negotiations fail. "If there is no agreement with Hull it will be difficult, but we're prepared to walk away if that's necessary," he said. "If there is no agreement, we'd wish to expand our present plant where it is and sewer the same service area as we planned with the Hull design."

we'd like to press the state for some design money so we can get started on that June deadline."

"I've always been pretty optimistic about the chances for an agreement with Hull," DeSantis explained. "But negotiations did not proceed as fast as I thought. Negotiations are now going relatively well, although we have had some difficulty reaching an agreement."

DeSantis and Hull officials are now publicly stating that an agreement is close at hand - just in time for a scheduled Jan. 25 meeting with state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) officials. "We have to walk into Boston with an agreement in hand. That's what they're expecting," DeSantis stated.

The local officials are so confident of a completion of the agreement, both Hull and Cohasset sewer commissions have authorized their engineers to submit answers to a number of questions posed by the state regarding the agreement. "We really delayed the answers," DeSantis said, "because I didn't want to waste any money until I felt an agreement was very close."

Cohasset and Hull are in a particular rush to finalize an agreement because there will be no 90 percent state and federal funding after this fiscal year. Cohasset is currently on a priority eligibility list for that funding.

"It's going to be difficult to get this agreement all worked out," he said. "But that's what we have to do. I feel confident that the benefits to each town are great. The major points have been settled, but there are some significant issues to be resolved.

"Both communities want this and we'd be fools in Hull or Cohasset if we didn't. But if we are unsatisfied or if there are significant parts the town finds unattractive, then we would not be reluctant to walk away. It's not something I wish to happen, but we are prepared to do that."

Negotiations perked up in mid-summer, according to the chairman who said Hull first had to attend to its own problems before adding Cohasset to its list. "Now that things are straightened up in Hull, they are able to assign their energies to this agreement," he said.

The major impetus for Hull to accept Cohasset into its facility is the promise of 90 percent construction called the shutoff "blackmail."

Under the agreement, town officials are hopeful this kind of confrontation with EOCD will not reoccur.

"We have assurances from the state that the old bat-the-town over-the-head approach will not be used," said planning board member Robert H. Sturdy in an interview., Sturdy has objected to strict enforcement of the anti-snob zoning law contained in Chapter 40B of the Commonwealth's statutes, whereby developers are allowed a streamlined review process to build developments containing low-income units in towns which do not contain a certain percentage of affordable housing.

"The town is not about to get raped by developers putting up apartment houses in the guise of low-income housing," said Sturdy. He said the town would rather sponsor housing to be kept permanently affordable, rather than 40B-backed developments which revert to market-rate use after approximately 20 years.

The planning board and the housing authority want the emphasis on housing for the young and elderly, not on housing for large famililes, as EOCD would like.

Sturdy wants all units administered by the town filled 75 percent with present or one-time Cohasset residents.

Is this possible, given that selection is state-wide and gives preference to unfortunates such as the homeless and abused women over local residents?

"It can be, if the town is willing to pay for it," said Humphreys, who suggested meeting the 75 percent goal with state-funded units alone would not be possible.

He cited town-owned land behind the South Shore Music Circus as one possible site for the housing, though it may be difficult to perk.

Many officials claim they support the state's push for the construction of scattered site housing but resent being coerced into it when the town, they say, does not have the money for the projects.

"I'm delighted that they have been able to straighten that out" said Rep. Murray about the impasse over the housing agreement. However, she added that she is angered that "If we don't comply with what they [EOCD] consider is the [reasonable] percentage, then we are forced to accept what they say. They're telling the town to get town owned land..they haven't been able to perk, " she said, citing town land behind the new Stop & Shop on Route 3A.

"Everytime you go to the state to build, they don 't have the money, but they keep coming back and saying 'you haven built anything' ."

St. Mary's services

Parishioners of all ages of St. Mary of the Assumption Parish, Hull, are invited to be part of its Worship Committee, to help plan meaningful liturgies. Committee meets at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 11 and Jan. 25 at St. Ann's Church Hall, Lewis and Samoset Streets.

Also, Religious Education Committee meets at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 14 at the home of Terri Cogliano.

Vo-tech committee won't accept budget jump

In a three to two vote, the South Shore Regional School Committee directed Dr. Clifford W. Easton, Superintendent, to submit a budget with no more than a six percent increase over last year's $3.9 million budget. The superintendent will have to cut $55,000 from the original budget he proposed.

"There's nobody representing any of our towns who wouldn't want to vote in the budget as is," said John J. Doyle, committee member from Rockland. "But we have taxpayers to watch out for, and we must hold down the taxes."

Committee members from Hanover, Abington and Rockland, towns that are facing serious budget problems, voted to limit increases to six percent. The superintendent asked for an increase of 7.5 percent over last year's budget due to established salary increases of nine percent.

"This six percent cut would take a big hit into operations and equipment," said Dr. Easton. "You have to determine whether you can take those kinds of hits without affecting the program.

"A 7.5 percent increase could provide the services we need," he said. "Together, we can fight for the quality of the school system and the quality of education for our youngsters."

Committee members have been discussing the budget since November. Department representatives presented committee members with their proposed budgets and their rationale for the proposals.

"My town has been gracious to us over the last few years," said Dennis P. Blackwell, Hanover committee member. "Now, their cup is empty, and they are in dire straits. There's a time to grow and then, there's a time to sit back. This is the time to sit back."

Peripheral to budget talks is discussion on how to recruit more students to the vocational technical school. Charles W. Broadhead, President of the Communications Support Group, Inc., of Ithaca, N.Y., presented the committee with a public relations strategy called VokePro, used by vocational schools across the country.

The campaign, estimated to cost $6,500 at start-up, would include consulting, guidance and a public relations plan. Committee members believe such a campaign for the school is a necessary recruitment tool.

"We need to do some public relations in-house, and we need to combine that with outside consultants," said Robert L. Molla, Jr., committee chairman. "Public relations is of top priority to the committee."

A drop in enrollment and image problems would be addressed with the campaign. According to student committee member Kevin Gallagher, there is a false impression that the school does not offer quality courses that prepare students for a career or further schooling.

"I think students in the fifth, sixth and seventh grades need exposure to the wonders of the trades," said Doyle.

The committee instructed Broadhead to prepare to plan and an estimate for review in a month. They want to put the plan into effect by late February or early March.

Recruitment plans will also include making an audiovideo tape to be used on television, in lectures and as a promotional tool. Stephen Farguhar, a committee member from Scituate, with the assistance of John Kosko, a teacher at SSVTHS, will go forward with a plan to create a 30-minute audiovideo tape of school programs. A 15-minute tape will be excerpted from the longer version and used for school presentations in the lower grades.

The tape will focus on shop classes, graduates of the school, employees and students. American Cable Systems will provide production advice and facilities. Kosko hopes to see a rough edit by February.

Registration for community center

Registration has begun for January classes at the Cohasset Community Center.

Cake decorating with Alice McWilliams will meet Tuesdays from 6:30 - 8:30 p.m. for five weeks starting Jan. 26. Come and learn the fine art of decorating cakes.

The Old China Trade, 1784-1842, a fascinating and neglected period in American history is colorfully recreated in a comprehensive presentation given by Ellen Woolf. This class meets from 1:00 - 2:30 p.m. for three weeks starting Jan. 20.

All exercise classes will accept new participants in January. Classes are held daily from 9 - 10 a.m., Tuesday and Thursdays from 5 - 6 p.m., Wednesday from 7:30 - 8:30 p.m., and Saturday from 9 - 10:30 a.m.

This 90-minute cardiovascular workout includes warm-up, standing stretch, low impact aerobics, strengthening with rubber-bands, and final stretch and relaxation. This is appropriate for those without prior experience with aerobics and also people with less-than-perfect backs and knees. Advanced students will also get a good workout since each participant does movements which are comfortable for their own fitness level, using general ideas from the instructor.

Getting Smart About Investing is a course conducted by Michael McNamara on Mondays from 7:30 - 9 p.m. for eight weeks starting February 1.

This course covers things you should know before you write the check. Basic types of investments are covered including stocks, bonds, mutual funds, unit investment trusts, annuities, and limited partnerships. Investment characteristics, risks, and rewards will be examined. Beginning and intermediate investors should find the class helpful and informative.

Revolutionize your sweater knitting. This intensive four-week workshop offers experienced knitters freedom from pattern reading. The sweater sampler workshop takes you through design possibilities and the basic construction for seamfree raglan sweaters that may be knit of any yarn of your choice, in any style, to your own guage. This class is scheduled for Tuesdays from 9 a.m. - 12 p.m. for four weeks starting Jan. 19.

CPR (Cardio-Pulmonary Resuscitation) will be given Jan. 27, Wednesday from 7 - 11 p.m. Emergency resuscitation techniques for cardiac and respiratory arrest are covered in this course, as well as procedures to alleviate airway obstructions. Upon successful completion of this 4 hour course, you will receive a certificate of completion set up by the standards of the American Heart Association.

All classes must be pre-registered. Telephone registration will be accepted but is not considered confirmed until the fee is received.

Please call 383-0088 to inquire about classes or to receive a brochure.

Harbor moorings, Bailey Creek floats okayed

By David Foley
Mariner staff

Selectmen have agreed to settle two cases involving mooring rights in the harbor.

Dec. 21, selectmen agreed to sign a proposed settlement in a dispute between the town and five lobstermen.

Attorney Chester Janiak, who represents the five men, offered to settle the matter with the town. The selectmen voted unanimously Dec. 21 to accept the agreement.

According to the December agreement, Harbormaster Steven Osborne will assign Michael Ward, Thomas Lagrotteria, John Barrett, Jr., Dana Waitkus and Richard Morse a mooring for all months but June, July and August.

Also, notice of any commercial mooring assignment made from the date of the agreement through the end of 1990 will be posted for 90 days at the start of the assigned date.

In return, civil suits between the town and the fishermen will be dismissed.

Fisherman William R. Figueiredo will be allowed to place mooring floats in Bailey's Creek, according to special town counsel Mark G. DeGiacomo.

DeGiacomo confirmed information that selectmen voted to sign the five-page document which cancels the contempt of court complaint the town filed against Figueiredo in August of 1986 for placing the floats in violation of a court order.

The Parker Avenue resident first came into conflict with the town when the probate court, at the request of selectmen, issued a preliminary injunction prohibiting Figueiredo from placing any moorings or floats in the harbor.

Former harbormaster Harry Ritter had determined private moorings along Bailey's Creek would use up valuable town-owned mooring space and crimp harbor navigation.

Claiming to own the bottom of Bailey's Creek, Figueiredo fought the decision. But in Feburary of 1984, a probate court judge issued a permanent injunction against the floats.

Figueiredo placed floats there anyway. Rather than start a contempt of court hearing, the harbormaster made Figueiredo file an application to place the floats legally.

Ritter then denied his application and ordered Figueiredo to remove the floats. Figueiredo appealed the decision successfully to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

Scouts sense anti-American mood

Boy Scouts from other nations do not have to abide by as many strict rules in Scouting and are allowed to drink at an earlier age. But they must wait longer than their American counterparts to drive.

And some seem to dislike us.

These are among the many things three Cohasset Boy Scouts learned at an international scouting jamboree held in Australia earlier this month.

Michael Lelecas, 17, his brother Nicholas, 17 and William Anstead, 16, returned in the wee hours of Tuesday morning after spending 25 hours in the air winging their way from Sydney to Logan Airport.

The two Eagle Scouts and Anstead, a Life Scout, are members of Troop 28 whose Scoutmaster is Merle Brown. The Lelecases are seniors at Cohasset High School, where Bill is a junior.

The trio left Boston Dec. 18 with a contingent of other New England Boy Scouts bound for a two-week visit to the Land Down Under. After a stopover in Hawaii, they flew to Melbourne for Christmas.

They found the Australians friendly people who would walk right up to them and ask about the scouting jamboree.

In Melbourne, "we were popular there. It was just [when] we got to Scout camp that we were not so popular," said a jet-lagged Michael through bleary eyes during an interview Tuesday afternoon.

School budget increase despite student decline

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The proposed school budget for next fiscal year is $5,113,006 - a 6.9 percent increase over last year.

Supt. Stephen Hart presented a summary of the proposed Fiscal Year 1989 budget to the school committee and advisory committee subcommittee Monday night. The budget, he explained, is $329,095 higher than last year for a school population that is expected to drop by 24 students.

Because of a decreasing number of students who elect a foreign language at the high school, one staff position in that department will be eliminated. That is the only teaching position expected to be dropped next year.

The proposed budget is level-funded, he said, except for the increases in salaries, special education tuition and insurance.

Following tradition, the largest increase in the budget is in the salary account which is controlled by collective bargaining contracts. Supt. Hart explained that $230,000 of the $329,095 increase, or approximately five percent of the total 6.9 percent increase, is estimated salary increases for next year.

"I hope the budget tonight strikes a balance and meets the needs of the schools," Supt. Hart stated. "Although there are additional items I'd like to see in this budget, after working on the budget we made reductions of $130,000 on requests made (by school principals).

Those cuts equal three percent of the total proposed budget, he noted.

He also explained that another increase of $33,000 is because of a hike in special education tuitions to private schools. Public school systems are mandated by the state to pay the entire tuition of special education students in

Residents to ask for nature trails along town land

By David Foley
Mariner staff

A former urban planner is organizing a citizens' group to develop nature trails on a section of town-owned land near the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

Deborah S. Cook of 28 King Street will meet with the school committee Jan. 25 to seek permission for volunteers to sculpt trails out of a portion of the approximately 65 acres of thickets and wetlands between the two schools.

Cook had an informational meeting Jan. 5 with teachers and administrators from both schools.

"The reaction I've gotten so far about the idea is total excitement," said Cook in an interview last week.

Although she admitted that "this idea's been kicked around for thiry years," the former Houston land planner said she believes there is genuine support now in town for the idea

"The concept is to really have it be self-supporting. We'd like to see it as a barnraising effort, where people come help make the trails," said Cook.

With her son Trevor in the fifth grade at Deer Hill and her daughter Whitney attending Osgood, Cook has a personal interest in the project.

The first trails would be circular paths from each of the schools. Because of fears that lone school children could be attacked, no interconnecting paths between the schools are planned.

"Whatever we design, safety will be foremost in our consideration," said Cook.

Eventually, a boardwalk over wetlands near the Osgood School and a fitness trail with various stations for calisthenics could be built as well.

The trails are meant to aid school children in their Nomination papers available

Nomination papers for the town election April 9, will be available at the Town Clerk's office starting Jan. 8.

Last day for candidates to obtain nomination papers will be Thursday, Feb. 25, until 5 p.m.

All nomination papers shall be submitted to the registrars of voters for certification of names and addresses on or before Monday, Feb. 29, until 5 p.m. at the Town Clerk's office.

Positions that will be available for nomination are as follows: Selectmen — one position for three (3) years; Assessor — one position for three (3) years; School committee — two positions for three (3) years each; Trustees of Paul Pratt Memorial Library — three positions for three (3) years each; Board of health — one position for three (3) years each; Planning board — one position for five (5) years; Water commissioners — one position for three (3) years; Sewer commissioners — one position for three (3) years; Recreation commission — one position for five (5) years.

At least fifty signatures needed to have name placed on the ballot.

Music Circus sounds

The manangement of the South Music Circus have assured selectmen there will be no weeknight shows ending later than 11 p.m., and there will be a decrease in the number of performances from last year.

Seeking renewal of their annual entertainment license, outgoing manager Ron Rawson and new manager Edward Kasses told selectmen Monday night there will be only 62 performances this year as compared to 80 last year and an all-time high of 122.

Rawson , who has produced shows at the Music Circus for 20 years, faced an angry neighbor at Monday night's selectmen's meeting, and denied the charge that any of the shows last season had run until after 11 p.m.

"I don't really believe that there were never any shows that got out at 11," responded Janet McClure of 183 Sawyer Street.

When Kasses and Rawson told selectmen that some shows on Saturday might start as late as 9 p.m. and run until approximately 11:45 p.m., McClure protested.

"11:45 is very late to hear the racket that comes out of the Music Circus," she said, adding that "if I had a party in my yard at 11:45 the police would be there in 10 minutes to shut me down."

Kasses reassured her that the speakers at the tent would be aimed so as to least disturb the neighbors.

"I'm acutely aware of where the theatre is and that we have neighbors," he said at one point.

Rawson admitted that when autos are exiting the Circus grounds after one performance and others are entering for the next, traffic can be a "problem" at the intersection of Route 3A and Sohier Street.

This year, there will be few if any repeat perfomances on one day because the Circus is finding it "more difficult to find artists who're worth two shows," he said.

Selectmen will consider granting the license after they have read the summer schedule.

Town warrant opened

The warrant for the annual town meeting is now open.

Town departments may submit articles for the warrant into selectmen's office by Jan. 28.

Citizens' petition articles will be accepted for the town meeting warrant until Feb. 2.

No town engineer

The planning board will recommend that the town not hire a town enginecr but use consultants instead.

The board will make the finding in response to a questionnaire which the Town Government Structure Committee is circulating to various boards in town with development oversight.

By using consultants, "we can get people who are expert in [a particular] field without getting someone who has to be expert in every field," said planning board member Daniel C. Cotton at Wednesday night's board meeting.

"I think the days of the town engineer...are really numbered," agreed planning board chairman Robert H. Sturdy, who cited the complexity of civil engineering in light of stricter zoning and pollution regulations.

Conservation Commission member Merle S. Brown agreed that one man cannot handle the job, but would prefer the town designate one consulting engineering firm to handle its needs "so we don't get conflicting information" as has happened in the past.

"I would be surprised if what they found warranted the hiring of a full-time engineer," said Executive Secretary Donald Andrew of the committee's study.

Despite a similar discussion by the committee "a couple of years ago," it did not file a town meeting article to fund such a position a the time, said Andrew.

Bates runs for office

Lot E. Bates of Red Gate Lane fulfilled a promise he made last spring and took out nomination papers this week for a three-year seat on the Board of Sewer Commissioners.

Bates, who was defeated in his first campaign for public office last year by incumbent sewer commissioner Edward Guild, promised to "continue the fight."

This year's race is for a three-year seat on the commission currently held by Gary Vanderweil.

"I am seeking election because I told the people of this town I was interested in that position. I told them I would continue the fight and I am," the Cohasset native said. "This is one of the most important positions in town. We are promised a sewer plan every year, and nothing is being done, nothing has changed."

Five more firefighters denied

Selectmen did not approve Fire Chief Daniel F. Brock's request for four lieutenants and a deputy fire chief.

Chief Brock agreed to submit a budget which would ask for no more officers, despite his contention that whenever one of his four captains is not able to supervise a shift, firefighters fall behind their work schedule.

"It's not that the lack of a lieutenant causes the fire department to fall apart but that the presence of a lieutenant gets things to move along," said Brock Monday night.

The absence of an officer on duty "disrupts the chain of command, lowers the effectiveness of the shift and creates operational problems," Brock writes in his budget presentation to the town fathers.

Selectman Clifford Mitman, Jr. said he did not think the board should recommend that the town create the posiitons of four lieutenants merely for the "ten percent of the time when the captain is not there."

He asked Brock why the senior firefighters do not take the supervisory responsibility onto themselves.

"A senior firefighter will not take any initiative. He feels he's not an officer and doesn't have to make the men do any work," replied Brock.

Brock stressed that this is due to the nature of the organization, not any laziness on the part of his firefighters.

Selectmen also rejected the idea of paying senior firefighters extra for acting as the duty officer.

"We could do it, but once we did it, we'd be bound to do it all the time in the future," said executive secretary Donald Andrew in an interview the following day.

Selectmen also rejected Brock's request for $2,600 in video gear for the production of training tapes and $3,000 for a photocopier.

At current stafing levels, projected salary costs for the fiscal year beginning this July 1 ending June 30 in 1989 are $660,345.64, according to the chief's budget. The total budget request will amount to approximately $902,113 dollars.

With current staffing levels and without the addition of a second fire stataion, Brock estimated the town's homeowners' insurance rating may drop from a 4 to a 6, meaning an increase in premiums.

In other business, selectmen also recommended advisory committee acceptance of the conservation commission's $13,196 budget.

The board also gave their blessing to a request by Wire Department Supervisor Stephen F. Wigmore for $91,378.80 dollars. The current appropriation is $85,478.28 dollars.

Wigmore's request included $2,500 to re-furbish his department's 1981 Ford bucket truck, the "biggest lemon" Wigmore said he has seen in 20 years.

The first day it was picked up at the dealer, the front wheel "came half way off" and later there were "two electrical fires under the dash", transmision problems, difficulty starting in changing weather, the neccessary replacement of all brake linings and hoses, the radiator, heater core and a mysterious cracking of the windshield. The brakes on the truck also have a habit of releasing themselves, said Wigmore.

He has submitted a request to the capital budget committee for replacement the ill-fated vehicle's chassis and cab to be included in the 1990 fiscal outlay.

Selectmen also approved the approximately $45,180 budget of Harbormaster Steven Osborne, which includes the masonry work on the piers at Government Island and Margin Street as well as insulation of the drafty Harbormaster's office.

In other business, insurance committee members Sam Wakeman and chairman Galt Grant reported a 2 percent increase in the town's insurance, from $199,600 for the present fiscal year to $204,000 for the next. The insurace committee wold like an extra $6,000 for improved liability coverage.

The selectmen appointed Chartis Langmaid to the the South Shore Coalition's housing partnership committee.

Selectmen will appoint a total of between 7 and 9 committee members, according to Executive Secretary Andrew. Those intcrested should apply to him.

Planners need more plans from Bjorklund

By David Foley
Mariner staff

A Cohasset businessman backed down from his attempt Wednesday night to force a planning board vote on his long-delayed project.

It has been almost two years since J. Stephen Bjorklund of 15 Ledgewood Drive first filed a Notice of Intent to construct a driveway and office space at his home.

Because of special zoning considerations and the presence of nearby wetlands, the solar energy contractor had to change his design plans at least five times. By now, however, all town boards except the planning board have approved Bjorklund's application for 3,240 square feet of commercial space this year.

Wednesday marked the legal deadline for the planning board to make a decision. But Bjorklund admitted to planning board chairman Robert Sturdy that the blueprints before the board last week were not the latest version, which includes front and back stairs to the two-story garage and office building.

Sturdy reminded Bjorklund during the tense session that the solar energy contractor had been told "months ago" to provide updated blueprints.

"I think you owe us the correct plans," he said.

Bjorklund said he had submitted 10 copies of his most recent plans to the conservation commission, and and if they had not given them to the Planning Board "that's not my responsibility."

"What the conservation commission does with ten sets of plans is up to the conservation commission," shot back Sturdy.

Bjorklund insisted on a vote.

Apparently speaking for the board, member Daniel Cotton warned Bjorklund more than once that the panel would vote no.

"I suspect the board is willing to grant approval with contingencies...provided we see [the latest plans] spelled out," said Cotton. "We're not trying to be arbitrary."

Bjorklund did not answer for several moments.

"What exactly do you want to see on the plans?," he finally asked.

The board informed him it would need only to see the updated plans before taking a vote, then voted the continuance unanimously.

"You give him all these breaks...and he still does not appreciate it," said board member John O'Toole of Bjorklund's behavior.

In other business:

Fire Chief Daniel Brock has asked that a proposed cul-de-sac for a small housing development off Route 3A be widened for fire trucks.

The subidivision proposed by developer Paul Ferrini is just north of the Super Stop & Shop.

The chief asked the planning board in a Dec. 29 letter to require widening of the road to 15 feet and that a hydrant be moved so it will be 500 and not 1,500 feet from the furthest of three proposed single family homes.

The board will require the a 47-foot radius of the turnaround to accomodate the fire trucks and snowplows, according to chairman Sturdy.

Ferrini will appear before the board Jan. 20 after planning board engineering consultant Joseph Small has prepared new drainage calculations for the site.

camp at the jamboree site in Cataract Scout Park, about 40 minutes outside Sydney.

"They'd say he was too old and he doesn't know how to lead," said Michael. "You'd say 'why?' and they wouldn't be able to tell you," added Bill.

Many other Scouts also expressed anti-Reagan sentiments, according to the boys.

White South African Boy Scouts accused the American press of having a vendetta against their country and denied in what seemed to Nicholas a "prepared statement" any unfairness to that nation's millions of blacks who live under apartheid.

The quiet, bespectacled boy said he almost got into fistfights because of anti-American slurs directed at him as walked among the 15,000 Scouts gathered from 62 nations.

As the only group required to wear their unifroms every day, the American Scouts were easily identifiable.

Finally, during the closing ceremony, even the master of ceremonies got into the act by derisively predicting that the "rich" Americans would probably attend the next jamboree in Seoul, South Korea because they could afford to go.

Members of the Canadian contingent made similar comments at the ceremony, according to the boys.

Despite the barbs, the boys had fun rapelling, caving, and running a "commando course" called Challenge Valley.

They were also part of a group attempting to form the world's largest conga line in an attempt to win a place in the Guinness Book of World Records.

The activities were meant to give Scouts from different nations a chance to meet each other.

The boys found the Japanese and Indian Scouts among the friendliest, right after their Aussie counterparts.

"Just meeting the people, just talking to them, it was really interesting," said Michael, who met a Swedish scout who claimed his parents let him swear at home, as long as he did not direct his invectives at his family.

Over dinner one night at their campsite, Bill met Lord Michael Baden-Powell, grandson of the ex-British Army officer who founded the Scouting movement.

There were also camp guests from Denmark.

What were the foreign Scout's images of America?

"There was a McDonald's at every corner, I think they thought," said Michael.

It was due to this great Yankee tradition that the boys found relief from what they claimed was a monotonous diet of either mutton, chicken and salmon for lunch and dinner and either eggs or cornflakes for most breakfasts during their 10-day stay.

Yet, despite the cold showers, "flies like you wouldn't believe," rain, and temperatures which reached 114 degrees, the boys look forward to a more leasurely return trip to Australia.

To meet Australians.

Oil spill cost schools $39,000

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

December's oil spill from a 15,000 gallon heating tank at the high school cost the town about $39,000.

But Supt. Stephen Hart said the bright spot in this good news/bad news report is that the leak can be repaired and the tank will not have to be replaced.

At the school committee meeting Monday night, Supt. Hart said it would cost the town about $100,000 to replace the tank. But further monitoring of the 19-year-old tank indicated the leak could be repaired. An engineering firm was hired to determine how the oil seeped from the underground tank. Monitoring wells and a recovery well were dug into the soil which indicated there was no further contamination of the ground.

The advisory commmittee has agreed to pay the smaller contractors who helped clean the spill. But the major portion of the cleanup, which was conducted by Clean Harbors, will have to wait for special town meeting approval. Disposal of the soil will cost about $4,000, Supt. Hart told the committee.

In other business Monday night, the committee briefly reviewed a rough draft of the AIDS curriculum established by health coordinator Michael Gill along with the community health advisory committee.

The curriculum, which was devised for grades six through 12 will be reviewed in more detail when it is finalized. "There will be more suggested changes, and Mike will be working with teachers to establish a more detailed program," Supt. Hart stated.

Committee member Christopher Ford questioned whether he was "being prudish," noting the curriculum, "struck me as more information than I would want. How clinical should we get in the sixth grade?"

Supt. Hart agreed with his sentiments, but quickly added, "It's unfortunate this has to be done, but it would be naive of us to think it shouldn't be when you see what the reality is. We are not completely insolated here. The (community health advisory) committee had similar concerns."

Committee member Nancy Sandell noted that the body parts discussed in the curriculum guide "are those parts of the body affected when they go through puberty" - the age when students will be studying this subject.

"But it's the tone - it almost comes across that we accept that there is sexual activity. I almost feel it says between the lines that we know you are sexually active. I find that unsettling," Ford answered.

Supt. Hart noted, "That is where we rely heavily on our instructors. This is the reality we have to deal with. Not to deal with it is unrealistic. It's there." The superintendent also noted that before films are shown to the students, parental permission and knowledge of the presentation is required.

The school committee accepted with deep regret the resignation of Allan MacDonald, alternative school instructor at the high school. Although he previously told the administration of his plans to retire in March, Supt. Hart noted, "It was inevitable, but it's still difficult."

He continued, "It is not very often I can say that I don't think a person will ever be replaced. But he never will be replaced. He is totally committed to his students and his job. He's an unusual person."

Committee member Diana Kornet added, "He embodies the ideal of a professional." And committee member Barbara Bliss noted MacDonald's retirement will be a great loss to the Cohasset school system.

Nature trails . . .

natural science studies and a curriculum guide would be developed for teachers to help them make the fullest use of the paths.

Project backers feel the trails would be especially beneficial for students attending the summer program at the Osgood School who must now spend a lot of time in an unshaded playground.

In fact, Osgood teacher Faith Bowker and school principal Jack Creamer are among the supporters of the nature trails. They met with Cook Jan. 5. School Superintendent Stephen Hart and Deer Hill principal Kenneth Eckberg also attended.

Cohasset Garden Club president Phyllis Peck has hired naturalist David Clapp of the Massachusetts Audubon Society to study the school land. He will report on trailbuilding possibilities at the club's regular March meeting.

Working with Clapp will be Radcliffe landscape architectural student Margaret Cotter, whose son Nate attends second grade at Osgood.

Cotter hopes the "same public spirit which made possible the community and arts centers will make the nature trails possible.

Pending school committee approval of the proposal, Cook will have questionnaires sent home with children attending the schools to determine what kind of trails parents want and how much support they might wish to give the effort.

Cook has started to form a working commitee which includes Cotter, Bowker, and school committee member Barbara Bliss.

Bliss called the project "a terrific idea" and said she would be concerned only with any possible financial and legal liabilities to the town.

"It's not an idea that just came out of the woodwork," she advised, citing the work of committee members.

Cook and other committee members will meet with the school committee to discuss the nature trails proposal at 8 p.m. Monday, Jan. 25 in the home economics room at Cohasset High School.

School budget hike proposed . . .

that community who attend a private school.

There is an expected $12,000 increase in insurance and unemployment insurance next fiscal year. "Last year the town budget carried our unemployment insuarnce in the town budget," Supt. Hart said. "But this year they've put it back in our budget."

An overview of the entire budget showed the instructional account to encompass 73 percent of the overall school finances next year. Operations, which includes all building maintenance and custodians, totaled ten percent. The administration account equaled five percent of the proposed budget and other school activities, including athletics and student activities, comprised seven percent of next year's school budget. Capital outlay requests made up only one percent of the FY 89 budget.

According to the superintendent, there is a salary reserve of $213,000. Teachers are in their last year of a three-year contract and negotiations for a new contract should soon begin, he noted.

The Osgood School budget for next year will total $827,269 which represents an increase of $4,000 in supplies. There will also be a fulltime speech therapist at the school, rather than a parttime position.

The Deer Hill budget next year equals $867,010, a $35,699 increase over last year's appropriation. Because of a shift in enrollment in the two grades, there is a $32,000 decrease in the grade five instructional account, and a $26,000 increase in the same account for the sixth grade.

The largest instructional budget is the high school account which is set at $2,609,952 for next year, a $21,952 increase over last year.

The superintendent also listed a number of state and federal grants which are expected during the next fiscal year. The METCO busing program should net Cohasset $105,640, which will cover the costs of two salaried teachers for a total of 48 students, a coordinator and incidental costs of the program.

Chapter 188 will provide about $16,000 in school improvement council funds next year, an increase over this year's total because of a change in the rate formula. Another per student formula grant will be received in special education. The $54,500 estimated total will be used for one instructor at Osgood and one at the high school.

"These dollars come back directly to us for school use," Supt. Hart stated.

William Lean, a member of the advisory committee who attended Monday night's meeting, informed the superintendent that money to repair a leaking oil tank at the high school would have to be submitted as an article in the special town meeting. He also suggested that in the future if there is an oil or hazardous materials spill on school property, firms other than Clean Harbors should be contacted. "They charge between $40 and $60 an hour and most of their services are for shoveling the dirt," he said. "Maybe you should look into finding alternative ways to dispose of this material. perhaps just by hiring an engineer to supervise the operation."

Lean was referring to a 15,000 gallon oil tank at the high school which leaked early last month. Clean Harbors was contracted to clean the hazardous materials spill and it cost the schools $39,000.

The school committee will meet Jan. 25 at 8 p.m. to review in detail the proposed FY 89 budget. A review of the all district budget is scheduled for review that night.

Ski team races to second place

The Cohasset High School ski team placed second from a field of ten teams Monday in its first race of the season.

Juniors Katherine Lord, 16 and Michael Suhrbier, 17 had the best individual performances. Lord placed first out of 63 girls who raced at the Blue Hills Ski area in Canton and Suhrbier placed second out of 80 boys.

Last year, Suhrbier was ranked 15th out of 105 high school boys who raced in the state. He has made the state finals ever since the eighth grade.

Lord attended school in the Waterville Valley area and raced at that mountain last year.

Mike also races at Loon Mountain in the eastern division of the races sponsored by the United States Ski Association.

There are now about 33 members of the team, ranging from 7th to 12th graders, according to Robin A. Suhrbier, Michael's mother.

Suhrbier helps coordinate transportation for the racers and represents the team at coaches' meetings. She and high school Latin teacher Thomas O'Neil assist coach Griffith Long, a 20-year old former high school ski racer.

The high school students race in slalom competitions. Slalom means weaving through poles of bamboo while racing against a clock or side by side against another skier.

If they place among the top 40 of the 80 student ski racers in the Mass Bay Ski League East, they will qualifiy for the state finals. The two top teams out of the ten in the league also enter the finals.

"We don't put a new skier in to race...if they're not comfortable," said Suhrbier. Though the team encourages its hotshots, ability levels range from beginner to expert.

"Racing isn't something you can go out and achieve in. It takes awhile." She should know; her son Michael has been racing since he was six.

The two weeks of dry land training before Christmas which the team takes part in may also help them ease more comfortably into the rigors of winter sports competition.

The town does not fund the team, so it has to raise its own money. Just before Christmas, the team held a successful raffle.

Recreation ski trips

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for two ski trips to be held in February.

The first trip will be to King Ridge, Sunday, Feb. 14. The cost for this trip will be $37 per person.

The second February trip will be Sunday, Feb. 28 to Gunstock. The cost for the Gunstock trip will be $37 per person.

To register for both or either of these trips, you may call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. However, full payment is needed to reserve your space.

Buses for both trips will leave from town hall at 5:30 a.m., returning at about 7:30 p.m. The recreation office will be open at the time of departure and arrival. Two recreation department chaperones will accompany the trip.

It is a good idea to bring extra gloves and socks. Also, you may bring snacks for the bus ride, but it is a good idea to bring some money for a hot lunch.

Rentals and lessons are available at both ski areas. Should you wish to rent or take a lesson, please indicate this when you call.

Fees for the two trips are slightly more money than prior trips this year, because the two trips fall on peak weekends. Therefore, lift rates are slightly higher.

Sixty plus club plans

Cohasset Sixty Plus Club's next meeting will be Thursday, Jan. 21 at Trueblood hall for lunch at noon, followed by a short meeting.

President, Fred Huntwork, will open the business meeting, with appointment of a nomination committee to elect officers for the coming years.

Entertainment will be by Rev. S. J. Hall of the Beechwood Church, who will give an illustrated lecture on his world travels. This show could be of Japan, where Rev. Hall is now traveling.

Feb. 18, will be a Valentine Party. Card games of all types for everyone.

March 17, St. Patrick's Day, will be card games.

These three months are possible stormy weather days.

If school is called closed, so will the club days entertainments be called off.

Harbor View Apt. tenants wil have their weekly Tuesday card games, after the noon lunch at Trueblood hall.

Every Monday is Senior Citizens bowling league games. Years of practice have made good scorers.

☐ The next Cohasset Community Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 26, 1988 from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the First Parish House in Cohasset. Chairman Alfred Odermatt and Co-ordinator Corinne Cahill want to thank the 94 donors who participated in the previous Bloodmobile held in September, and are hoping for at least that many will take the time to donate this month. All of us should take the opportunity to give and receive the pleasure that donating the Gift of Life brings by planning to donate on January 26th.

☐ If you are planning to do any travelling to Europe this summer, the Vanderlugt family has a wonderful idea for you to share! They know two families in Holland that would like to swap houses with you. One family has 3 children, and the other is a couple with no children. Both have homes that are located in the middle of Holland, which makes travelling all over Europe easy to do. The families would like to switch homes with you for 3-4 weeks and are flexible in their time schedule. If you are interested in this idea, give Mr. or Mrs. Vanerlugt a call at 383-6030 and they will be happy to help you. Sure sounds wonderful to us!

☐ Clark, Mimi and Sallyann Chatterton had a wonderful Christmas vacation in the sunny South, Orlando Florida to be exact. We were lucky enough to stay at the home of Bud and Shirley Watters, and their home is a beautiful one indeed. It is located on a beautiful golf course (Bay Hill to you golfers) and is a few minutes away from Disney World and Sea World. Chris Watters is a basketball star for his high school team, and looks wonderful. Chris and Shirley will be heading to Cohasset later this month, and hope to see all of their friends at that time. In the meantime, a huge "Hi, y'all" from the Watters!

☐ Barbara and Danny Anderson also made the trip to Florida last week, and stayed at the Watters home for a few days. Dan went to the Citrus Bowl, a super event, and claims that he is now an avid Clemson Fan. A great time was had by all.

☐ Be on the lookout, the CHS girls basketball team's coach Bill Fallon, will soon be celebrating his 100th win also. As was reported, boys coach Ed Minelli passed that milestone a few weeks ago. Perhaps Bud Smith will present Coach Fallon the award, as he did Coach Minnelli.

Shirley Neer, president of board of trustees of the art center, presented an award to Don Lettis, who just retired from the board. (J. Paul MacDonald)

☐ If you think it was cold here over Christmas, think of Ken and Sue Fone in Maine! They claim they never even knew how cold it was, they had the whole family with them and were too happy to think about the weather. Scott even tried his prowess on the ski slopes, but decided to stick with skating (his first love).

☐ There are 12 positions open for town election that will be held in the spring; (1) selectman, (1) assessor, (2) school committee, (3) trustees of Paul Pratt Memorial Library, (1) Board of Health, (1) Planning Board, (1) water commissioner, (1) sewer commissioner and (1) recreation commissioner. If you plan on running for any of the offices named above now is the time to take out your nomination papers. The deadline is Feb. 29th and fifty signatures are needed to have your name placed on the ballot. Here's hoping that a lot of people show an interest in our town and the way it is run, and run for the various offices listed. . . instead of just complaining about the way things are run, make a decision to change them!

☐ Diet Center National is offering ten $3,000 scholarships to undergraduate nutrition majors to support their third and fourth years of study in college.

Applications for the scholarships must be received by Feb. 15.

Contact Leslie Jancsics, Diet Center Cohasset, 383-2052.

☐ Congratulations are in order for David and Mary Infusino! On December 29th they became the happy parents of a little boy who they named Nicholas. Nicholas is sure to have a happy life with wonderful people like his Mom and Dad!

☐ If you think of it, drop Fran Walton a Get-Well Card, she'd sure love to know that you are thinking of her. She is a patient at Mass. General Hospital, the Phillips House.

☐ Bob Thompson is just fine, thank heavens! He sure gave everyone a scare last week when they thought that he had heart problems, but all is well. One of the finest teachers to ever be at CHS, he is also a man in a million that everyone loves. Get well real soon, Mr. Thompson.

☐ Burk Ketchum has been named director of planning and permitting for the Rockland firm of Briggs Associates Inc. He will be responsible for coordinating all land planning, land-use permitting and environmental impact evaluations for the engineering firm. Mr. Ketcham is currently involved in long-term development planning for the waterfront in East Providence Rhode Island.

☐ Happy birthday to Pop Fone, a grand guy that is known by just about everybody! Here's to many more years of health and happiness, Pop.

☐ Had wonderful news regarding the Mike O'Connell family. As you all know, Mike used to play for the Boston Bruins until he was traded a few years ago. Mike and his wife Rosemary had a baby boy on New Year's Eve, and they named him Matthew Terrance. Matthew weighed in at a healthy 8 lbs. 1 oz.; that Detroit air must have done it! Siblings Kristen age 5, and Gregory, age 3, must be overjoyed to have a baby brother that they can play with! All of the O'Connells wanted to be remembered to their many friends in the area, so we do that while sending our best wishes and regards right back to you all.

☐ Happy seventeenth birthday to Alix Ash from her loving family...here's hoping that your seventeenth year is all that you hope for and more, Alix.

☐ Hope that everyone saw Jack Conway on 20-20 last week, he was one of the executives interviewed who uses his travel time to conduct business by using a car phone. Its a wonder he hasn't rigged up a way to do business in his sleep, he is such a busy man!

☐ Congratulations to Frank and Caren Wheelwright, who became parents of a baby girl on December 16th. They must have had an exciting Christmas!

☐ We'll bet that Betty Enders is recovering faster than ever now that she is home! Hope to see you out walking your dogs real soon, Betty!

☐ Suzanne Feola a Cohasset resident, has been recognized as the "Outstanding Temporary Employee of the Month" by Office Specialists of Weymouth.

The award consists of a certificate detailing Feola's accomplishments and a special gift. Feola will also be included on a plaque in Office Specialists' Weymouth location.

Feola has worked for Office Specialists since February, 1984. In that time she has held various assignments with some of the company's major clients. Her excellent performance, dependability and flexibility in accepting a variety of temporary assignments have contributed to Feola's selection as "Temp of the Month."

☐ John Giuggio and his wife Barbara must have been happy with the events that took place recently. Mr. Giuggio is a trustee of Emmanuel College and recently attended ceremonies dedicating the new Science Center at Marian Hall at Emmanuel College in Boston. They had luncheon following the ceremony with Trustee John McCafferty and College President Sister Janet Disner, SND. Mr. Giuggio is Boston Globe Vice Chairman.

☐ Be sure to watch the paper so that you can support State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray's skating rink bill. Rep. Murray will let us know the day the bill will be called, and would like as many parents there as possible. It is her hope that the MDC will build a rink to replace the closed Winter Garden. So, hockey parents and fans, watch for her announcement in late February or early March, then go and support her.

☐ Everyone should have a neighbor like Kevin Mulcahy! Whenever we are outside doing something (in the last 3 cases it has been shovelling) he is the first to come over and ask if he can lend a hand! He's great, we're lucky to have him and this is a public thank you to him.

☐ We certainly hope that Lydia Erickson is on the mend as she reads this. Get well soon, Mrs. Erickson.

That's the news from here. Please let us know what has happened in your family this week.

Engineering family in NU fraternity

A unique experience was enjoyed by Professor John Zotos and his younger son, Frederic, when the Father assisted in the initiation of the Son into the NU Massachusetts Epsilon Chapter of Tau Beta Pi, the National Engineering Honor Society, Saturday, Dec. 5 in the Northeastern University Bacon Memorial Chapel.

This makes them a two-generation family within the Honor Society.

The new Initiates acted as judges in selecting the best looking Official Bent Symbol of Tau Beta Pi and they chose Frederic Zotos' highly polished Bent as the First Place Winner. For this outstanding effort, Frederic was awarded a cash prize of $25.

Professor John Zotos, who was initiated into the NU Chapter in 1954 while in his senior year in Chemical Engineering, is currently teaching, doing research, consulting, and administrating the part time evening program in Mechanical Engineering at NU after a three year medical absence.

Frederic Peter Zotos has just completed his academic studies in Mechanical Engineering and will graduate in June.

He has been a Dean's List student throughout his undergraduate years at NU and has been active in several extra-curricular activities such as A.S.M.E., Pi Tau Sigma (National Mechanical Engineering Honor Society), the NU Chorus, the NU Hus-skiers and Outing Club, and the Engineers Council.

He was also a recipient of the Alfred J. Ferretti Award by the Department of Mechanical Engineering after his term as President of the ASME Student Section at NU during which the group was selected as the Outstanding Student Chapter in New England.

Frederic is currently employed as a Project Engineer with Barry Controls in Watertown, MA, and is contemplating Law School and/or Graduate Engineering School in the near future.

Editorial

A necessary topic

An interesting comment was made the other night at the school committee meeting.

Committee member Christopher Ford reviewed a rough draft of the proposed AIDS curriculum for grades 6-12 and he had some disturbing questions.

After reading the guide, he questioned whether it wasn't a bit too explicit for sixth graders. These are12-year-olds who will be discussing parts of the body in the classroom, and Ford wondered whether it was a necessary part of the course.

"Maybe I'm being prudish," he said, appearing a bit uncomfortable as he discussed this sensitive issue in a public meeting. Should we so readily accept the notion that young kids, even 12-year-olds, are sexually active, he wondered aloud.

Supt. Stephen Hart admitted it was a difficult statement to accept. But the reality is that some of our kids may be sexually active and are in desperate need of correct information and education.

We agree and sympathize with Ford's comments. Perhaps we are 'old fashioned' in our thinking, but it's difficult to believe that our children are dealing with adult pressures and problems such as safe sex, drug and alcohol abuse.

But as Supt. Hart said, that is reality. Children who are just on the threshold of puberty, almost ready to become teenagers, are now faced with temptations we never dreamed of confronting. And perhaps their only preparation for such conflict is education.

Our children will be better equipped to face their difficult future armed with a good education. Academics are essential, but practical knowledge is as fundamental.

We cannot teach our children to become pilots, politicians or presidents if we do not help them to make wise choices along the way.

We were not privy to the proposed AIDS curriculum. But it has been reviewed by parent-members of the health advisory committee. And that group is headed by health education coordinator Michael Gill, perhaps the one person at Cohasset High School who knows most of our children, their problems and their concerns.

He is a strong advocate of a sound AIDS prevention program incorporated throughout the secondary grades. For many months he has been discussing and formulating a formal curriculum - a guide for teachers who will be instructing our students.

Gill has traveled to other school systems, advising them to begin AIDS education in their classrooms.

It is a sensitive subject, but AIDS remains a topic surrounded by ignorance. Most people still have no idea how the disease is or is not spread. Ignorance may be bliss for some, but for many, including a new generation of sexually-active children, it could be deadly.

We have put our trust in Gill before, and now we must also trust members of the health education advisory committee. Our instructors have a heavy responsibility on their shoulders, but we believe they have the proper information to back them up.

It is never an easy subject to discuss, but it would be shameful for us to turn our back. AIDS, teen sex, drug and alcohol abuse are subjects most would prefer to ignore, but that simply delays disaster.

OUTREACH NEWS:

As we announced in the December News letter, Karen Corcoran has been selected by the Council to establish an Out Reach program for Cohasset.

It will be her role to identify, contact and provide for services to Seniors in need, living in Cohasset. This is particularly important for those Seniors who are isolated and unaware of the many services available to them.

By addressing some of the problems the elderly are facing today, Karen hopes to help bring a fuller and more satisfying life to Cohasset's Senior Citizens.

If you are a Senior, who needs help or know of one who does, please call Karen at 383-9112.

FREE WORKSHOP OFFERED TO OLDER JOB SEEKERS

Job hunting is rarely easy. For the older person, who may not have been job-hunting for many years, today's rapid change in the employment conditions, new business developments, plus subtle age discrimination, make the job search particularly difficult. JVS/South Coastal Workers 55+, in conjunction with the Marshfield Council on Aging will be holding a free three-session workshop designed to assist the older job-seeker, "Finding Your Employer-Job Search Skills."

The workshop will cover such topics as: Understanding today's employment conditions, deciding what jobs are right for you, and finding and applying for the right jobs.

There will also be an introduction to computers for the computer novice. The workshops will be held on three consecutive Wednesdays, January 13, 20 & 27 — from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the Marshfield Council on Aging, at the Ventress Public Library (East Plaza) Marshfield. For informaton call 1-834-8781.

A continuation of Constitution's celebration

By David Wadsworth
Cohasset U.S. Constitution Bicentennial Committee Chairman

The year 1988 sees a continuation of the Bicentennial observance of our national Constitution.

Originally drafted and signed at the Philadelphia Constitutional Convention held during the summer of 1787, the new Constitutional document was sent to the individual States for ratification by each. In each state, a battle would be fought between those favorable to the newly proposed frame of government and those who feared its strongly unified federalism. Less than a decade after the winning of the Revolution many Americans remained afraid of a strong central government.

Opposition to a federal Constitution brought together those who felt endangered by a powerful aristocracy, an oppressive majority, or simply a slow but inevitable drift back to the tyranny of a monarchy. Those who supported the concept of a strong central government were called Federalists, and they had won the day at the Philadelphia Convention.

The new Constitution was their creation. The Federalists included such men as George Washington, James Madison, Benjamin Franklin, James Wilson, Gouverneur Morris, and the Massachusetts Convention delegates Rufus King, Caleb Strong and Nathaniel Gorham. Of the anti-Federalists, Virginia's Patrick Henry, New York's Gov. George Clinton and Richard Henry Lee were notable leaders.

Thus, by late 1787 the ratification debates began in each of the 13 original states. As at Philadelphia, local issues often became intermixed with national interests in the give-and-take of discussion and argument. One product of the ratification process was the writing of a series of 85 articles collectively called the "Federalist Papers," authored by John Jay, Alexander Hamilton and James Monroe. The Federalist Papers were written in support of ratification, and were a serious and penetrating discussion of various aspects of national government as proposed in the new Constitution. November 1787 saw the states setting up the apparatus for ratifying conventions to be held as soon as possible.

The final acceptance or defeat of the new frame of government would be made by the states, and ratification by nine would be needed to make the new Constitution the official founding document. On December 7, 1787, Delaware, a member of the "small state" group at the Philadelphia Convention, formally ratified the Constitution, becoming the first state to give its final approval. Pennsylvania, a center of Federalism, became the second to ratify, on December 12, followed by another "small state," New Jersey, on the 18th. Dec. 31

The first New England state to ratify was Connecticut, whose Convention delegates had not always acted on the side of the Federalists. But their state accepted the Constitution January 9, 1788. Massachusetts followed at its convention, ratifying in a close but significant vote of 187-168, taken on February 6.

In Massachusetts the memory of Daniel Shays' rebellion was still fresh, and the presence of numerous "Shaysite" activists fanned the flames of political passions. Massachusetts became the 6th state to ratify the Constitution, but only after calling for nine amendments designed to preserve the power of states in matters not "expressly delegated" to the Federal Government under the Constitution. April 28, 1788 saw Maryland, another of the "small states" at the Philadelphia Convention, ratify, followed by South Carolina on May 23. The Constitution of 1787 became the founding document of a new American republic when New Hampshire voted to ratify on June 21, 1788, being the ninth state to signify approval.

Of the 13 states, the final four to ratify, thereby providing unanimity, were Virginia on June 25, 1788 (but only after recommending a Bill of Rights for citizens), and New York on July 26, despite strong anti-federalist leanings of its Governor Clinton. North Carolina ratified on November 21, 1789, and Rhode Island, which had not sent delegates to the Philadelphia convention of 1787, finally ratified the Constitution on May 29, 1790. Vermont, not yet but about to become a state, ratified on January 10, 1791.

Before this, the new national government had been fully formed, with Gen. George Washington as its first President. Washington was inaugurated on April 30, 1789. Shortly after that the new government having its now-familiar tri-partite balance of power and its bicameral legislature become fully functional, and this year we mark its two hundredth anniversary.

Georgia, after short discussion, ratified by a vote of 28-0.

Coalition receives grant for housing study

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition has hired Stockard & Engler Inc., a consulting firm from Cambridge, to perform the major component of an affordable housing study.

The firm will receive $30,000 of the $50,000 granted to the South Shore Coalition by the state Executive Office of Communities and Development for the project.

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council and Jean Christiansen, executive director of the coalition, will perform the balance of the work.

The following are goals of the coalition's affordable housing study:

❑ Form a regional housing task force to evaluate local regulations;

❑ Develop two sets of guidelines—environmental and design review—to be adopted as minimum criteria for reviewing affordable housing;

❑ Design a regional impact review process and a simplified and standardized permit approval process;

❑ Develop a community educational program including slides, videos, visual displays and news features;

❑ Organize and manage three major public meetings throughout the district and obtain local sentiment through ballot questions;

❑ Plan for a regional housing trust which would be able to acquire land suitable for the construction of affordable housing in each of the towns.

The coalition's housing task force has met three times already to define its mission, according to Christiansen.

Representatives from each of the coalition's 10 member-towns were appointed by their selectmen. Task force members are: Judi Barrett of Duxbury, Beverly Johnston of Marshfield, Donna Kileen of Norwell, Robin Paulding of Rockland, Janet Humphrey of Scituate, Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset, Kevin Costello of Hingham and Joan Cellini of Hull. Weymouth has yet to appoint a task force member.

Christiansen said the coalition's housing task force will review the work of the consultants and "mold it to what they believe is acceptable and appropriate for the South Shore."

When the consulting firm submits its recommendations for design review and environmental review guidelines, she explained, the task force will amend the recommendations to the South Shore Coalition based on what the task force members believe is appropriate for the coalition communities.

Task force members also will be responsible for making information regarding the affordable housing study available to the public,

As part of its focus on affordable housing, the coalition had scheduled a housing conference for Feb. 27, but that date may be in jeopardy, Christiansen said, because the democratic primaries will be held that day.

When the conference is held, local officials will be offered insight on how to handle comprehensive permits and will discuss issues involving housing partnerships.

Afterwards, officials from each town will team up to review an affordable housing case put together by Stockard & Engler.

"They will be told to go off and develop a game plan," Christiansen said, "and each team will be judged on how well it protects the town's interests and still comes up with affordable housing.

"This contest will show in which towns boards can work smoothly together to come up with affordable housing and do so in a way the community finds acceptable.

Regional purchasing grant awarded

The South Shore Coalition has been awarded a $14,400 incentive aid grant from the state Executive Office of Communities and Development to study cooperative purchasing and equipment sharing between some of the organization's 10 member-towns.

The incentive aid grant awarded to the coalition was part of an overall $940,000 bequeathed to 154 communities throughout the commonwealth.

According to the EOCD, such grants have served as catalysts for improving management capacity and developing cooperative school-municipal relationships in Massachusetts.

Along with the coalition, the towns of Duxbury, Hanover, Hull, Marshfield, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth will participate in the project, EOCD said.

"Each town will have a report on its own purchasing, as well as the purchasing processes of its neighbors," said Jean Christiansen, executive director of the South Shore Coalition, "so we will be able to see how towns could benefit from intermunicipal purchasing."

Cohasset also was an applicant for the grant, but EOCD said the town could not participate because it has been determined to be "unreasonably restrictive" of low and moderate income housing.

Christiansen noted that the town of Hingham did not apply to participate in the study, but might still be able to sign on.

She noted that after local purchasing processes are analysed, the coalition will try to devise a structure for implementing the idea of mutual purchasing.

"If the study says it's a good idea," she said, "then we will talk to the towns and see if they want to participate. We will concentrate especially on big ticket items like fuel oil."

The coalition will next write a request for proposals from consulting firms that might be interested in the project. The coalition's executive committee will review the bids.

Christiansen noted that aside from cooperative purchasing, the consulting firm also will be directed to look at the sharing of capital equipment.

"There is informal sharing now," she said, "but it is our hope that we can institutionalize the lending of such things as street sweepers. Such a system would have to include safeguards to protect the equipment.

In addition to the grant money, each town will be expected to commit $150 toward the project.

Host families needed

Cultural Homestay Institute, a non-profit intercultural exchange program, will be bringing 15 Japanese students, 18 to 23 years of age to Cohasset between March 3 and April 2.

The students are visiting Cohasset to improve their conversational English and to learn about American culture. English as a second language will be taught 3 mornings a week with 3 afternoons and one full day per week reserved for field trips. Students will also participate in Cultural Exchange Evenings in which hosting families will be invited to share ideas, songs, crafts, and games with each other.

The homestay portion of the program is seen as being the most valuable aspect of the experience, not only for the students, but for the hosting family as well, as they learn about Japanese culture while the students learn about American ways.

Although most of the families for this community are recruited, there are still a few openings. Please call Jill Suddath at 925-3428 for more information.

Town-Wide Youth Program planning groups to organize soon. At the exploratory meeting of Dec. 8, with representation from Second Congregational, St. Stephen's, St. Anthony's, First Parish, and the Vedanta Center, it was decided to form two committees. One will spend several months researching models and the feasibility of a town-wide youth ministry. The second will begin making plans for a joint youth mission project to take place sometime this spring. If you would be interested in becoming a member of either committee, please contact the minster. Both groups met Jan. 13.

Beechwood church services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45 a.m.

The Pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care is provided downstairs following the children's sermon.

All children in grades K-8 are invited to Sunday School from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Visitors are always welcome.

There will be a Beechwood Neighborhood Social Jan. 21 at 6:30 p.m. There will be a Bingo Gift Exchange following the pot luck supper. Bring a covered dish, the family and friends and drop by for an evening of fun. This is not a members only event all people are welcome.

The Shepards Support Group will meet Jan. 28 at 7:30 p.m. — a support group for people dealing with the pain of separation.

Adults are invited to go with Pastor Hall to Walpole prison for a worship service. Pastor Hall needs the names of all participants one week in advance to give to prison authorities.

The Church phone number is 383-0808; Pastor Hall, 545-3810 (home) or 545-6800 (work).

St. Stephen's Church

CELEBRATE FEAST OF LIGHTS

The Church School will act out an Epiphany play depicting Jesus' birth and the arrival of the wise men on Sunday, Jan. 17 at the 10 a.m. service. Our worship will conclude with the lighting of candles and the carrying of the light of Christ to all the world. It is not too late for children to join in the play. Rehearsals are Sunday, Jan. 10 at 2:30 p.m. and Saturday, Jan. 16 at 2:30 p.m.

CONFIRMATION CLASS

Confirmation class for young people began Sunday, Jan. 10, at 4 p.m. The class continues for five more sessions all at 4 p.m. Jan. 17, 24, 31; and Feb. 7 and 21. Bishop Johnson will be with us Feb. 28 at the 10 a.m. service to celebrate the Eucharist and confirm or receive those who wish. Confirmation is a reaffirmation of promises made at Baptism and a strengthening of the Spirit to carry them out.

HOSPICE OF THE SOUTH SHORE

Hospice of the South Shore is seeking volunteers to work with their Hospice Team in the palliative care of the terminally ill. Volunteers meet in support groups every other week—one group in Braintree and the other in Norwell. For further information call Beth Loomis, Volunteer Coordinator, at 843-0947.

HYMNALS GIVEN IN MEMORY

When Bishop Johnson comes on February 28 we will ask him to bless the Episcopal Church's 1982 Hymnals which will then be distributed to the congregation. The 1982 Hymnal is a revision of the 1940 Hymnal which we have been using. New hymnals may be given as memorials to loved ones. The hymnals cost $10 each. Bookplates will be inscribed with the names of those in whose memory each book has been purchased.

DEBATE ON NUCLEAR DETERRENCE

Bishop Paul Moore of New York, a World War II marine combat veteran, will be the keynote speaker at a debate on "Christians Ought to Support a Policy of Nuclear Deterrence As a Basis of Our National Security", at the Episcopal Divinity School, 99 Brattle Street in Cambridge, to take place on Saturday, Jan. 16 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The cost of the conference is $5. If a box lunch is desired, that is an additional $5. Registration can be made with the Diocese of Massachusetts.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. STEPHEN'S

The Annual Meeting of St. Stephen's Church will take place after the 10 a.m. service on Sunday, Jan. 24. It is important that all of us make every effort to attend. Reports will be given by various church committees and ministries. You will be surprised to learn of the quality and number of our various ministries. The church will also elect the slate of officers proposed by the Nominating Committee. This is a process of saying "yes" these people have been called to their respective ministries, and it too is very important. After the meeting, brunch will be served to all in attendance.

Varsity team victory

The Cohasset varsity boys' basketball team remains undefeated in league competition this season, as they scored an easy victory over Hanover,84-56.

The leading scorer in Monday's win was Cohasset's Bryan Edwards with 37 points and 13 rebounds. Teammate Mike Smith had 22 points for the night with 15 rebounds and four blocked shots.

David Shultz gathered 12 points against Hanover and David Shumaker was singled out by coach Eddie Minelli for his six steals and outstanding defense.

"Matt Maloney, Rich Redick, and Jay Marsac all played strong defense," Minelli noted.

Cohasset was leading Hanover 37-30 by the end of the first half of Monday night's action. "In the third period we picked up our defensive intensity and at one two-minute stretch we outscored them 14-4. That was basically the game from there," the coach stated.

Cohasset is now 6-0 in league competition, with an overall record of 7-1.

New Community Center courses

One of the new courses being offered at the Cohasset Community Center this winter is an eight-week weight control, nutrition and exercise program.

This program teaches you to change your life style so you won't have to ever diet again. This class uses proven methods of weight control including behavior modification, food awareness and increasing metabolism.

The class will be given Tuesdays at 6:45 to 8:15 p.m. starting Jan. 26. Pat Messing, the instructor, holds a Master of Science Degree from Columbia University and is a certified exercise instructor.

The class will be limited to 18 participants. Call 383-0088 to register.

Another new winter course is a children's Dance/ Exercise class. This class will emphasize basic movement skills and introduce beginning dance terminology in a non competitive environment. This class will provide an excellent adjunct for the child who is already involved in gymnastics and dance as it will strengthen coordination and balance while improving stamina and fitness.

Janice Cole has been certified by the International Dance Exercise Association and has been teaching aerobics and dance for eight years. She is currently enrolled at U. Mass. Boston where she is persuing a degree in Physical Education/ Dance.

This class will meet Monday evenings from 6 to 7 for 10 weeks starting Feb. 1.

Janice will also be teaching a Jazz Aerobics class for teens and adults Monday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for 10 weeks, also starting Feb. 1.

This class will combine a blend of jazz and aerobics with special emphasis on correct body alignment and technique. The one and one-half hour workout will include a 20 minute warm-up emphasizing proper stretching and placement, a 30 minute technique segment including jazz diagonals, a 30-minute aerobic segment incorporating low impact and jazz, and a 10-minute cooldown.

Also new this winter, is a class for Infants and Mothers. This class will meet for an hour and a half Monday mornings from 9 to 10:30. Join a group of 5 to 10 mothers and babies for a series of eight parenting classes on the child from birth to eighteen months.

The subjects covered will be the psychological development of the child birth to eighteen months. the physical development of the child birth to eighteen months, nutrition and sleep and the problems related to them, medical problems, safety and accidents, issues of the parenting role, and discipline. Each class will have time for discusion as well as didactic.

This class will be taught by Ann Stadtler, RN, MSN, CPNP. Ann is a pediatric nurse practitioner who was in private practice with three pediatricians for 7 years. She received her BS from Boston College and her MNS from Catholic University. She is the founder and editor of Wings, a pediatric newsletter.

Ann will also be offering a one-evening workshop on Pediatric Safety and Accidents. This class will be offered Thursday, March 3 from 7:30 to 9 p.m. This one-evening workshop will discuss a home first aid kit, prevention of accidents and treatment of common injuries. Call 383-0088 for more information or to register.

The Cohasset Community Center is a non profit organization and participation is open to all. Call 383-0088 to receive a brochure or to register for classes.

Bloodmobile Tuesday, Jan. 26

The next Cohasset Community Triannual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 26, from 2:30 to 7:30 p.m. — at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 North Main St., Cohasset.

Corinne Cahill, R.N. will again be the Coordinator on the day of the Bloodmobile.

Groups that will participate, as in the past, are Seavey Engineering, Webb Norfolk, Rotary, Masons, Legion, Unitarian First Parish, Second Congregational, School Teachers and Students, Firefighters, Glastonbury Abbey and Independents. Additional groups are welcome to participate.

Ninety-nine (99) donors participated in our last Bloodmobile held on Sept. 22. We hope to exceed this number of donors at this Bloodmobile.

People are urged to make every effort to keep their appointments because of the urgent need for blood and the many volunteer hours that go into planning the Bloodmobile.

Baby-sitting will be provided at the center. Transportation will be provided on request.

All persons in good health, age 17 or older, and weighing more than 110 pounds are urged to enjoy the satisfying experience that one receives when giving this Gift of Life. Age 17 will need parental permission.

Walk-ins are welcome after 4 p.m. For further information contact Al Odermatt, Chairman at 383-1283 or Corinne Cahill at 383-9265.

Nursery registration

Registration for the 1988-89 Community Center school year will begin Feb. 1.

For one week, first priority will be granted to students currently enrolled, followed by siblings of former C.C.C. Nursery School students and Community Center members.

Monday, Feb. 8, registration will be open to the public. All registrations will be taken by Judy Volungis in the C.C.C. office and will not be guaranteed unless accompanied by a check.

Scholarship applications are available through the Director or the Registrar. Both partial and full tuitions may be granted through the Nardo Scholarship Fund and all information given is strictly confidential.

The Cohasset Community Center Nursery School is a non profit organization serving the residents of Cohasset and surrounding towns. It is not subsidized by the t own or any public source.

A five-year plan succeeds for wrestling team

By Michael Ellis
Special to the Mariner

The Cohasset Wrestling team has come of age.

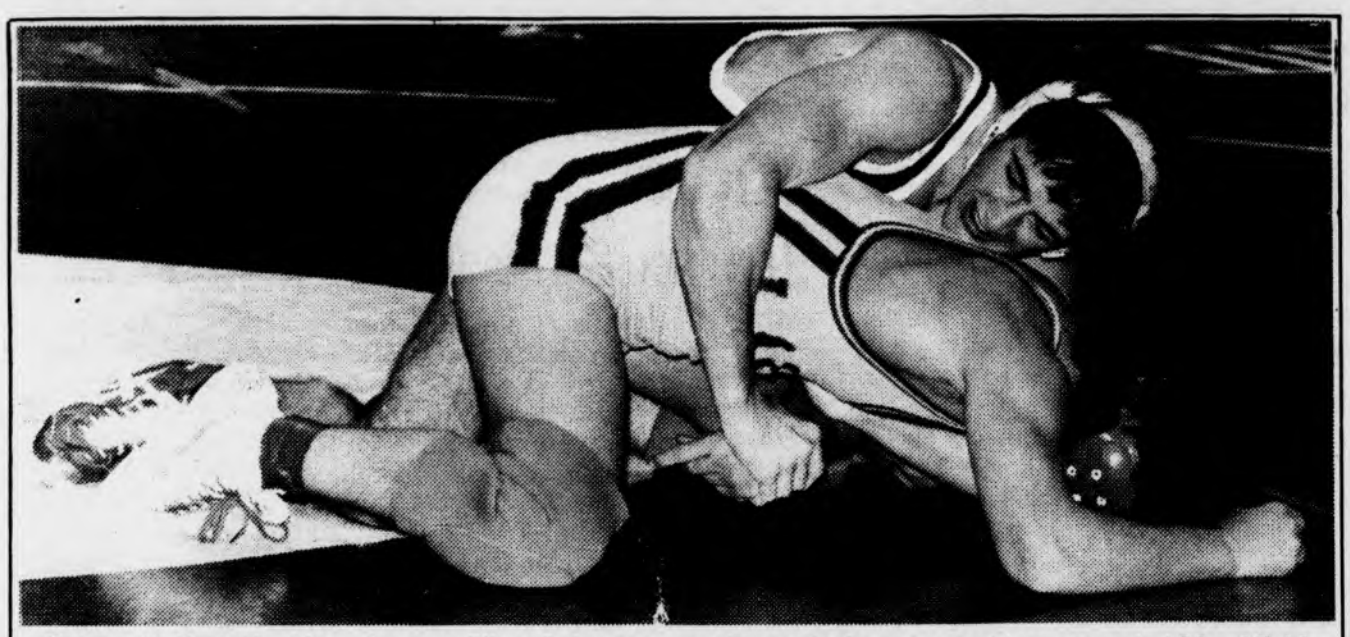
With a successful 11-6 record last year as a foundation and a strong team framework, head coach Torin Sweeney is planning this year to put the finishing touches on his "five-year plan". But wrestling insiders know that coach Sweeney has been working a lot longer than five years to make wrestling in Cohasset a success.

Sweeney began wrestling eleven years ago as an eighth grader in the 100-pound weight class — the first year Cohasset fielded a varsity squad. As a member of the "Munchkins," an exclusive group of light weight junior high wrestlers, Sweeney gained invaluable experience. To be a first year wrestler is often discouraging, but the team was lucky to have as coach Mr. Peter Clute (the founding father of Cohasset wrestling) who not only pushed the team to their limits but also served as an inspiration by wrestling with his boys every practice.

By high school, coach John Leone had taken over the helm and focused the going team on discipline and conditioning. This, combined with wrestling camp in the summers, payed off for Sweeney with a sectional win and a few visits to the state championships.

Sweeney himself inherited the coaching chores at age 19, and in four seasons has brought the squad from a dismal 1-11 his first year to 11-6. Presently the Skippers are 3-2. His coaching philosophy is simple: "I give the kids the outline at the beginning of the season, and they fill it in with their successes. I'm an easy-going coach, but when I ask the team how many pushups they want to do, they rarely disappoint me."

Sweeney "consideres the '88 Skippers" my most goal-oriented team. Since most of my starters began as Munchkins, and only a couple didn't attend camp this summer, this years team experienceis unmatched since I've been here. I feel that more than half the squad has the potential to make the status this year."



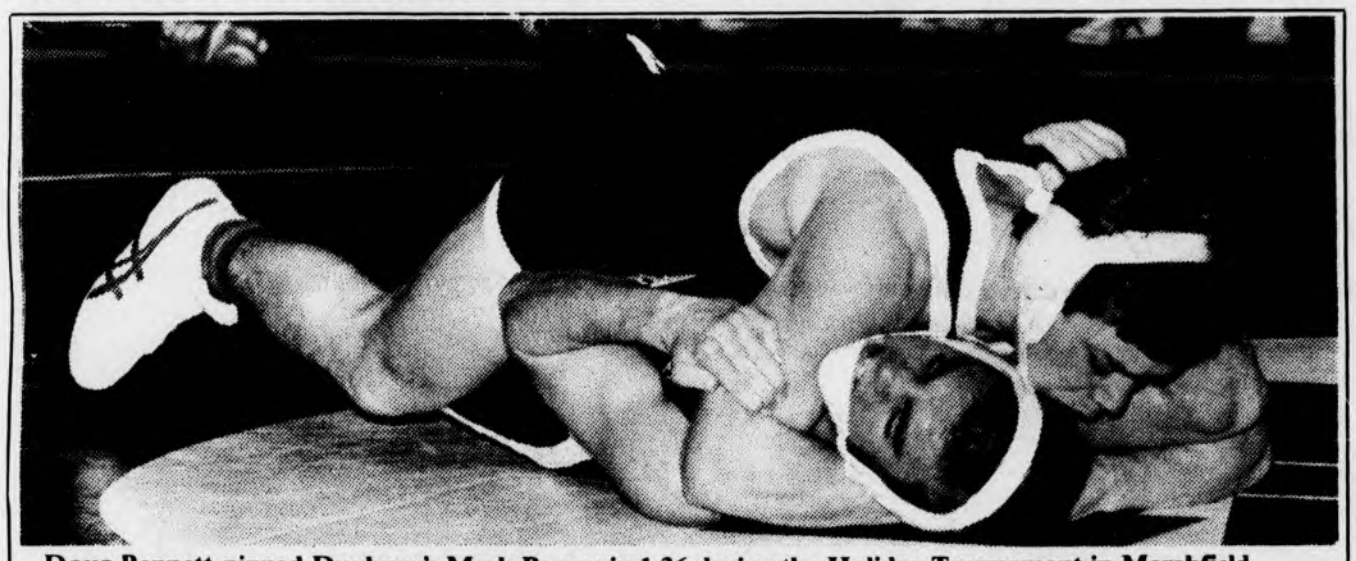
Cohasset's Peter Buckley wins over Silver Lake opponent Dave Grohe at a recent tournament at Marshfield High.

This might seem like a brash statement, considering the fact that Cohasset has only had a handful of state competitors in its eleven year history, but the coach is quick to justify. "Its an accurate goal, our inter-team competition is very high, and we're lucky to have some excellent role models."

With leaders like Doug Bennett and co-captain Glen Froio, who took their weight classes in this years Marshfield Christmas Tournament and placed in both the sectionals and states last year, the Skippers are strong in the talent department.

Senior co-captain Peter Buckley, Paul Froio, Tim Pieroti, and Gregg Nourie also placed well in the Christmas Tournament and all are expected to use their competition as "handi-wipes" to clean up the CHS mats. No team in the South Shore league other than Rockland beat the Skippers in the Christmas Tournament over vacation, and last Wednesday they snuck by league nemesis Duxbury by a mere three points. The team is beginning to roll.

Yet what makes it all worthwhile for the Cohasset coach is to "see the kids achieve their personal goals. Some just want to stay in shape, some want a 500 season, and some want a state or sectional title." With Sweeney's experience and a team that's obviously rich in talent, it seems as though this coach's five year plan to put half his wrestlers in the states definitely won't turn into a six year plan.



Doug Bennett pinned Duxbury's Mark Brown in 1:36 during the Holiday Tournament in Marshfield. (Kym Marcella)

Names omitted

Eddie Minelli, coach of the Cohasset High boys' basketball, noted that a few of his players' names were omitted from an article published in last week's Mariner.

We hasten to add that although Minelli mentioned all of his players as valuable members of the team, the Mariner failed to list all of them.

Among the players not included in last week's article was David Shumaker, a two-year starting guard whom Minelli described as an "outstanding" contributor to this year's squad. Also turning in a star performance for the CHS team is Rich Redick. Coach Minelli, who noted that Redick is also a top tennis player, said he is playing very well for the 1988 version of Eddie and the Cruisers.

Other important members of the CHS varsity squad are: Costas Roukounakis, Jeff Bryant, and Jim Reidy.

School news

Early Release Day Jan. 14

Thursday, Jan. 14, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools.

There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior High School, 12:00 noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff at the elementary schools to participate in a Health Workshop and the staff at the Cohasset Junior/Senior High School to participate in the third and final workshop entitled "A World of Difference."

Humanitarian Awards

Dec. 18, the students of the seventh grade cluster presented Humanitarian Awards to Nathan Fiore and Kathleen O'Sullivan. These two students were recognized by their class for their unselfishness, kindness, and consideration toward others. Cohasset High School congratulates these students.

Thanks to the Toppans

A special thank you to the Toppan Family for the donation of an Apple monitor. It will be used at the Joseph Osgood School within the Resource Room, in conjunction with another Apple Computer to reinforce and supplement learning.

Spelling Bees

Every six lessons in spelling the fifth grade has a spelling bee. We take four pupils from a room and have a spelling bee in the Deer Hill School cafeteria. We see who is the best speller in the fifth grade. Mr. Levine gives the words in the last six lessons to the spellers in the spelling bee. We come up with a runner-up and a winner. Everyone tries their best in the spelling bee of the fifth grade.

A classroom visit by a native American

New art center director looks to a busy future

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was nine o'clock on a Monday morning and Joel Conrad was not dealing with his first crisis of the week.

Conrad thrives on such activity, laughing as he set about his routine, attempting to solve suspected water faucet leaks, or snow-covered sidewalk dilemmas.

As the new executive director of the South Shore Art Center, Conrad comes with years of experience as "chief cook and bottle washer." It is a duty he accepts with pride and abundant enthusiasm.

"When I walked in the door for my interview here, I was astounded by this place," he said, obviously still in awe of the new center situated at the corner of Ripley Road. "I answered an advertisement in the newspaper, expecting to find a renovated garage or redone church. That's what most community art centers are. But this building is amazing!"

Within minutes of his job interview, Conrad said he sensed a presence within the building - a feeling "that things really are going to be happening here.

"You just watch," he said, his eyes gleaming as he sat back in his office chair and laughed. "This place is going to be filled with so much activity, we'll be levitating!"

Conrad was named to the post at the South Shore Art Center just two weeks ago. He was appointed following the resignation this fall of longtime director and artist, Margaret Dillon. "She has been wonderful to me, helping me along and giving me hints," he said.

His background is enormous and varied, as he accumulated more than 30 years as a non profit administrator, a professional dancer and actor, a college teacher, and a businessman.

His last position was as administrator for the Greater Manchester Center for Arts in Music in New Hampshire.

METCO students recall Rev. King

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The 12 year-old seventh grade students at Cohasset High School were not born when Martin Luther King died. Yet, his memory and his work have remained strong in their minds.

Within the office of METCO coordinator Patricia Brown, several students talked about the significance of Rev. King, and the impact his life made on their lives many years later.

At first reluctant to talk about Rev. King, and his impact on today's society, the students soon realized he was a "hero" to them, to their parents who followed his non-violent teachings, and to this country which was significantly altered by his message of peace.

Brown explained that she had shown a video movie of Martin Luther King:"The Emancipator", to the high school English classes prior to Monday's national holiday. Elementary classes had been incorporating lessons on Rev. King into their daily schedules.

And the local METCO students were invited to a luncheon at Northeastern University in Boston in celebration of the holiday.

When asked the year of Rev. King's death, there was no hesitancy on the part of the assembled seventh graders."1968," they answered in unison. Most of the students noted they were born in 1974, and some were born the following year - several years after his death.

But as Brown explained, it is up to individual families, black and white, to keep his dream of freedom alive. Family discussions about this ideal and Rev. King's teaching, are essential if his goals are to be maintained.

"Rev. King not only achieved freedom for blacks, he achieved freedom for everyone," she explained. "Civil

Hingham Square fire rips downtown

The Sprague Building, a landmark in Hingham Square, was torn down Monday following a spectular general alarm fire late Saturday that sent five Hingham firefighters to the hospital and wiped out at least a dozen businesses, including the Hingham and the Cohasset Mariner office.

Hingham Realty Trust, owners of the historic building, vowed to rebuild the two-story structure, John Grossman, a principal of the realty trust, said construction should begin in April, with an estimated completion date of Christmas. he has already hired Hingham architect John Sheskey to begin the design.

More than a dozen Hingham businesses, including a bakery, bookstore, insurance company, florist shop, art gallery and jewelry store, were displaced by the blaze.

Hingham's Acting Fire Chief Robert Garvin said there is no damage estimate yet although the value of the building was set at about $1 million. That figure did not include the contents of the stores and offices in the building at the corner of Main and South streets.

Town says violations not 'willful'

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

The State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) alleged the Cohasset municipal landfill is in "willful violation" of certain DEQE codes and standards set for landfills, and three weeks ago filed a Notice of Intent to Assess a Civil Administrative Penalty against the Town in the amount of $3,630.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson said the town is appealing the DEQE's decision on several premises, but paramount is DEQE's claim of "willful violation."

"It is the town's position that they are not willfully violating any DEQE regulations and that, we feel, is the basis for abating the penalties," said Henderson. "There is a good-faith attempt to comply with all DEQE regulations," he said.

Both Henderson and Dr. Joseph Godzik, town health agent, agreed the landfill does have some problems.

One area of concern is the runoff water called leachate. DEQE contends the leachate is not properly draining and is seeping into surrounding wetlands and groundwater causing a public health nuisance.

"Every landfill produces leachate," said Dr. Godzik. He said any landfill located near a wetland area, such as Cohasset's, will produce a certain amount of pollution. "A certain amount of pollution is the norm," said Godzik.

Henderson agreed with the DEQE's assessment of the leachate leaks.

"The leachate leaks are presently being investigated through engineering studies for the town," he said.

Dr. Godzik said the town had put out requests to engineering consulting firms for proposals to deal with the leachate problem prior to the DEQE order.

"The proposal was asking for hydrogeological studies of the site and to come up with a ground and surface water monitoring program and also a leachate collection, treatment and disposal plant," Dr. Godzik said. "In fact," he continued, "the consultant has already been accepted. SEA Consultants Inc. of Boston won the bid and contracts should be signed Jan. 25."

Another DEQE contention is that a "brush disposal area is being operated without proper site assignment from the Cohasset Board of Health and approval of the Department."

Both Dr. Godzik and Henderson acknowledge this to be true.

"We have stopped putting any more brush into the landfill," said Godzik, with Henderson, adding, "the brush pile will be moved."

When and how the brush pile will be moved is not yet clear. According to Dr. Godzik, the town asked DEQE for approval to remove the pile, but because of the penalty process, DEQE has not answered the town's request.

"We had proposed several things to DEQE a couple of months ago about what to do with the brush pile," said Dr. Godzik, "but, since they were in the process of writing a penalty assessment, they did not respond." "However," he said, "after the order and the penalty order had been sent out, they did meet with us and told

Cohasset's week

Housing meeting

The South Shore Coalition housing conference, which was planned for Feb. 27, has been rescheduled to Saturday, March 12.

According to Jean Christiansen, executive director of the coalition, the conference will offer local officials insight on how to handle comprehensive permits.

Stockard & Engler Inc., a consulting firm from Cambridge, will discuss issues involving housing partnerships.

Local officials from each of the organization's 10 member-towns will practice their skills on model plans developed by the consultant.

Christiansen said the exercise will show in which towns boards can work smoothly together to come up with affordable housing, and do so in a way the community finds acceptable.

The conference had to be rescheduled because it was planned to take place on the same date as the state democratic caucus.

Jarman fire fund

A fund has been established to assist Mae Jarman, the victim of a fire last week that destroyed her Jerusalem Road Drive home.

The Jarman residence was destroyed by fire last Thursday. She and her husband, the late Sydney Jarman, lived in the former carriage house structure for 35 years.

Donations may be made to the Mae Jarman Fire Fund, Cohasset Savings Bank, 13 Elm Street, Cohasset.

Incumbents to run

Several incumbents have notified the town clerk they intend to run for re-election.

Agnes McCann will run again for a three-year seat on the Trustees of the Paul Pratt Library. Elizabeth F. eaton has also indicated she will run again for a three-year position on the library board of trustees.

Richard Barrow will again be seeking a five-year seat on the recreation commission.

Robert H. Sturdy has notified the clerk he will seek re-election to a five-year position on the planning board.

Assessor Michael Patrolia will run again for a three-year membership to that board.

And school committee incumbent Barbara Bliss will seek another three-year position.

Lot W. Bates of Red Gate Lane has taken out nomination papers for a three-year seat on the sewer commission.

Meeting on Curtis will

Anyone who is interested in the execution of the last will and testament of the late Judge George E. Curtis, is invited to attend a meeting next week.

Interested residents are invited to attend the public meeting regarding Judge Ford's will which will take place Tuesday, Jan. 26 at 7:30 p.m. in Bates Hall of the Second Congregational Church.

us to do this, so that is what we're going to do."

Dr. Godzik noted that DEQE requests a plan prior to moving the brush, but, "We may seek their approval to move the brush first and then submit the plan on how to do it and where to put it," he said.

The final allegation by DEQE is "Unsuitable measures taken to minimize the scattering of refuse."

Both Dr. Godzik and Henderson said the scattering was caused by the wind, with Henderson adding, "The wind-blown litter problem is being dealt with and will be so reflected in the appeal."

According to DEQE Regional Director Edward Kunce, the department started enforcement action at the Cohasset Landfill in the early 1970s.

"In the late 1970s early 1980s, the landfill was in bad enough condition that serious enforcement actions were being contemplated," he said, "but it wasn't until the summer of 1986 when we really started focusing in on the Cohasset Landfill again."

Why, if in the 1970s the landfill was in such poor condition, did the DEQE wait until 1986 to take action?

Kunce said, "In 1986, DEQE started looking at the problem landfills in the context of our new enforcement tool — The Civil Administrative Penalty."

Kunce said prior to mid-1986, when the CAP law was passed, the "DEQE had no direct penalty powers."

He said DEQE had to go to the State Attorney General's office to obtain injunctive relief or penalty capabilities.

DEQE had not set an appeal date at the time of this report.

No Coalition grant for Cohasset

Cohasset was informed Jan. 5 that the town will be ineligible to participate in the South Shore Coalition's $14,400 regional purchasing grant.

The assistant secretary of the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) notified Cohasset selectmen that because the town has been labeled unreasonably restrictive, it may not be awarded state discretionary money. Michael Tierney, assistant secertary of the EOCD, told selectmen that Cohasset may not participate as a member of the Coalition's project to begin a regional cooperative purchasing and equipment sharing organization.

"This decision was made pursuant to Executive Order 215 based upon the fact that local officials have negotiated a Memorandum of Agreement twice within the past seven months; however, the required approvals of the selectmen, planning board and housing authority have not been obtained," he stated in the letter to selectmen.

Cohasset was warned last summer that if an affordable housing agreement was not negotiated with the state, and signed by town officials, state discretionary grants would be withheld from the town. The state notified the Coalition members that Cohasset would be ineligible to participate in the regional purchasing plan.

Art gallery exhibit

As of Feb. 7 and running through March 4, the Scituate Arts Association Gallery will feature a one man showing of the works of local artist Joanne Papandrea. Working chiefly in watercolor in a style that is purely her own, Papandrea has also gained a reputation for her illustration work in pen and ink.

A reception will be held at the gallery, located at 131 Front Street, Scituate Harbor, Sunday Feb. 7 from 2 to 5 p.m. Gallery Hours are Tues.-Sat. 10 to 5, Sunday 1-5, closed Monday. Gallery phone 545-6150.

SS Voke committee seeks $14 million addition

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

South Shore Regional School Committee members voted unanimously last week to present a warrant article to member towns seeking approval of a $14 million bond for an addition to the VoTech school in Hanover. At a special meeting last Wednesday night, committee members wrestled with a proposal presented by Martha Sherman and Eric Kluz of Walter Eric Kluz & Quinn Associates, an architectural firm.

The proposed addition and renovations are expected to be completed in December, 1991, if member towns approve the 20-year bond.

According to architects Sherman and Kluz, the cost of construction of the 42,475 square foot addition is projected at $6.8 million; renovation costs were estimated at $6.8 million. They reminded committee members to allow for inflation in construction costs, design costs and legal fees.

"It seems that renovations should not exceed $4 million," said Daivd Chittim, committee member from Cohasset. "That would make the total project $10.8 million."

"Until you have an approved plan from the School Business Assistance Bureau (SBAB) in order to be funded, you don't know exact figures," said Sherman. "To make assumptions that SBAB is not going to require $6.8 million in renovatons may box us into a corner at town meeting.

The SBAB, part of the Department of Education, determines the square footage required per student, equipment space in relation to educational needs and the construction plan for schools, in addition to other building details.

"You're saying that they are putting a gun to our heads and maybe will force us to do something we can't really afford," said Chittim.

The SBAB has not made a decision on the educational plan submitted by Dr. Clifford Easton, Superintendent, and a meeting with the building committee and the school committee is scheduled for January 26. Until the bureau gives approval on the education plan and approves funds, the architects cannot go forward with their design. The SBAB instructs school committees on what is required in construction proposals to meet their educational needs.

"We're still in a negotiation process with SBAB, hoping the costs will be considerably lower," said Robert Molla Jr., committee chairman. "Of course, we would rather go with a big number and be able to reduce it, but we don't have anything concrete to base the numbers on."

The bureau may give the towns up to 65 percent of the funds for the school construction, but town meeting voters must make a commitment to the project before the SBAB will decide on funding. SBAB determines the amount of a grant for construction and renovaton with an evaluation of projected growth in enrollment and in the region.

The eight towns that support the SSRVTHS may each have to pay between $5,000 and $50,000 annually over the 20-year bond period after receiving a grant from SBAB. Committee members anticipate that construction will add an eight-percent increase to the current $3.9 million budget.

"I'm concerned about the $15 million figure," said Lloyd Patriquin, committee member from Whitman. "I feel that if we have qualified teachers and supplies we don't need all the whistles and bells in a new building. I know we have to comply with SBAB, but I would like us to be conservative in our estimates.

"We may be opening Pandora's Box with the $15 million figure. There's no question about it," he said. "We need the addition, but I feel more comfortable with the $14 million.

Committee members will present the proposal for a new addition and renovations to selectmen in member towns in the coming weeks, prior to the deadline for town meeting warrant articles.

Design plans will take six to eight months and SBAB funds will not be available until July 1989, due to the bureau's fiscal year cycle.

Chittim supports Supt. Easton

Despite the support of Cohasset's David Chittim for an increase, a proposed 7.5 percent hike for the South Shore Vocational Regional High School annual budget was defeated by that school committee.

In the wake of that budget defeat, Supt. Clifford Easton issued his resignation, effective June 30.

Chittim, who is Cohasset's representative to the regional school committee, supported Dr. Easton's proposed budget increase. That budget included $45,000 for two special education aides, a part-time management, marketing and merchandising teacher, and a director of curriculum instruction.

"In order to have an effective educational system, we have to spend some money," said Chittim at the Jan. 6 school budget meeting.

Despite support from Chittim and member Lloyd Patriquin from Whitman, the budget was defeated. The committee then voted to reduce the budget by $45,000, thereby limiting the increase over last year's total by six percent.

Dr. Easton had proposed a budget increase of 7.5 percent. The additional proposed positions were rejected with the exception of the special education aides, which may be eligible for state grant financing.

In presenting the 7.5 percent increase in the budget, Dr. Easton told committee members the regional school is at a crossroads and decisions must be made on the quality of education at the school. After committee members defeated the proposed staff positions, by a 4-2 vote, Dr. Easton gave his verbal resignation.

"You have been disagreeing with me since June," he said. "You have sold out education at South Shore Vocational Technical, and you're not going to sell me out, too."

The school superintendent has been at odds with a majority of committee members since last June when they voted not to renew his contract. At that time, Chittim voted to support the administrator. Last fall, he initiated a motion to retain the superintendent, and the vote was approved by a majority of school committee members.

Candidate Dole received polite South Shore welcome

By David Johnson
Mariner staff

The presidential campaign made a rare foray onto the South Shore last Sunday with an appearance at a Hingham rally by Republican hopeful Senator Robert Dole of Kansas who called for a federal spending freeze to combat the $2½ trillon federal deficit.

In a brief speech that was politely received by some 400 people, Dole said, "We've been living on a credit card, borrowing from the Japanese," to pay the $200 billion annual interest. He called a spending freeze, "a fair solution," which would save $150 billion over three years and would help keep inflation and interest rates down.

Dole also endorsed the presidential line item veto, which lost by two votes in the senate.

As for the campaign, the candidate said "Massachusetts is a very important state," for the GOP nomination and stressed his leadership.

Twice calling himself a conservative Republican, Dole said "There aren't any perfect candidates running. The country needs someone who understands Congress. I've voted 11,000 times, everybody could find one or two (votes) they don't like." He urged voters to look at the "totality" of his record.

Dole also took credit for the strength of the social security system, with a $70 billion dollar reserve, and for tax indexing. As an author of the tax indexing amendment to the 1981 tax bill, Dole said he has saved "billions and billions," for "working Americans," by preventing them from being pushed into higher tax brackets by inflation.

He pointed out that New York Governor Mario Cuomo said Dole has a higher favorable rating among Democratic voters than any of the Democratic candidates, which brought applause from the audience.

Candidate Dole in Hingham . . .

Dole drew laugher and applause when he said, "Frankly I didn't know there were this many Republicans in Massachusetts."

He also referred several times to his wife, former secretary of transportation Elizabeth Dole, and to the devastating fire which destroyed several Hingham center businesses the night before.

"I heard about the fire. I didn't have the foggiest notion that this many people were here to see Bob Dole, Elizabeth maybe."

After his remarks, Dole answered two questions from the audience. Rita Cadigan, 23 Parkview Drive, Hingham, asked what he would do for the so-called "notch babies" born between 1916 and 1920 and receive very little social security.

Dole said a forthcoming "report on that inequity" offered several solutions.

After the meeting, Cadigan said she was pleased with Dole's response. Although she's a Democrat, Cadigan said she would vote for Dole.

The second question came from Barbara McSwan, chairman of the Weymouth Republican Town Committee, who requested that the Republican candidates stop attacking each other and criticize the Democrats. "It appears mean spirited," she told the senator.

"I share that view. I've been involved in that, as you know, I'm just an innocent victim," Dole replied to scattered laughter. He blamed Vice President George Bush for starting the infighting.

He said Bush had revealed his tax records for the past ten years, urging other Republican candidates to do likewise. Dole said he then released his own tax records for the past 21 years, but that Bush was now asking what was in Elizabeth Dole's blind trust. "Well she's not running," Dole said.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray leads Sen. Robert Dole through a crowd of admirers during his visit to the South Shore last Sunday. (Kym Marcella photo)

McSwan said later that she liked Dole's answer. The in-party fighting "Creates negative attention that's unhealthy," she said. However, McSwan would not call herself a Dole supporter. "I'm not totally committed myself."

Despite what he said to McSwan, during a short press conference held upstairs at the Hingham Civic Center just before his public speech, Dole had sharp barbs for GOP presidential candidates Delaware Governor Pete DuPont and New York Congressman Jack Kemp.

On DuPont's problems with nomination papers for the Texas primary, Dole said, "It's a good way to get media coverage. You can't withdraw from Texas (primary.) DuPont's already on the ballot. He saw a good opportunity for media coverage." Dole also said the candidate should not be punished because of the mistakes of a firm hired to do campaign work.

He also attacked DuPont and Kemp for questioning the stability of the social security system, saying, "Sooner or later you feel sorry for Jack and Pete, they're just against everything."

As for Bush's role in the Iran-Contra situation, Dole said "Iran-Contra is not an issue."

Asked if he agreed with Secretary of State George Schultz that the U.S. should consider ending aid to the Afghan Freedom Fighters before the Soviets withdraw from Afghanistan, Dole said, "I'd want to see precisely what the Soviet plan is before they cut off aid. I want to see the fine print."

Dole would not say how much money he wanted to give the Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters. "I'm not the president at this point."

Studds sponsors art contest

As part of a nationwide contest, Rep. Gerry E. Studds (D-MA) is sponsoring an arts competition for Tenth Congressional District high school students.

"This national contest will honor the creative talent of young Americans," Studds said. The winning local entry will be chosen next spring by a panel of distinguished members of the local arts community and will be displayed in the United States Capitol building.

Each contestant will be allowed one original entry, but there is no limit to the number of entries from each high school. To be eligible, artwork must be two-dimensional—including paintings, collages and prints. Entries may be no larger than 30 by 30 inches unframed.

Formal entry forms will be available from high school art departments or from Rep. Studds' offices on the South Shore, Cape Cod and in New Bedford. The deadline for the artwork itself is April 15.

"Entries to our arts competitions have always reflected well the rich artistic heritage of southeastern Massachusetts," Studds said. "In past years, the one problem was that some students got a late start on their projects, so I encourage all interested students to begin thinking about their entries now."

"While the panel of judges will have to select winners to represent southeastern Massachusetts, the emphasis of our competition will be on public recognition for the wealth of talent and enthusiasm of our young artists," he said.

Further details about the competition are available through the Congressman's offices in New Bedford (999-1251), Pembroke (826-3866) and Hyannis (771-0666).

around town

☐ Edward and Dorothy Leptich have moved back to Cohasset, and they come into town bringing good news! Their daughter, Colleen Shelley Leptich is engaged to be married. Colleen will become Mrs. Robert Anthony Bridges in March. Bob is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Bridges of Bedminster, New Jersey. Colleen is employed by Mass Financial in Boston. Bob is self-employed. Loads of good luck to the happy couple, and welcome home to the Leptichs.

☐ Shifi Jorden-Catlin and Anthony B. Catlin have big news to share with all . . . they became parents of a baby girl Monday, Jan. 11. Her name is Jessica Catlin and she was born at the Newton-Wellesley Hospital. Both Jessica and her mom are doing great, and should be home by the time this goes to press.

☐ It certainly was nice of Donald Staszko and his wife Barbara to donate two full scuba sets to the town of Cohasset! We have 10 firefighters that have been certified in the use of the equipment, and now we have the gear in case it is needed. Here's hoping there is never a need for it, but it sure is nice to know that we are prepared in that area thanks to their kindness.

☐ We sure are hoping that Kelley McAuliffe is on the mend, after she took a mean fall in the bathtub. Kelley is a wonderful gal who lives life to the fullest, so you get well real fast Kelley.

☐ A standing ovation is in order for Bryan Edwards, and he sure got one last Friday night. Bryan passed the 2,000 point mark, a feat that very few ever accomplish in high school basketball. If you haven't seen Bryan in action you owe it to yourself to attend a game and watch him! He sure is worth the price of a ticket, as is the rest of the CHS Basketball team. They all keep getting better with every passing game, if that's possible.

☐ Kate Pyle, a former neighbor on Atlantic Avenue, is now a tennis star at La Jolla Country Day School in Sante Fe.

Kate's team, The Torres, is in first place in its league. Kate is a great singles player, and has yet to lose a match.

☐ Walter and Nanci Sweeney were in town last week, and they are looking swell! Course they did manage to come here during that awful cold spell, something they have almost forgotten over the past year. In spite of the cold they had a wonderful visit, and promise to return again real soon.

☐ Host families are needed between March 3 and April 2. That's when 15 Japanese students will be visiting Cohasset to learn about American Culture and practice their conversational English. If you have an extra room, you can show them American hospitality! Give Jill Suddath at 925-3428 a call for more information.

☐ Don't forget that Jan. 26 is Cohasset Community Red Cross Bloodmobile day. Drop in anytime between 2:30 and 7:30 and give the gift of life.

☐ Boy, is everybody proud of Katie Anderson! Katie is a sophomore at the University of Rhode Island and she came home for the Christmas vacation with super news . . . she made the Dean's list! If you don't think that Mimi and Eddie Mulvey are happy about that, guess again! Good work, Katie.

☐ There's one group in town that really starts cheering when the snow flakes start flying, and that is the Cohasset High Ski Team. There are 33 members of the team under the coaching of Robin Suhrbier, and they are doing a grand job. Katie Lord and Michael Suhrbier are both standouts on the team this year, with a lot of experience behind them. Let's watch for their names in the Olympics some day. The team had a raffle to fund their team earlier this year, so they are a hard-working bunch to get where they are now.

☐ That's the news for this week, let us know what is new with you!

Advisory Committee questions audit over-run

Questions on why town financial statements do not balance and how the town can ensure against inaccurate books in the future caused advisory committee members to conduct an informal investigation at their Tuesday night meeting.

The advisory committee questioned the representatives of the accounting firm, selectmen and town offices on an increase in payment for original $11,400 contract work commissioned for the 1986 town statement.

In adherence with state requirements, the town must conduct an audit every other year. Malone and Tandler Associates of Brewster, Mass., was commissioned to do the 1986 audit for an original contract of $11,400. In June 1987, the accounting firm requested an additional $3,900 for unforeseen expenses.

"We gave you a price, and we tried to keep within that budget," said George Malone of the firm. "Ninety-nine percent of the time we stay within our budget, but we were promised combined financial statements and we didn't receive them.

"The statement didn't add," he said. "A number of numbers incorrect. Because of this, we had to increase our fee."

Malone contacted the town accountant in June with a letter and exhibits explaining the problem. A letter requesting information on the statements was also sent to Donald Andrew, Executive Secretary, who brought it to the attention of selectmen.

A second letter was sent to Andrew in September outlining what was needed to complete the audit. Selectmen received a copy of the letter but failed to inform the Board. Also, the former town accountant resigned in July, 1987.

"We are concerned that we did not know about this situation until now," said Jane Goedecke, chairman of the advisory board. "It is frightening that we cannot be sure our books are in order.

"We are required to have an audit to receive state and federal grants," she said. "Auditors usually do not want to go over their original contract, because it haunts them. I thing he is being fair."

Selectmen chairman Rocco Laugelle said selectmen were wrong in not bringing the matter to the attention of the board. He said no one followed up on the matter.

A new town accountant was hired in the fall, 1987. She and Andrew are assisting the auditors in trying to put financial statements back in order.

Auditors were not paid their agreed upon fee because a check was held by the former town accountant. The mistake was recently discovered by Andrew.

"You're dealing with a repair job," said Malone. "It's as if you brought your car in for repairs not knowing what was wrong with it.

"We assume the cooperation of the town when we do an audit, and we discovered that we had to prepare combined financial statements. We are submitting standard fees for our time incurred."

The committee advised selectmen and town officials that they should participate in audits and other financial matters. They advised that they should have been informed in June when the original letter was received.

Malone and Tandler will complete the audit for an agreed upon $3,900 in additional fees. The next audit is due this year.

Advisory Board members reviewed budgets of the selectmen, the town hall, town reports and buildings and other areas at their Tuesday night budget meeting. Board members will continue the review process for the remaining weeks of this month.

Discussion was raised on a new phone line for the town hall, which would provide a private line for town officials to contact departments on a daily basis and especially in emergency situations. Town officials often cannot contact departments with the two lines now in operation. Equipment rental fees for the town hall will be $2,000.

In addition to an extra line, the $400 service contract for a new photo copier in the town hall will increase the town hall budget by 11 percent. Collective bargaining fees will also be increased 50 percent, a total of $15,000, in anticipation of complications in negotiations in the upcoming fiscal year.

A $3,000 increase in utilities is expected for the new town hall but monies from renting or selling the Bates building are expected to offset some of the fees.

Employment insurance is up three percent, while $2,500 in funds were targeted for the Association of Retarded Citizens. Also, $1,000 was designated for the South Shore Coalition.

The new beeper system for the dog officer raised that budget by 10 percent, total $3,230 including an increase in salary after one-and-a-half years of service.

$80,000 was targeted for the stabilization budget, which has $140,000 in the fund. The last Town Meeting appropriated monies for school buses out of that budget.

Next week, committee members will review the budgets of the animal control officer and the harbor. Both budgets have significant increases. The dog officer's salary and major improvements for the harbor department will increase the budgets if approved by town officials.

The walls along certain sections of the harbor are in need of repair, according to Selectman Chairman Laugelle. The last improvements included blowing cement into the cracks. The harbor master is advising that this time a mason should be used.

The town of Plymouth will present a study on average costs of mooring a boat this year. Selectmen and advisory board members will study the report and may use it as a guideline for adjusting fees in the harbor.

Flags for Memorial Day and Veterans Day will cost $1,500 and maintenance to the flag pole in the center of town will be $700.

A prophet is honored

This week we quietly observed Martin Luther King Jr. Day, a national holiday known more for controversy than celebration.

It is observed in at least 32 states, but most of the attention this year was drawn to Arizona where the governor revoked the holiday and is facing a recall election because of it.

There are those who say Gov. Evan Mecham, who has since been indicted for not reporting a $350,000 loan to his political campaign, is right.

They say Dr. King was little more than a rabble rouser who upset the peace between the races in America by pointing out, forcibly if necessary, that it was based on inequality.

They say the observance is nothing more than a political gesture made to hush a highly vocal minority by politicians eager to truckle to their voting power.

The prophet is rarely honored in his own time.

They used to say similar things about George Washington, the only man whose birthday is now a legal holiday observed in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and the territories.

When Washington was in his first year as president in 1790, Congress adjourned in honor of his birthday. The following year there was a parade in Philadelphia on that day.

Six years later, however, the resolution to adjourn was defeated and Congress behaved as though it was just another legislative day.

Washington's birthday, a contemporary historian wrote, "should have been a national holiday were it not that the societies most prominently engaged were entirely composed of Federalists.

"The Democrats came to consider the 22nd of February as a political anniversary and they abstained from participating in the ceremonies directed by their political opponents."

It was not until 1832, the 100th anniversary of Washington's birth, that the political antagonisms had abated long enough to permit an official celebration throughout the country.

What will it be like in 2029, the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., when the last of the current political antagonisms have subsided at last?

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

Smoke and flames fill the midnight sky in Hingham Square Saturday night as firefighters battle an entire block of stores at the corner of South and Main Streets. (Robert Stella photo)

Hingham Square fire . . .

No cause has yet been determined, Garvin said, but fire officials presume that the fire started in a common cellar that had no fire walls. Several explosions reported during the blaze were assumed to be oil tanks exploding in the building.

Garvin said the fire had been "going for some time, probably an hour," before it was detected by a passing motorist and a policeman who saw smoke in Bartlett's Bakery and the Hingham Square Bookshop.

Garvin added if the fire had happened in sub-zero temperatures four or five days earlier, "we might have lost Hingham Square."

Hingham building inspector Richard Morgan said the building's owner, John Grossman of Newton, intends to rebuild, and estimates the project will take nine months to complete.

State Sen. William Golden said state funds may be available to the town, to cover some of its expenses for firefighting and police protection around the building.

Jane Malme, a Hingham resident who works at the state Dept. of Revenue, Bureau of Local Assessment, added that some aid may be available to the town for its loss of tax revenue.

"It's more than the loss of revenue," selectman John Brady said. "It's the loss of downtown Hingham."

Firefighters and apparatus from seven towns responded to the blaze, first reported in the police log, at 10:48 p.m. on Jan. 16. Eyewitnesses said flames shot 40 feet into the air as fire engulfed the 60-year-old building.

Hingham Fire Capt. Mark Duff was admitted to the intensive care unit at South Shore Hospital, suffering from smoke inhalation. Officials at the scene reported that Duff was knocked down from the force of the fire, and lost his breathing gear.

Treated and released from South Shore Hospital were Hingham Fire Capt. David Cappella, and firefighters James Shaughnessy, David Yalenzian, and Thomas Hickie. Three others were treated for minor injuries at the scene.

Fire companies from Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Weymouth, Norwell, and Rockland responded through mutual aid pacts and covered fire stations or fought the inferno.

The first alarm was sounded at 10:36 p.m., according the Hingham Fire log, followed by a second alarm at 10:51 p.m. and was upgraded to a general alarm fire at 12:17 a.m.

The building was occupied by Hingham Galleries, Hingham Jewelers, Hingham Greenery, Hingham Stoves, the Hingham Square Bookshop, optometrist Dr. Louis Page, the Christian Science Reading Room, Bartlett's Bakery, the Maytag Laundromat, and Brendon Potter Insurance, all on the first floor. Upstairs office space was rented by Saint Communications and the news office for the Hingham and Cohasset Mariners.

Firefighters continued to pump water onto hot spots in the gutted building late into Sunday afternoon, while Hingham fire officials, building commissioner Morgan, engineers, and architects inspected what remained of the building.

A crowd gathered during the night, while firefighters worked to contain the blaze from spreading to nearby buildings.

The highway department was brought in to cordon off streets around the fire scene, and to spread sand on the street which was coated with a layer of ice.

A campaign appearance by presidential candidate Sen. Robert Dole at the Hingham Community Center nearby added to vehicle and pedestrian congestion in the Square.

Concerned that the fire had dangerously weakened the building's brick facade, building owner Grossman authorized demolition.

Hercules Wrecking Company was on the scene late Sunday night, with a crane to lift the Hingham Jeweler's and bakery safes.

The building was leveled by mid-afternoon Monday, leaving piles of rubble. A 24-hour police detail has been placed around the building, to keep the curious away from the piles of charred bricks and twisted steel beams.

Many shops, including the Hingham Greenery and Hingham Stoves, were gutted during the nighttime conflagration. By morning all that remained of the Sprague Building were water-soaked charred timbers and shattered glass before the brick shell was torn down. (J. Paul MacDonald photo)

Town expects to sign contract for transfer station

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

Hingham's landfill woes may soon become a memory if plans, which are now underway, materialize.

According to Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset health agent, the town is planning to build a transfer station on the site of the present landfill. The tansfer station would receive rubbish and take it to some other place for disposal. The town is presently in negotiations with South Eastern Mass. Resource Recovery Co. (SEMASS) in Rochester, whereby Cohasset would pay SEMASS to haul away the trash. The refuse is then burned, using the heat to convert water to steam, which will then be used to generate electricity then sold to utilities.

Dr. Gogzik said a contract with the town's design consultant, SEA Consultants, Inc. of Boston, for the design of a new transfer station, will be signed in the near future.

Although much of the present landfill area will be capped and closed, a portion will remain open because of certain things which will not be shipped to SEMASS.

"It would not be cost effective to ship bulky material which doesn't weigh a lot," said Dr.Godzik.

"We started investigating a transfer station about five years ago when we realized how fast our own dump was filling up," said Joseph Laugelle, landfill supervisor.

Although the cost will be more than the town is presently paying, the transfer station will be more cost effective in the long run. According to Godzik and Laugelle, the town is fast running out of available landfill space and the cost associated with keeping the present site as a landfill would be prohibitive.

"I think the townspeople realize the crisis we are faced with at the landfill," said Laugelle. He said the landfill mass is rising and the cost right along with it.

Dr. Godzik said the estimated cost of hauling the trash to SEMASS is $130 per ton.

"That includes tipping fees, transportation, operation, maintenance and amoritization of the facility and buildings necessary to run the plant, but excluding personnel costs." said Godzik.

How to transport the trash to Rochester is creating an area of concern.

Dr. Godzik said one proposal which is being investigated is building a transfer station at a rail site in Braintree once the Old Coloney Line gets going again and ship the trash by rail.

An update on the renovations to Minot's Light

By David Wadsworth
Special to the Mariner

One hundred twenty-eight years after the completion of the granite tower called Minot's Ledge Lighthouse, the historic light just off our shores has been undergoing its first major repair and renovation.

Built on Outer Minot's Ledge of the Cohasset Rocks, some two and a half miles from Cohasset Harbor's Inner Cove, the 114-foot high ocean lighthouse has seen the worst extremes of North Atlantic wind and wave many times during its long career. Buffeted by summer hurricanes and winter gales, Minot's has maintained its solitary vigil, warning seafarers away from Cohasset's treacherous ledges and shoals.

Recently, the large granite blocks of the light's uppermost part, called the "Watch Room," just below the lantern itself, were found to have developed a series of deep fractures, possibly endangering the structure of the tower. Plans were developed by the U.S. Coast Guard, under whose jurisdiction the light is operated, to replace the damaged Watch Room section, while saving as much as possible of the unique glass lantern room and copper dome above. Working to exact and detailed plans, and closely monitored by appropriate historical organizations, the Coast Guard began work last summer to disassemble the upper part of Minot's. The broken blocks of the Watch Room were scheduled to be replaced by near-exact duplicates made of granite closely matching the original gray Quincy granite. To carry out the exacting project the Coast Guard chose Gayle Electric Company of Whippen, N.J., veterans of numerous lighthouse reconstructions. Stonecutters of the new blocks would be Barratto & Sons, of Milford, New Hampshire. The rough granite blocks were to come from Virginia, and match the originals almost exactly. (The quarries of Quincy, Mass., from which the originals came, have been closed for years).

Late August and early September of 1987 saw the first phase of the Minot's renovation project brought to completion. The entire topmost section of the tower was disassembled, with most of the parts, both those scheduled to be reused and those being replaced, brought ashore. The 1850s original construction of the lighthouse had seen "Stone Sloops" used to transport the heavy granite blocks to the offshore site, and a large steam engine to supply lifting power for raising the sections of granite into place. The 1980s reconstruction sees lifting power supplied by a modern invention, helicopters.

In August of last year, first the lighter upper parts of the tower were flown ashore to Government Island and another location. The first "airlift" brought ashore large metal deck plates of the upper gallery, brass mullions of the Lantern Room windows, and the massive original iron rotating mechanism of the beacon, along with a finely-crafted copper globe from the peak of the tower. All except the rotating mechanism will be re-used when the structure is rebuilt. The helicopter for this initial phase of the project was a modified "Huey" model, of medium size.

In September, the moving of the granite blocks themselves, the disassembled Watch Room, required a larger and more powerful machine. From a mid-West construction company came another helicopter, this a specially outfitted Sikorsky machine, once a Korean War Navy helicopter, made more powerful by addition of turbo-engines. Largest of the granite blocks of Minot's Watch Room weighed in at 3,300 pounds, and the smallest at 2,200 pounds, and the Sikorsky transported each with apparent ease.

In all, more than 40 blocks were flown ashore to be deposited scarcely a dozen feet from the exact location where they had been carefully cut to shape more than a century and a quarter ago. (One large cornice block, which fell into the ocean in the only mishap of the airlift, landed atop the underwater ledge and later was brought ashore intact).

Work at the lighthouse itself necessarily ceased in late September. Minot's Ledge Light is reputed to be one of the last accessible lighthouses in the world when wind and sea are anything less than completely calm, and the construction crews of 1987 found the same dangers faced by their counterparts more than a century ago.

This winter, work progresses ashore rather than at sea. In Milford, N.H., the new, rough granite blocks have arrived from Virginia, and Barratto & Sons have begun the cutting of the duplicates. Before spring the new blocks will be completed, and carefully test-fitted together in New Hampshire, before being transported to Cohasset for reconstruction at Minot's.

To aid in exact replication of each block, some of the old granite blocks have been taken to New Hampshire to serve as patterns. Few changes are planned to the lighthouse structure, and none which would affect the visual appearance of the tower itself.

According to Coast Guard Engineering Consultant Joe Tully, only a few small changes to the interior have been proposed, and each change must be approved by an appropriate historical agency before it can be incorporated in the planning of the project. One such minor change has been approved; a slight thickening of the interior curve of the uppermost course of "cornice blocks," the large stones forming the domed ceiling of the Watch Room and the gallery deck above. Another proposed change would see the deteriorated wood and sheet-metal floors within the structure replaced by heavy metal gratings to aid in removing excessive dampness from the tower's interior.

Current plans call for a resumption of work in May, when sea and weather conditions improve enough to permit safe regular access to the tower. Once again, lifting power will be supplied by helicopter, as each block will be flown from Government Island to be carefully placed in its correct location.

Reconstruction of Minot's Ledge Lighthouse is scheduled to be completed this coming summer, and soon after that the familiar characteristic 1-4-3 of its famous beacon should be seen again by watchers on land and at sea.

Recycling necessary to keep landfill in operation

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner Staff

Cohasset is preparing for a pollution-free and healthful environment.

Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset's health agent, said the town is planning a two-stage development at the town's landfill.

"The first," he said, "is the conversion of the present landfill to a transfer station, which will simply transfer the trash to someplace else for disposal."

"The second," he continued, "is the enlarging of the recycling center, which means removal from the waystream substances such as glass, metal objects, paper and aluminum, etc," adding "Removal from the waystream means removing these items before they reach the transfer station."

Recycling Committee Chairman Arthur Lehr Jr. said, although the present committee was formed in the early 1980s, recycling dates back to WWII.

"Back then," said Lehr, "we saved paper, tin and aluminum so it could be recycled for the war effort."

Lehr recalled when, in the 1950s, the local Boy Scouts held paper drives, selling the paper to a concern in Quincy.

"We found we could collect more papers if we were at the source of disposal, which was at the dump," said Lehr. "So, we transferred our operation up to the approach of the landfill."

The recycling station is a community effort.

"When the returnable law went into effect, the bottles and cans became a Boy Scout project," said Lehr. The Eagle Scouts built the buildings in the area and we developed a bin arrangement for glass."

Lehr said quite a large amount of glass is taken out of the flow to the dump, crushed and sent to a Connecticut company.

"We sell it when we can," he said. "If not, we just get rid of it."

Lehr said the last load was taken away for nothing, but after Nov. 1, the town will have to pay to have it removed.

There was a time when a town or organization could make money from trash removal, but those days are fast becoming a memory.

"I can recall not too long ago, when paper was $25 per ton," said Lehr. "Year before last we got $1 per ton." He said this past year the paper was taken away as a gift and now we are going to have to pay to have it taken away.

Just as the building of the recycling center was a community effort, so too is the removal of recycable material from the regular trash.

Lehr said because the landfill is fast reaching its allowable limit, it is important for the public to take two or three extra minutes and place recyclable materials into the bins designated for that purpose, rather than throwing them away with the rest of the trash in the dump area.

He said when the transfer station goes on line the town will be paying to have its trash hauled away.

"We hope to expand the recycling end of it to take out more of the recyclable material," Lehr said. "The more we can remove, the less there will be to haul away, thereby saving the townspeople money," he said.

Dr. Godzik said residents must be made aware the landfill situation is reaching crisis proportions.

"The waystream must be reduced," he said. "We just can't afford to keep taking all this stuff. It just costs too much money."

Godzik said it is much more cost effective to recycle, to pull things out before they have to be shipped.

"The more we can pull out and recycle, the less we will have to ship, subsequently costing the town less money and in turn the townspeople because revenues to pay for the costs of transferring the trash to a facility for burning will be paid for through taxes," Godzik said.

The one person who is perhaps most directly responsible for making sure recycable materials are removed from the waystream and placed in recycling bins is Joseph Laugelle, landfill supervisor.

"I'm the main bagger," said Laugelle, laughing.

His sense of humor stands him in good stead, for it rests squarely on his shoulders to see that the public uses the landfill properly and enforce the Board of Health regulations.

"I keep an eye on traffic and encourage people to recycle," Laugelle said.

Although not a mandatory town by-law, recycling is governed under a Board of Health regulation, therefore, Laugelle can encourage the public to adhere to the board's rules and regulations, but he has no real punitive powers.

"I think now the townspeople realize the crisis we are faced with at the landfill, the costs to run the landfill and why the landfill is filling up so fast, more people are going to recycle," he said.

If all goes as planned, however, recycling may no longer be a matter of choice. Town officials say although the majority of townspeople recycle, there are still those few who do not realize the importance of properly disposing of their trash.

Lehr said the committee may consider recommending that selectmen create a by-law requiring mandatory recycling. "Certain materials will have to be separated at the household prior to being brought to the landfill," said Dr. Godzik. "There are many cities and towns in the country which presently have the law."

Dr. Godzik said townspeople could possibly be asked to vote on this issue as early as April's town meeting.

For residents who enjoy gardening, the committee has good news. The humus pile is ready.

Lehr said the committee came up with the idea to recycle leaves and grass into a compost.

"It's now down to a nice, rich humus," he said, "and it's free for the taking."

Lehr said it was thanks to the townspeople that this service was available.

"They [the townspeople] have taken hold of that very well and brought their grass and leaves in," he said.

And, although you won't see its likeness on a poster at the post office, Laugelle said cardboard is "Public Enemy #1."

"I think the biggest problem in any landfill we have today is cardboard," Laugelle said. "About 65 percent of your trash today is cardboard and there is just no market for it. I think during the Korean War, cardboard was $45 per ton and newspapers $40 per ton, but today no one will even take it."

Laugelle said when you see the big dumpsters behind supermarkets filled with cardboard, it is not on its way to be recycled; it's on its way to a landfill.

"If only 90 percent of the people recycled, and we could keep cardboard and newspapers out of the landfill, a tremendous amount of dump space could be saved," he said.

Everyone has heard the old adage "one man's trash is another man's treasure." At the Cohasset landfill, this adage seems to be working out very well in the recycling scheme.

Laugelle said that when the returnable law came into effect, the Boy Scouts were once again casting around for a money-raising project. The Eagle Scouts built a building, 10' x 20' for storage of the returnables and an office for the custodian, leaving one end open. This area has become an "exchange area" or as Laugelle calls it, "Take it or leave it."

Explaining how it works, Laugelle said people will come in and there may be a chair, a book, a toaster or something worth not throwing away. They leave it in the exchange area.

"You would be amazed at the way people take them out of there," he said. "they're there five minutes and they're gone."

If you visualize someone who removes articles from a dump site as somewhat scruffy, driving a battered, old pickup and not well-educated, you may be wrong.

Laugelle said that many times he has seen people driving a Mercedes, slow down and even stop, giving the dump a once over to see if anything worthwhile has been thrown away.

Lehr explained many times when elderly people pass away, the heirs often, in their haste to clean out the residence, throw out antiques.

Laugelle said one of the greatest treasures that ever came out of this landfill, was a book he found which the state DPW had thrown away.

"It was an Atlas of Norfolk County, printed in 1876," he said. "It showed every town in the county and who owned the property."

Laugelle said one party offered him $400 for the Atlas, "but it's not for sale."

Laugelle said he found two other books which are biographical reviews of all the dignitaries that lived in Plymouth and Norfolk Counties, including their photos.

"They're priceless," said Laugelle. "I would never part with them."

What does the future bode for the Cohasset landfill?

Dr. Godzik stated, "Somehow we have got to change that mentality and change people's behavior. We've got to get away from that mentality — we can't afford it. There just isn't the space available to dispose of these things."

Dr. Godzik said one way to reduce the level of trash, is to reduce the way goods are packaged.

"There is a bill presently before the legislature which would give some type of credit to companies who reduce the amount of material they use in packaging goods," he said.

Bright future for 'chief bottle washer'

scratch and build upon it," he said. "I was chief cook and bottle washer, but was also able to develop an interesting offering of music courses for children and adults.

"I was also successful in writing grants and obtaining financing for scholarships and facility renovations there," he added. One of the more successful courses at the center was in conjunction with Project Headstart, where music was taught to economically disadvantaged youth in the Manchester area. Conrad was named administrator in the first year of the program which is now beginning its third year.

His most recent position was as general manager of Joseph R. Pace Art, a Boston-area company that specializes in corporate art sales and art installations for residences and businesses. "Once again, I was the chief cook and bottle washer. I worked as a consultant with art galleries and art consultants and attended to everything including scheduling and booking art installations from 800 pieces at the Sheraton Needham to 100 signs at Harvard Medical School," he explained.

There is a tremendous market, Conrad said, for art installers - those people who have acquired the ability to properly display and hang artworks.

For eight years, Conrad was owner and director of the Allegro Academy of Dance, where his responsibilities included everything from public relations and advertising to fundraising. During this time, he also served as fundraiser for the Federated Arts of Manchester.

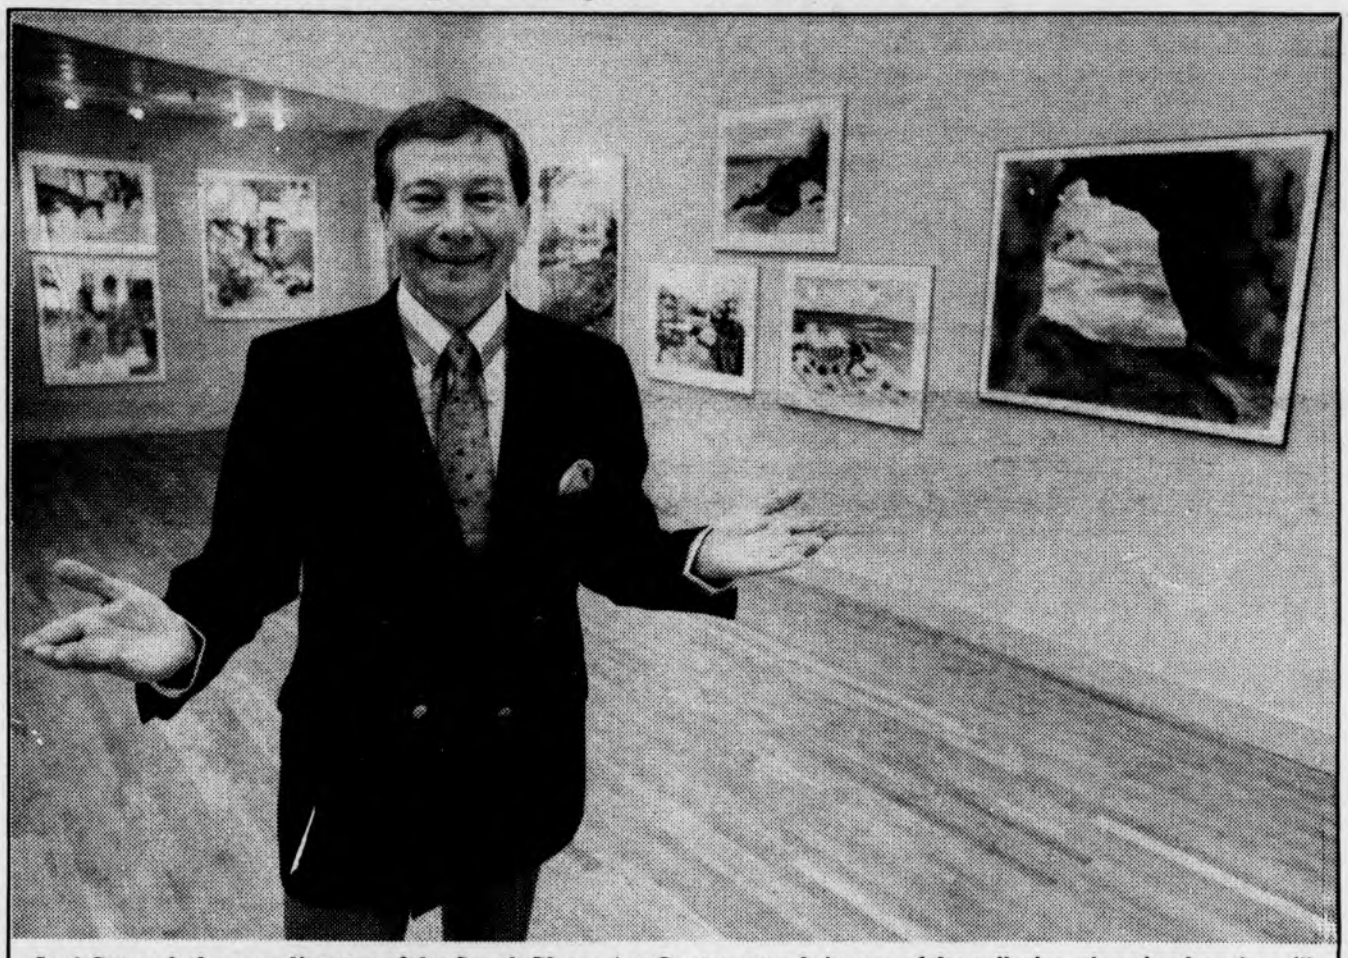
What brought the former Manhattanite down to the South Shore and its art center was an employment advertisement in the Boston newspapers. "Now I am establishing roots," he said.

He had never seen the South Shore Art Center before his employment interview, and his first reaction was "astonishment," he recalled. "I couldn't actually believe I was being considered for this job in this fabulous art center. This is the most uplifting art center I have ever been in. The potential is unlimited in developing this into a real regional center. Within the next year, we'll be getting into as many satellite centers as possible, throughout the South Shore.

"Then we have this main gallery, with a major portion of our classes held here," he said, noting with pride that enrollment is increasing steadily with a full compliment of professional instructors on board.

The life of an art center director is not all fun, however. Conrad noted with some trepidation that the building alone costs $600 each day to operate. "When I think about that, every day I realize I have my work cut out for me," he said. "And on top of that we have an ongoing capital campaign, and a large balance on this building left to pay. So we're not only in the business of daily operational expenses - but we're trying to work on an operational campaign."

There is a large staff of dedicated volunteers at the art center. Under the direction of Marion Bush, the volunteers complete necessary office functions such as telephones, receptionists and tour guides. They also assist in hanging the art for exhibit. Many volunteers are needed each year to help with the summer Festival. There is also a gift shop, featuring handmade crafts by local artists, which functions solely under the guidance of the center volunteers.



Joel Conrad, the new director of the South Shore Art Center, stands in one of the galleries, planning how he will fill the place with art and activities.

"Anyone who would like to volunteer here should contact Marion at 383-8548," Conrad noted.

His plans for the future of the art center include an expanded curriculum, encompassing courses in writing, dance workshops – "anything related to art."

He continued, "I'd like to think you could walk into any community on the South Shore and there would be a sattelite branch of the art center. We should be attracting every child and adult on the South Shore. That will take a whole strategy to develop."

The former professional singer and actor in New York City talked about the importance of understanding art forms in everyday life. "Not many people realize that art surrounds our lives," he commented. "Do you know that the arts in Boston is the third largest non-governmental employer in the city? People do not realize how much art touches their daily lives."

From his office window overlooking Cohasset Village, Conrad said he is content to be back in Cohasset.

"Yes, I was in Cohasset before," he admitted. "In 1961 I was in summer stock at the Music Circus. I used to ride my bike down by here and all the kids would shout, 'circus flea!' I thought then I'd come back and show them all - and I have!"

Young students remember King's teachings rights for black people in the 1960's lead to rights for women, and rights for sexual preference. So when we talk about civil rights, we can not just include black people. Freedom is for everyone. But everyone must work to preserve it."

For Brown, observance of Martin Luther King Day is significant "because of the goals he stood for - for all people. He wanted peace. And all people, but black people especially, should take the time to reflect on his accomplishments. They couldn't have picked a better man to honor."

And although the seventh grade students never had the opportunity to see the southern Baptist preacher, they quickly noted he was 39 when he died. "He would have been 53 this year," Keri Richards answered.

"He was so young, but he accomplished so much," Brown added.

The METCO coordinator was 12 years old, the same as her seventh grade students, when Rev. King was shot by an assassin. "I didn't really know what had been going on during the 1960's. But my mother was from Montgomery (Alabama) and she told me a lot. She talked to me about the bus boycotts, about riding in the back of a bus, and about drinking out of water fountains marked for blacks only.

"And I want these kids to know, if it hadn't been for Martin Luther King, they might not be in Cohasset today. Things such as affirmative action and integration are a direct result of his work," she added.

The METCO coordinator considered Rev. King a great man, noting that young people today "are reaping the benefits of his hard work. These kids do not know the hardships others had to endure many years ago before Martin Luther King. Society is different today," she said.

But, she warned, there are subtle words or actions by people today which prompt one to question whether social freedom has really been achieved. "When there are people like Jimmy the Greek, you have to wonder how many more actually feel like him," she said. "It definitely is going to take a lot of work, by everyone, to keep Rev. King's work alive."

Brown noted that her daughter recently won third place in a Boston writing contest on Martin Luther King. "She was born nine years after his death. But she wrote about her grandmother and how when she was little, she accidentally drank from a public water faucet for white people. A man cam up to her and yelled at her for taking a drink from the wrong faucet. This made my daughter mad and sad. She was sad for her grandmother, and mad that the man had hurt her grandmother's feelings. We talk a lot about Rev. King and what he did. I think it's very important to carry on the tradition, and his work," she explained. "I hope the holiday is used to reflect on the things he did for all people, and that we don't view it as just an extra day off from work or school."

Michelle Lemar said her parents talked about Rev. King, and she had attended weekend festivities in Boston commemorating his contributions.

Shondranette Burke-Holman noted that "sometimes in school, there's a lot of prejudice. When I first came here, some of the other students called me names. But Rev. King helped to get freedom for the blacks in this country, and things were worse a long time ago."

Michelle called Rev. King a "brave man" for enduring the humiliation and suffering caused by his non violent actions in behalf of freedom. Claudine Johnson added, " I know he was a non violent man - a peacemaker."

Raymond Jones recalled from his studies that Rev. King was always non-violent, never participating in sibling punishments despite his father's encouragement. "People did wrong things to him, like bombing his house and his church. But he never reacted with violence," he noted. "Violence breeds more violence."

Sheldon Morgan remembered Rev. King as a peacemaker who helped gain freedom for blacks, white and Indians. "He actually got his ideas about non-violence from Ghandi," he stated.

The students agreed with Rev. King's practices, and said non-violence was and remains the best way to deal with racial prejudice.

"My mother told me that years ago they had separate bathrooms for blacks and white. And sometimes the bathrooms for the blacks would just be holes in the ground," Shondranette noted.

"His bloodshed was for you," Brown told her students. "It's so important for you to remember what he did and why he did it."

The students agreed it will be just as important to relate the story about Rev. King to their children in future years. But they complained that modern textbooks do not contain enough information about Rev. King.

"They don't specify what he did. I want to see it written better, for whites and blacks to better understand what he did," Jones said.

"You know, it doesn't always have to be the schools that take the initiative. Maybe it's time for you to take the initiative," the METCO coordinator told them. "If you don't think there is enough of a celebration in honor of Rev. King, then it's up to you to begin something."

Brown assured them that more educational materials will be provided about Rev. King and the entire Civil Rights movement during the schools' observance of Black History Month in Februrary.

"And by Black History, you must realize we mean American history," she said.

Scituate Arts Association announces classes

The Scituate Arts Association Winter Classes will start at the Ellis House the week of Feb. 1. The 1988 season opens with a full program of classes in painting and drawing. Ongoing open workshops will also resume. These are open to both old and new members and do not require formal instruction.

Monday, 7 - 10 p.m. Landscape Painting in Water Color for Beginners - Elaine Wentworth. Individual attention will be stressed. Outdoor work will be planned in good weather. Begins Feb. 1, 8 weeks.$85.

Tuesday, 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Figure Drawing and Painting, Robert Cormier. This class is for students at all levels of ability. Emphasis will be placed on accuracy of drawing and on correct color relationships. Posing the model and composition will be stressed. Demonstrations and discussions of the "masters" are also important aspects of this class. Begins Feb. 2, 8 weeks $85. Model fee: $35. Tuesday, 7 - 10 p.m. Advanced Watercolor - Murray Wentworth. This class will deal with solving creative problems — from the first rough sketches to the finished work and will emphasize the use of value relationships, color harmonies, spetial depth, texture and composition. Identifying and developing a personal style will be explored. Daily individual guidance; class demonstrations. Begins Feb. 2, 8 weeks/$85.

Wednesday, 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Portraiture - Robert Cormier. Emphasis on portraiture and studio work, including lectures and question periods. Subjects covered will be materials, color theory and painting procedures, such as: blocking-in, composition, abstraction, preliminary sketches, toned canvas, placement, gesture, perspective and accuracy. Strong emphasis on value statements, thematic characteristics of color, integration of color, color translation and exaggeration. This course is for beginners, as well as more advanced students. Begins Feb, 3, 8 weeks/$85.

Thursday, 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Advanced Watercolor - Murray Wentworth - see Tuesday description. Begins Feb. 4, 8 weeks/$85. Thursday - Life Drawing Workshop - no instructor - 7:30 - 9:30 p.m. An ongoing workshop with live models. Artists use their preferred media. Clothed or draped models will pose occasionally for studies. Begins Feb. 4, 8 weeks/$30 or $5/session.

Friday, 9:30 a.m. - 3:00 p.m. - Open Workshop - no instructor. Members work from still life or photos in their choice of media. Bring lunch. A $5 donation requested per meeting. Begins Feb. 5.

Saturday, 9:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. Landscape Painting in Watercolor for Beginners - Elaine Wentworth see Monday description. Begins Feb. 6, 8 weeks/$85.

Class fees may be paid in advance, to the Scituate Arts Association Workshops, Box 211, Scituate MA 02066 (A Guild membership of $15.00 is also required) or may be paid at opening class meeting. Classes are held at the Ellis Art Center, 709 Country Way, North Scituate. Class registration and information are available at the Scituate A.A. Gallery, 131 Front St. in the Harbor, Phone 545-6150. Class size is limited at the discretion of the workshops director and will be filled according to the order in which registrations are recieved.

A memorable week for Cohasset sports

By Mike Spellman
Mariner correspondent

The Cohasset girls varsity squad got little resistance in their struggle to remain atop the South Shore small league standings this week. They also made a strong statement that they are now the team to be reckoned with on the South Shore.

Tuesday, the Skippers locked horns in Hanover with the Indians (6-1 going in), the top team in the large school division. Cohasset handled them with relative ease, walking away with a 41-29 victory. And Friday night at home, they again met up with one of the large school divisions top teams, the third-place Panthers of W/H (4-3) and with similar results, as they came out on the long end of the 57-42 humbling.

In Tuesday's game they held the Indians, who had run up a 5-0 record in their own league, to a season low 29 points. So the 41 points they were held to by the defensively-strong Hanover team was not nearly enough to avert their eighth win. Leading the way for the Skippers in the low-scoring affair was Marge Murphy (14) and Liz O'Leary (8 steals, 10 rebounds).

Friday at Cohasset High, as the final score of 57-42 indicates, the game was wide open. The game was sluggish, especially for Cohasset, in the early going. They entered the second quarter behind 12-10. However, in the second quarter the girls started to turn it around behind guard Liz O'Leary (13 points) who scored six points in the midst of a 16-0 run, which broke the game open.

In the second half, the Skippers received big contributions from forward Murphy (16 points on 7 for 9 shooting), who hit on four of her five attempts from the floor in the third quarter, and Cindy Spooner (13 points, 10 rebounds), who almost single-handedly kept the Panthers from the offensive board throughout the second half.

With eight games remaining the Skippers (7-1, 9-1), are just two wins away from another EMass Tourney berth. So, barring an unreasonable amount of misfortunes, Coach Bill Fallon should take yet another of his teams to post-season play.

Cohasset Boys Basketball

This may well be a week Skipper partisans will long remember. This is the week in which the three big winter sports teams, boys basketball, girls basketball and hockey, win a combined total of seven games while losing none.

This weekend marks the mid-point of the season, and the same big three sit atop their respective league standings and appear well on their way to post-season berths. Yes, this could easily be regarded as one of Cohasset's biggest sport weeks of all time. However, quite ironically, this might have been the case even if these three teams were held winless.

The big story this week was Cohasset's most famous non-resident son, Bryan Edwards. This past week it was largely through the efforts of this 6'2" phenom that the boys basketball squad managed to keep pace with it's inter-school rivals. However, it was his personal total of 118 points which he tallied in the pursuits of victory that are hogging all the attention.

To be honest, only 1 of 118 points really mattered to anyone, and that was point number 103, his fourteenth point in Friday's game at Whitman/Hanson High. It came at the 5:09 mark of the second quarter on a drive like hundreds before it, through traffic for a lay-up. This point, or rather two points pushed his career total to the 2,000 mark.

After the game, which the Skippers took easily 92-50, Edwards expressed relief over the fact that the milestone had been reached.

"It feels real good. I'm kind of relieved that it's passed. I knew if I worked hard enough I'd get there," he said.

Then reminded of the state record, the 2,481 points of Catholic Memorial and local legend Ronnie Perry, he said, 'Perry's record and the state title. That's what I'm shooting for now."

So the count begins: 467 points to go. However, one does not have to be a mathematician to figure out that eight (the number of games remaining on Cohasset's regular season schedule) into 467 comes out to around 58.4. Currently Edwards is averaging a cool 35 per contest. So, his first aspiration may be contingent on his second, as he may need as many games as possible to gain his goals.

Hockey

The hockey squad this week moved still closer to another post-season berth, as they came away victorious in both of their scheduled games, while staying in a first place tie with Duxbury and moving their season mark to 8-1. With nine games remaining the Skippers need just six more points (three wins) to clinch a spot in the EMass Tourney.

The boys started the week Wednesday, on their home ice, as expected, with a hardy drubbing, 10-1, of a hapless Scituate team, thus moving the Sailors season-long losing streak to eight games. The key to the game was the Skippers' jumping out early, keeping up the intensity, and then never looking back.

Leading the way in this slaughter, and adding to his league leading totals, was senior wing Todd Fitzpatrick, who logged a hat-trick plus an additional tally (for good measure) for goals 14-17 on the season. Also having big games for the winning team were senior center Jamie Hoffman and sophomore wing Brian Pompeo, each ringing up a deuce of their own.

Saturday afternoon, despite the fact that they were again taking on a team that, on paper anyway, was far inferior, the Skippers anticipated a hard-fought game against Hull (2-5-1 going in, and it did not take long before their fears were confirmed.) The boys, behind goals from Fitzpatrick and Craig Mulcahy on a power-play, clung to a 2-1 lead at the first intermission. The players, their opponents and everyone else in the building knew had it not been for some nifty goal-minding by senior Peter Sandblom and more than a little good fortune the Pirates, who outshot the Skippers 16-8, may well have had the advantage at the period's end.

In the second period both teams picked up where they left off in the first period, which saw six minors, one seven and a half minute misconduct, and several minor skirmishes.

Let there be no mistake about it. There is no love loss between these two teams. Despite the fact that no goals were scored in the second period there was, judging from the reactions from the Hull crowd's reactions, a lot of excitement. Each time a Cohasset player fell to the ice or was rammed to the boards, a loud cry of approval would go up.

However, early in the final period, just 1:40 in to be exact, the Skipper supporters finally had there chance to shout and put their hands together when senior wing Mike Anderson took a lead pass near center ice from Hoffman. Anderson put a slick move on the lone Pirate defender between himself and the net, and then walked in on goalie Kevin Gibbons and tucked a wrist shot between his pads.

Just four minutes later the Skippers delivered their version of the K.O. punch when Mulcahy, on a well screened slap shot from the point, whistled the puck cleanly past the left skate of Gibbons.

The final eight minutes of the contest were then, unfortunately, reduced to little more than a slugfest which came to a head when Hull captain Scott Cutliff lined up Sandblom as he futilely streaked down ice for a puck the goalie easily beat him to, but levelled him none the less well after he had gotten rid of it.

Following this occurrence, the violence which ensued, and the subsequent misconducts, tensions escalated steadily. Therefore, the late goal by Cohasset senior Danny Pompeo, which wrapped up the scoring at 5-1, served as little more than a brief interruption to the not so jovial festivities. Needless to say, at game's end the traditional lining up for handshakes was dispensed with.

PARISH COMMITTEE NOTES—The Religious Education Committee has requested several pieces of audio video equipment from the Parish Committee. Before purchasing them we thought it wise to inform the Church membership in the event that one of you might have a decent secondhand piece of equipment you no longer need: 1. Video cassette player; 2. Case for video cassettes; 3. Audio cassette recorder player; 4. Case for audio cassettes; 5. Mono turntable with speaker.

Should you be interested in donating any of the above items, please contact Bryan Bruce, 383-6065 or the church office, 383-1100.

The Parish Committee wishes to extend its gratitude on behalf of the entire church membership to our Choir Director, Carolyn Curtis and our Religious Education Director, Christine Demers for the beautiful Christmas "event" Sunday, Dec. 20. It was a lovely "first" in what, we hope, will be many choir/church school programs.

KUDOS FROM THE PARISH COMMITTEE—Kudos to all the parents who helped with preparing costumes and other arrangements for the Christmas Pageant.

CHRISTMAS CONCERT—Thanks to all those who generously supported our Christmas Concert. A check for $1,770 was presented to the South Shore Habitat for Humanity this past week.

CHRISTMAS CARDS WANTED—If you throw away your Christmas cards, please bring them into the office for a Village Fair project.

Second Congregational Church

ANNUAL MEETING—The annual meeting of the Second Congregational Church will be held immediately after service Sunday, Jan. 24.

ANNUAL REPORTS—may be picked up at the office during this week, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon. If out-of-towners would like a copy, please call the church office and we'll drop one in the mail.

NO YOUTH GROUP MEETING—Jan. 24. Next meeting January 31, 4:30 p.m.

NEW BEGINNINGS—A support group for those separated, divorced or widowed has been formed by the Congregational Church of Norwell (Rte. 123) and meets each Monday evening, starting at 7:30 p.m. Contact Bob Davenport (383-1932), Gary Ritts (383-0345), or the Norwell church for further information.

OPEN FLOWER DATES—January 31 and February 7. Please call Fran Walton at 383-1798 or the church office, 383-0345, if you are interested.

The trend of bank mergers and loss of local control frequently leads to measuring the value of your business on the basis of the size of your account. Some banks require large deposits as a prerequisite for full, personal service.

This is especially unfortunate for small and medium sized accounts since they frequently need more attention and personal commitment than the large ones.

If you find yourself in this situation, make it a point to visit one of our local offices (one is sure to be near your home or business). We welcome your account ... whatever its size, and we'll treat you with the courtesy and respect you deserve.

Schools awarded state grant

The Cohasset public schools has been awarded a $3,108 grant under the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs program.

Governor Michael Dukakis expressed his appreciation to Supt. Stephen Hart and to all superintendent's participating in this program under the Drug Free Schools Act.

Michael Gill, Health Education Coordinator for the Cohasset school system, with the assistance of Dr. Lonnie Carten of Learning Center Associates and the Cohasset Community Health Education Advisory Committee developed the grant application and will implement the program under the direction of Supt. Hart.

Drama rehearsals

The Cohasset High School Drama Workshop is putting in long hours of rehearsal these days in preparation for the presentation of two new one-act plays. The plays, to be performed Feb. 4 and 6, are "Act Three, Scene Five" and "Fortress."

"Act Three, Scene Five" is a play by Terry Ortwein. It deals with the egos and jealousies of five students rehearsing Act three, Scene five of "Romeo and Juliet." A growing off stage relationship parallels the story of Romeo and Juliet. Cast members include Melissa Greiner, Jason Marsac, Michelle Meagher, Erin Monaghan and Jen Coley.

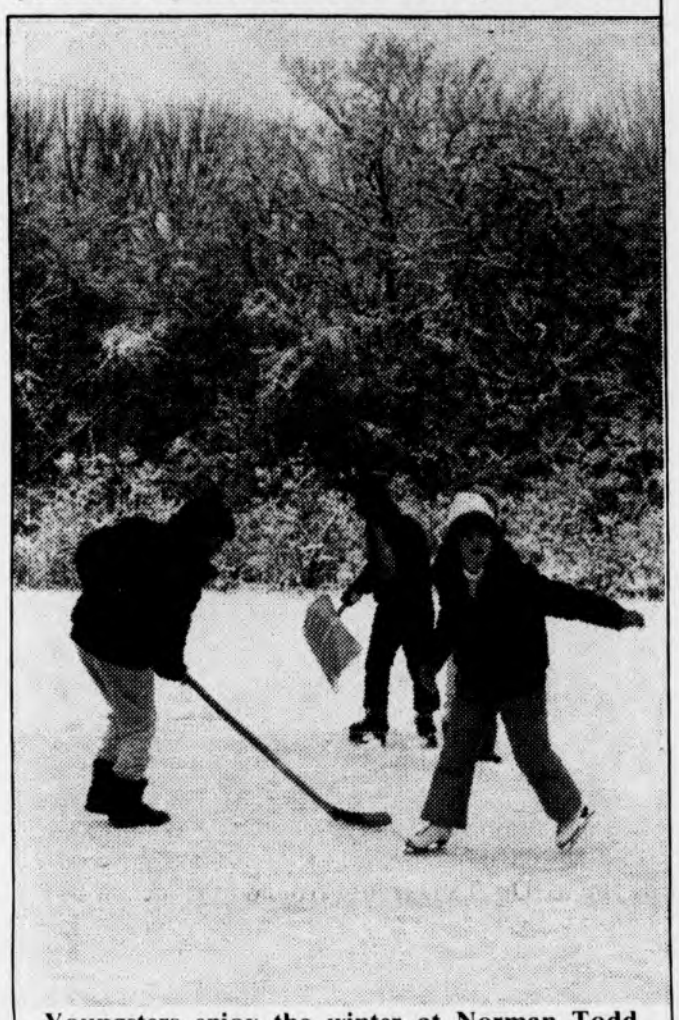
"Fortress", written by Michael Scanlan, tell of the emotional turmoil of two friends, Billy and Kim, and the eventual acceptance of each other. An ensemble interacts and reflects the events of the play.

The cast includes Michele Casolaro, Joe Mazza, Erin Powell, Scott Caristo, Katie Tolini, Jack Beddows, Rebecca McCarthy, Heather St. Onge, Pam Haase, Jay Staunton, Doug Moe, Jen Coley, Erin Monaghan, Michelle Meagher, Allison Reilly, Jack Beddows, Adam Durant, Zach Hochkeppel, J. Gaston, Lauren Kalita, Nelly Hemassi and Jen Plante.

Following the Feb. 6 performance there will be a reception and discussion with the authors about their works.

Directing both plays is Ron Emmons, Cohasset's director of dramatic arts. The plays are the school's entries in the State Drama Festival, and the first level of competition will be held Feb. 27.

Cohasset has been a state finalist for the past four years and hopes to repeat it's success again this year.



Youngsters enjoy the winter at Norman Todd Pond in Cohasset, shoveling off the snow in order to play hockey.

True learning experience

Cultural Homestay Institute, a non-profit intercultural exchange program, will bring 15 Japanese students, ages 18 to 23, to Cohasset between March 3 and April 2.

The students are visiting to improve their conversational English and to learn about American culture.

The students will attend English as a second language classes and will participate in various field trips. The homestay portion of the trip is seen as the most valuable aspect of the experience for both students and host families as they learn about each other's cultures.

Although most of the families for this community are recruited, there are still a few openings. Should you be interested in hosting, please call Jill Suddath at 925-3428.

Suicide Prevention

There will be a speaker from The Samaritans, a suicide prevention organization, giving a presentation at the Parish House, 23 North Main St., Tuesday, Jan. 19, at 7 p.m.

She will be discussing adolescent suicide, how to recognize a suicidal young person, what steps parents should take, how to help children after a suicide in their peer group, and ways parents can reduce the risk of their younger children becoming suicidal as adolescents.

Reading is fundamental

READING IS FUNDAMENTAL, a program to encourage the children to do more outside reading. Upon completion, the children are encouraged to swap books. It is hoped that the childen will be encouraged to read rather than watch television.

Mrs. Murphy, the librarian at the Deer Hill School, was offered a grant to purchase more books from Mr. Hart, the superintendent of the schools.

To get the grant, she had to acquire one quarter of the money she was going to need in order to obtain the books. After she obtained the money, which was given to her by the PSO, she received the grant.

Mrs. Murphy then found out that Scholastic would give her more reading material for less money. She ordered books for the collaborative and the 4th, 5th, and 6th grades.

After she got the books, she decided to have a program where each student selected a book.

After students read their books, Mrs. Murphy will give them a strip of colored paper on which the students will write the title of the book and their names.

Mrs. Murphy will then take the strips, form them into a chain, and tape them up on the corridor walls.

Having these books read in an inter-student exchange program, Deer Hill hopes that someday the chain will go around the whole school.

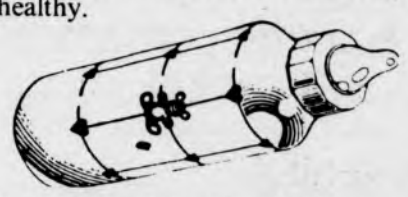
Helpful hints from students on how to care for baby

Students in the first and second grade at the Osgood School were asked to think about helpful hints for caring for a baby. The suggestions are on exhibit outside the Resource Room. They will also be used to form a book, to be sent to a friend of Ms. Balch's who is expecting a baby in March. Here are their suggestions:

Feed him milk with soft food every day whenever you eat. Always take him wherever you go. Don't get hard things for his teeth.

Put him to bed early, at 6:00. Get a good babysitter who will take him out for a walk every day. Make sure it's healthy.



Tom
Grade 2

Feed the baby milk 10 times a day. Give him applesauce four times a day. Make sure the baby has a carseat and a seatbelt on. Make sure you drive slowly.

Make sure you don't give the baby candy. Make sure no one beats the baby up. Make sure you don't leave the baby around outside. Make sure the baby doesn't fall out the window.

Make sure the baby doesn't get locked in a dark place. Make sure the baby doesn't go to the bathroom on the seat.

Keith
Grade 2

You have to fill five bottles of milk. Two for at night and three for the day. Wake up in the night and give the baby the two bottles of milk. Rock the baby in the cradle.

The first toy for a Christmas present is a rattle. The baby should have clothes and diapers. If the baby is having a toothache, get some baby aspirin and tooth medicine.

You should be nice to the baby. If the baby gets lost around the house, look for him and if you can't find him call the police.

Take the baby wherever you go. The baby could get sick from eating paper. Make sure the baby doesn't eat markers. Make sure the baby doesn't fall down the stairs.

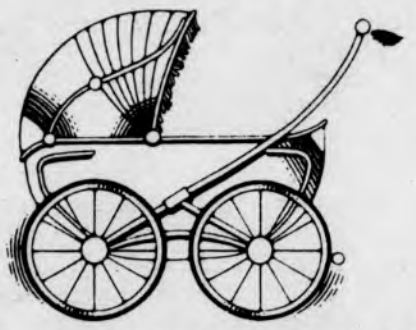
Grade 2



Put it in a carriage if you go somewhere. Then push the baby around. Give them baby food three times a day. Put him in a crib at 2:00, so he can play with his little toys. When he wakes up, rock him so he does not cry. Change his diaper two times a day.

Tim
Grade 1

When you take a diaper off, you undo the hook, and then throw the diaper away, then put a new one on. You can't let them walk around with only a diaper, they catch cold.

Put him to bed at 3:00. When he wakes up, you feed him, then watch TV with him. When you put him to bed again at 8:00, she hugs and kisses the teddy bear and goes to sleep.

Jim
Grade 1

You should feed it baby food every few hours. The first time they have an accident or break something, be a little nice.

The first toy should be a rattle. The second toy should be a teddy bear, so he can squeeze it. Don't rock it too fast in the cradle, or he might bump his head.

Kim
Grade 1

Let her or him look out the window. When the baby is one year old, don't take off the diaper when the baby tells you to. Don't shake him around too much or he'll throw up. Every hour check the bottle, because they might run out of milk.

Justin
Grade 1

Change diapers a lot of times, when they're dirty. Take care of him. Give him a bottle when he's hungry. Burp him after he drinks. Put him to sleep in a bed, at 9:00.

Take him to the doctor's to have a checkup. He has to have pizza for lunch. He has to eat a cheeseburger for supper.

Shaun
Grade 1

A mother has to feed a baby every day. A mother gives a baby juice. A mother gives a baby baby-food. At dinner time, a baby is eating food and the mother gives him some milk and orange juice.

A baby sleeps at night time. The baby wakes up at 12:00 and cries, because he wants orange juice and milk. A mother drives a baby to the store and buys some food and milk. A baby sleeps in the morning.

Frank
Grade 2

A baby can drink orange juice and milk and cranberry juice in the bottle. Check on the baby to see if she is crying. The mother has to feed the baby food. A mother has to change a baby's diaper six days.

A baby needs a bath right after dinner, then he has to go to bed. Make sure you have a seatbelt on the baby. A mother has to hold a baby, or else the baby will fall.

Rosemarie
Grade 2

Be careful with them. Don't hit them. Walk them carefully. Rock them when she's crying. Play with them with baby blocks. Get him a stuffed animal.

Play with his rattle. Change him two times a day. Feed him baby food twice a day. Feed him a bottle three times a day.

Show and Tell

The children in Mrs. Price's kindergarten class at the Osgood School returned for the new year of A, B, C. What a wonderful way to start the week for all the icy weather.

Wish we had a camera to record the expression on Ethan Begley's face when he looked into his show-and-tell bag and found a puddle of water. His expression was wonderful when he exclaimed "My show and tell disappeared." With a little detective work and our intelligence we deducted it was an icicle.

We had an Indian headdress brought in by Jamey Simons. Perhaps it was from a tribe in Canada.

A plastic jar held an insect, brought by Jacqueline Kahn.

An exciting event at the Miller house on New Year's Eve brought in our next show and tell. Geralyn brought in a photo of an interesting infant — her new niece, Lauren.

Jamie Strebel molded an island with grass. He placed it on blue water. In the center of the island was a tree and leaning against the tree was Jamie fishing.

14 enter art contest

Colleen Lucas of Cohasset High School has entered the artwork of 14 of her students in the Boston Regional Preliminary of The Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards.

The students are Jon Hunter, Corey DeSantis, Jacob Powell, Kerri Miele, Joshua Stevenson, Bart Weisenfluh, Matt Norris, Melissa Nothnagle, Kirsten Pounder, Alexandra Redfield, Dennis Leary, Megan Terry, Michelle Migliaccio and Vickie Kelly.

Their artwork was selected for entry due to its creativity and excellence of composition. A panel of distinguished artists and art educators judged all the entries at Mass. College of Art, the host for this regional preliminary. The panelists selected works to be exhibited and awarded Gold Keys.

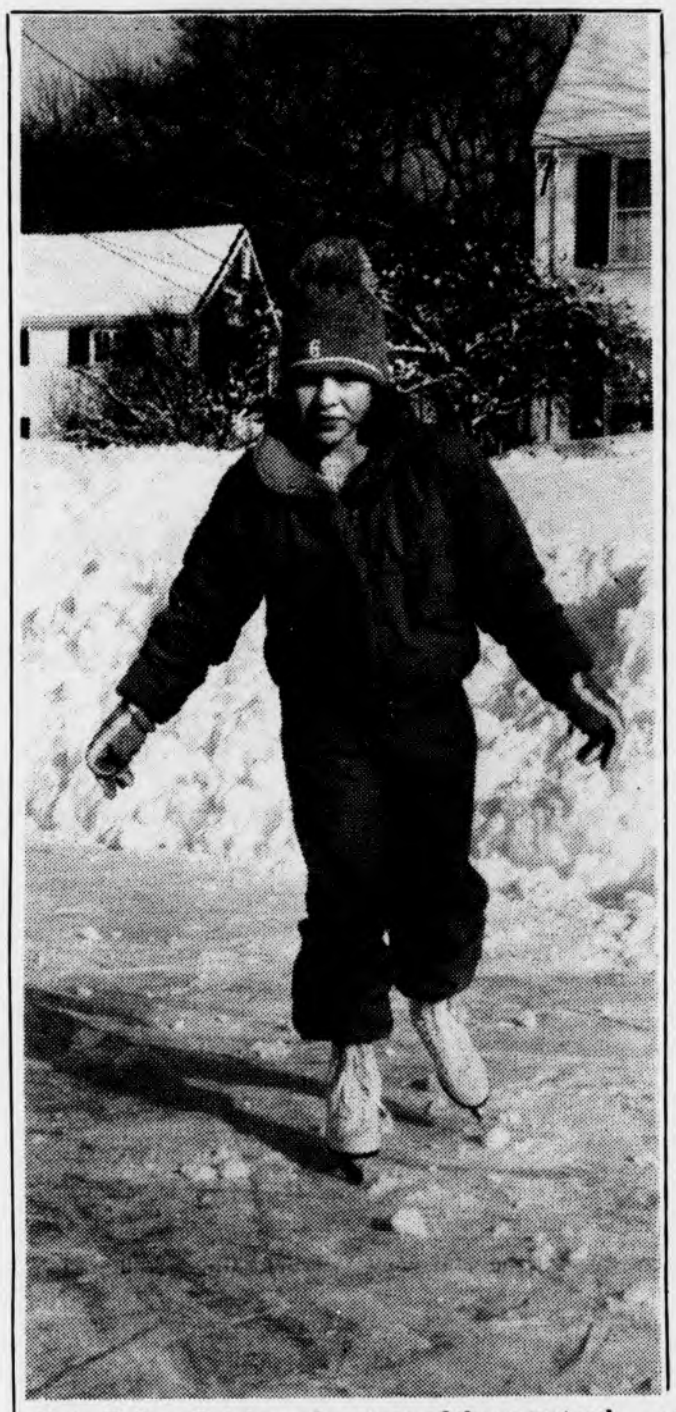
In addition, the outstanding portfolio from this region (a collection of eight art pieces or 10 photographs from an individual student) will be awarded a $1,000 scholarship from The Boston Globe. The award winning works from this region are being exhibited at Mass. Art through Jan. 30.

Following this exhibit, the works will be forwarded to Boston where further judging will determine the state's Blue Ribbon finalists for national judging in New York.

This is the 61st year of the Scholastic Art Awards program, conducted nationally by Scholastic, Inc. The program is sponsored in Massachusetts and New Hampshire by The Boston Globe and is administered by The Artists Foundation, Inc.

The Awards program has been developed to encourage achievement in the visual arts in grades 7-12. Awards are given in 15 varied classifications.

In 1987, more than 6,000 pieces were submitted in Massachusetts; of these 500 were awarded Gold Keys and 38 received national honors.



Kate Fallon, 9, takes advantage of the recent sub-freezing temperatures and skates on the Cohasset Common pond.

Kindergarten changeover

Kindergarten changeover will take place Monday, Jan. 25. Kindergarteners will exchange morning and afternoon class assignments.

Morning Kindergarteners will be assigned to the afternoon session while current afternoon assignees will become morning Kindergarteners.

Morning Kindergarten hours are from 8:55 to 11:30 a.m. while afternoon session meets from 12:15 to 2:55 p.m.

Students enter art competition

Fourteen Cohasset students have been selected to enter "The Boston Globe" Scholastic Art Award Competition.

Colleen Lucas, art teacher at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, said the artwork was selected for entry due to its creativity and excellence of composition.

The students contributing works are: Carey DeSantis, Jon Hunter, Vickie Kelly, Dennis Leary, Kerri Miele, Michelle Migliaccio, Matt Norris, Melissa Nothnagle, Kirsten Pounder, Jacob Powell, Alexandra Redfield, Joshua Stevenson, Megan Terry, and Bart Weisenfluh.

A distinguished panel of artists and art educators will judge all entries at the Massachusetts College of Art. Gold Keys will be awarded to art works selected to be exhibited, and the outstanding portfolio will be awarded a $1,000 scholarship. The state's Blue Ribbon finalists for national judging in New York will be selected from this exhibit.

The awards program in Massachusetts and New Hampshire has been sponsored by "The Boston Globe" and administered by the Artists Foundation, Inc. The program has been developed to encourage achievement in the visual arts in grades 7-12.

Rewarding program

On behalf of all the third graders at the Osgood School, Mrs. Alcott, Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Montuari and Mrs. Schadhauser would like to thank the P.S.O. for sponsoring the Native American Program from Plimoth Plantation Jan. 6.

It was led by Cheryl Coblyn and Sonia Lopes who interpreted the Wampanoag Culture of the 17th century, providing tangible evidence that the Native American presence continues to the present day.

State grants for local housing

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Housing Authority is the happy recipient of three state housing grants totalling about $2 million, the largest amount ever awarded to that agency.

"Now we can start moving in the right direction," the authority's Executive Director Barbara Clain said this week. "It's a step in the right direction. Now we just have to keep going."

In the past two months, the Cohasset Housing Authority has received three grants from the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) to modernize the elderly housing complex, to begin site work on a home for retarded adults, and to develop 12 units of affordable housing.

The authority was notified last week about the third grant which, according to chairman John Muncey, amounted to $1.14 million for the construction of 12 three-bedroom affordable housing units. That is, he noted, the largest grant ever awarded to the Cohasset Housing Authority.

But according to state guidelines, once a pre-construction conference is scheduled between the state and the housing authority, Cohasset has 180 days to find a site for the units. "The clock doesn't start ticking until that meeting with the state, but after that we are under the gun to find a location," according to Muncey, who said the authority will begin immediately to search for a suitable location and then hire a consultant who will guide them through the entire process.

"First thing we'll do is review all town-owned land," he said. "The state is going on the premise that we can build three-bedroom units for $95,000 each. That's not a lot of money when it includes purchasing the land. It will be especially tough in Cohasset when an acre of buildable land costs between $125,000 to $130,000."

DEQE responds to CHL appeal

A prehearing conference is scheduled in early February regarding the town's appeal of the state-approved expansion of Cohasset Heights Ltd.

The board of health decided to appeal the Dec. 17 approval by the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) which allows expansion of the commercial landfill into Area Four and adds more than two years to the operation.

In response to a Jan. 8 meeting with Sen. William Golden, DEQE official Thomas McLoughlin said a prehearing conference will be scheduled in early February, and the matter will proceed to a hearing "as expeditiously as possible."

Sen. Golden presented McLoughlin's response to selectmen Monday night, just minutes after he received it. Since he had not read the correspondence, Sen. Golden said he would have to wait to comment.

The local board of health appealed DEQE's Dec. 17 conditional expansion approval to Cohasset Heights, stating it "gives the appearance of impropriety, administrative malfeasance, violation of due process, the exertion of undue influences and an abrogation of the DEQE's protective duties."

The board's special counsel, Michael Leone, requested the conditional approval be revoked and that CHL be ordered to comply with the prerequisites of an operating plan established by DEQE in the July correspondence.

He also requested the court schedule the meeting between local and state officials "to establish a time-frame within which CHL must comply with the provisions of the Department's July 28 letter."

The senator met with the DEQE official earlier this month to discuss the town's concerns regarding expansion at the private landfill. After the state granted approval to Cohasset Heights Ltd. to expand, the Cohasset Board of Health voted to appeal the decision.

The board of health alleged the state's approval was a

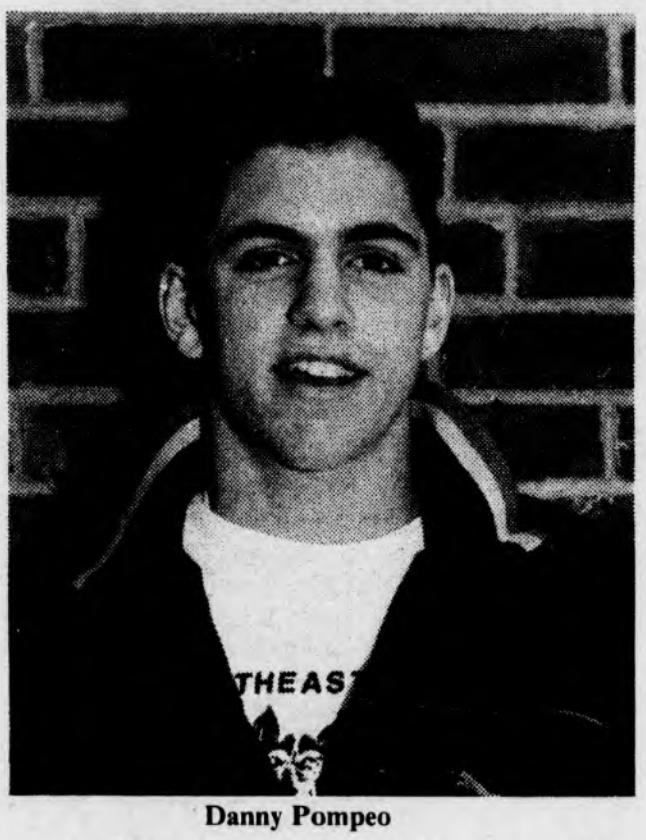
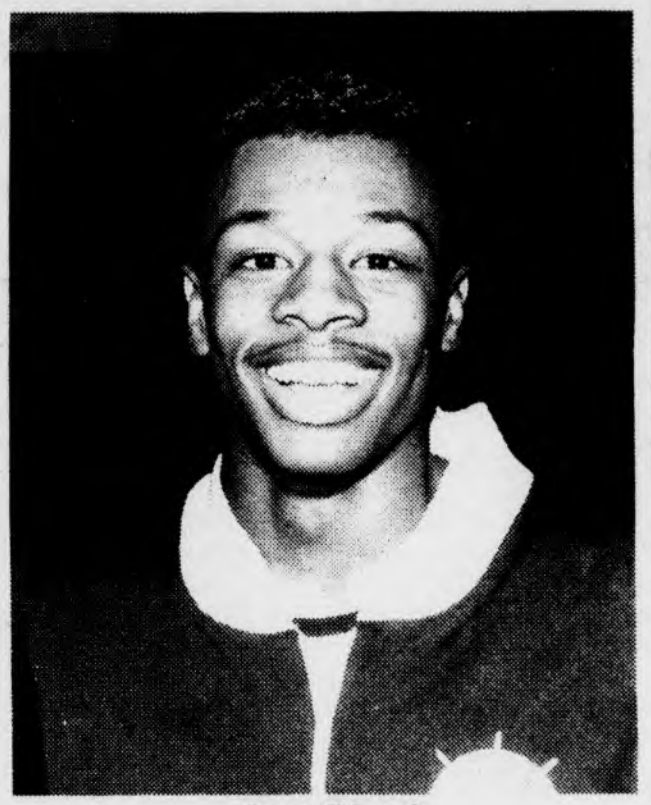
Cohasset record-setters



Danny Pompeo



Bryan Edwards

The doldrums have not set in this winter at Cohasset High School. It has been a season of new school and state records. It has been a time to celebrate the extraordinary accomplishments of our fine athletes.

● New scoring total

A "complete" hockey player has been showered with honors, following his record-breaking performance on the ice last weekend.

Danny Pompeo, a quiet 17 year-old senior, broke the Cohasset High School scoring record without fanfare or loud applause. His 149 career points surpassed a record set by Danny Bowen in 1983. Coincidentally, Pompeo was a seventh grade manager of the team when Bowen accomplished his record-setting mark at the high school.

Pompeo has played center this year for the Skippers, although Coach Dennis Walsh noted he could have an outstanding game at any position. "Last year during the state tournament, a couple of our guys were out sick, and I asked Danny to fill in at defense. He's the type of kid who's willing to do anything, and he does it well," Walsh commented.

"In a real quiet way, he's the leader of our team. The other kids really look up to him," his coach

● The state's best

What can be said about Bryan Edwards that has not already been said countless times before?

That he's the top basketball player in New England? Not even close, this honor has been adorned on him as if it were a title, such as Duke or Lord.

That he's widely considered to have the best point-guard skills in high school ranks on the continent? This contention has spread like wildfire ever since the highly acclaimed "hoop-Scoop" magazine, based in Louisville, KY, suggested it.

What then? That he's a phenomonal athlete? That he's a top-notch shooter, a nifty passer, and excellent creater, a surprisingly adept rebounder . . . ? No matter how it's approached or reported, at this point, it will still be redundant. To every high school basketball fan and every college scout on the planet, this is yesterday's news.

Everything that could possibly be of interest to

Sewer agreement still in limbo

Cohasset sewer commissioners remain optimistic that an intermunicipal agreement will be signed "very soon" with Hull.

Commissioners Ted Guild and Gary Vanderweil attended a meeting last week at the Boston headquarters of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) along with Hingham and Hull sewer commissioners.

"At this point," Guild said, "we don't feel we have an agreement with Hull we can bring before town meeting and recommend to them.

"They had a draft ready for us to sign, but we want to modify it before we recommend it to town meeting," he continued. Because the agreement is a matter of litigation, the commissioners can not divulge specifics of the contract.

Guild acknowledged Cohasset is anxious to sign an agreement with Hull which would allow Cohasset to pipe its sewerage into the Hull wastewater treatment facility. Design of the system must be prepared and approved before the end of the state's fiscal year, Sept. 30. If the design has not been approved by that time, there will be no ninety percent state and federal money available for the construction. Cohasset currently tops the list of communities where the money will be made available this fiscal year.

Hull has already scheduled a Feb. 29 special town meeting to approve the intermunicipal agreement with Cohasset.

"If both commissions approve the agreement, then we would like to schedule a special town meeting prior to the annual meeting," Guild said. "We have to get going if we want to get those allocated funds before Sept. 30."

Guild said there are a "a number of points" which have delayed an agreement between the two towns. "We'll be living with this for the next 30 years. It has to be something I'm comfortable with because I'll be here for the next 30 years," Guild said.

In a report to the Hingham Sewer Commission chairman, Carl Traina said DEQE meeting "did not accomplish anything. There is no new news."

Traina said the state indicated it would fund certain things and not others and, "The price tag went up for Cohasset," he said.

According to Traina, some of the unfundable items are a screening facility and a new press, which Traina said DEQE couldn't recommend although they said emphatically, "Let's get some plans in here for the septage facility because we think we can fund that, so the upgrade of the Hull septage facility is a fundable deal."

Brian Jeans, DEQE deputy director, told the Mariner in a telephone interview both Hull and Cohasset have an opportunity for 90 percent funding if they act immediately.

"Both communities are on the priority funding list,"

Cohasset's week . . .

Little Harbor meeting

The public is invited to discuss the preliminary results of diagnostic testing in Little Harbor.

Representatives of IEP, the consultants hired to complete the testing, will attend the public meeting Feb. 17 at 8 p.m. at the Town Hall.

One-half of the testing has been completed, and results of the tests will be discussed. Samples of water testing and a slide presentation will also be discussed during the meeting sponsored by IEP.

Following this second public hearing, IEP representatives will interpret the data and make preliminary suggestions regarding the elimination of pollution within Little Harbor. One-half of the study has been completed, according to IEP official Dave Worden.

Census mailed

Census forms have been mailed this week to all Cohasset residents.

Town Clerk Frances Marks reminds all residents to fill out the forms and return them to the town clerk's office by Thursday, Feb. 25.

If anyone has not received a census, please contact Town Clerk Marks at 383-2210.

Kern named to state committee

Barbara A. Kern of Cohasset, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards, has been appointed to represent the Association on the solid waste regulations advisory committee of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

The committee will be reviewing and advising on the siting criteria required by the Commonwealth's new solid waste law.

The association represents elected and appointed Board of Health members throughout the state and serves as an office of information and education to these members.

The Massachusetts Association of Health Boards has been involved with solid waste issues for many years, and worked on the present law to assure that Board of Health concerns were addressed in the final draft.

The solid waste law continues the process of siting facilities by local boards of health, using statewide siting criteria. The law requires that regulations be promulgated for all solid waste facilities and that the application fee which boards may charge be set by regulation.

The representative of the Massachusetts Association of Health Boards on these committees will address local board of health concerns throughout the drafting process.

Election update

There are several candidates who have filed nomination papers for the April annual election.

Incumbent sewer commissioner Raimund Vanderweil Jr. of Jerusalem Road will run again for a three-year term of office. Lot W. Bates has also taken out nomination papers for that same position.

Sigrid Carey of James Lane has taken out nomination papers for a three-year seat on the Paul Pratt Library trustees. And Katharine H. Sturtevant of Ripley Road has also taken out nomination papers for a three-year term on the board of trustees. Incumbents Agnes McCann and Elizabeth F. Eaton have indicated they will seek re-election to the board. Trustee David Wadsworth will not seek re-election to the seat he has held for the past three years.

Blizzard stories

Next week marks the 10th anniversary of the Blizzard of 1978.

If anyone has an interesting story they would like to retell regarding the Blizzard of 1978, please submit it to the Cohasset Mariner, P.O. Box 71. Or, you can drop it in our news drop boxes at the Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy or Cohasset News Store.

The stories should relate how you or your family survived the great blizzard. The stories may be handwritten, but please double-space your correspondence.

New Mariner home

The Hingham and Cohasset Mariners have found a new home.

Following last week's fire in Hingham Square that destroyed our office, files and photos, we have set up business once again.

The Mariner is now located at 44 North Street, above Lovell's Florist Shop. We have a telephone with the same number, 749-5393, and a news drop box in case you find no one in the office.

Lois Yunker will be in the office each weekday morning, except Wednesday our printing day, from 9 a.m. to noon. She will be available to accept your news releases, assist you with advertising questions, and answer your questions.

During the past week, a number of Hingham residents generously offered their help and services to us. We wish to thank everyone in Hingham who offered us files and records we lost in the fire.

We especially thank Gordon Hersey for pointing us in the right direction and helping to find us a new home in the building owned by Katherine Crane and her daughter Jackie Caulfield. We thank the New England Telephone Co. for prompt service, new telephone books and for providing all fire victims with free re-installations.

Voter registration

The Cohasset board of registrars will meet three times in February to register voters for the March 8 presidential primary election.

The registrars will meet Tuesday, Feb. 2 from 7:30 to 9 p.m., Saturday, Feb. 6 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Tuesday, Feb. 9 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. for residents who would like to register to vote, or change their party affiliation. Feb. 9 will be the last day to register for the March 8 presidential primary election.

Stop & Shop opening

The long-awaited Super Stop and Shop will open Saturday morning, just hours after its sister store at 790 Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Rte. 3A) closes its doors after 26 years.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle, and Stop and Shop developer Donald Staszko will participate in a ribbon-cutting ceremony Saturday, Jan. 30 at 7:45 a.m. The new 48,714 square foot super-supermarket will replace the Stop and Shop at the Tedeschi Plaza. That store, which opened in Cohasset in 1962, will close its doors at 10 p.m. Friday, Jan. 29.

Tedeschi Realty, owners of the property where the older supermaket is located, plan to renovate the store into three smaller retail outlets.

The new supermarket was originally scheduled to be a 24-hour operation. But a bylaw adopted at the October special town meeting restricted the hours of commercial business operations in Cohasset from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. The Super Stop and Shop will be open Mondays through Saturdays from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 9 p.m.

A company spokesman said the entire store will be completed in time for Saturday's grand opening. A Super Stop and Shop usually employs 300 to 350 people, the spokesman stated, and the Cohasset store is still seeking for additional personnel.

William Ryan of Pembroke, a 27-year veteran of the company, was named manager of the new Cohasset store. He was manager of the Saugus Stop and Shop in 1981, and opened the company's first super store in Pembroke the following year. He was later transferred to the Super Stop and Shop in Dedhan before becoming manager of the current Cohasset Stop and Shop on Rte. 3A.

William Ryan, the manager of Cohasset's new Super Stop and Shop.

The Cohasset super store will feature a fresh fish market, food-to-go, a bakery, a food bazaar featuring 150 different cheeses, a florist shop, video rental center and a Barnes and Noble bookstore.

Jimmy Fund honors Chief Pelletier

At its annual meeting Dec. 17, the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association established the Hector Pelletier Award for Outstanding Service to the Jimmy Fund.

The fund, dedicated to the late Cohasset Police Chief, will be presented each year to the Association member who best carries on Chief Pelletier's commitment to the cause of cancer research.

The award's first recipient was Amherst Chief Donald Maia. Chief Maia called Hector Pelletier "a giant both in law enforcement and in caring about people. Hector just didn't believe it was enough to go through life simply doing your job and calling it a day. He was always looking for ways to help people."

Pelletier served as Chief of Polce in Cohasset from 1927 to 1967. Even after his retirement, he remained active in law enforcement by serving as Secretary - Treasurer of the Chiefs Association, a post he kept until his death in 1976.

A close friend of the Jimmy Fund's founder, Dr. Sidney Farber, Chief Pelletier was a frequent visitor of the children being treated for cancer by Dr. Farber. He soon became committed to helping the Jimmy Fund find cures for cancer by becoming one of its most avid fund raisers.

His commitment was contagious and by the early '50's, Chief Pelletier had convinced his fellow Chiefs of Police to adopt the Jimmy Fund as the Association's official charity. That relationship continues today and in 1987, the Chiefs of Police raised $200,000 for cancer research and treatment.

Old Colony environment report almost ready

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

Restoration of the Old Colony Railroad inched microscopically closer to its goal at a meeting of the Citizens' Advisory Committee for the Old Colony Railroad Rehabilitation Project Jan. 21, at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce in Quincy.

Steve Polechronis, MBTA project manager of the OCP, said the committee was nearing the end of the lengthy environmental process, and most of the material for inclusion into the Draft Environmental Impact Report Study (DEIS) was almost ready.

"It meets both the state and federal requirements," he said.

Although the reports were to be ready for a committee acceptance vote at the Feb. 25 meeting, Polechronis felt it would be imprudent to try to meet that deadline because of anticipated problems with the Urban Mass Transit Administration (UMTA).

Polechronis explained that in order to get the DEIS on the Federal Register and mailed out to federal agencies, permission must first be obtained from UMTA.

"There is a substantial question in my mind as to whether or not they [UMTA] will give that permission," said Polechronis.

The problems appeared to arise when UMTA Administrator Ralph Stanley left the agency and Alfred DelliBovi, the deputy administrator, assumed Stanley's position.

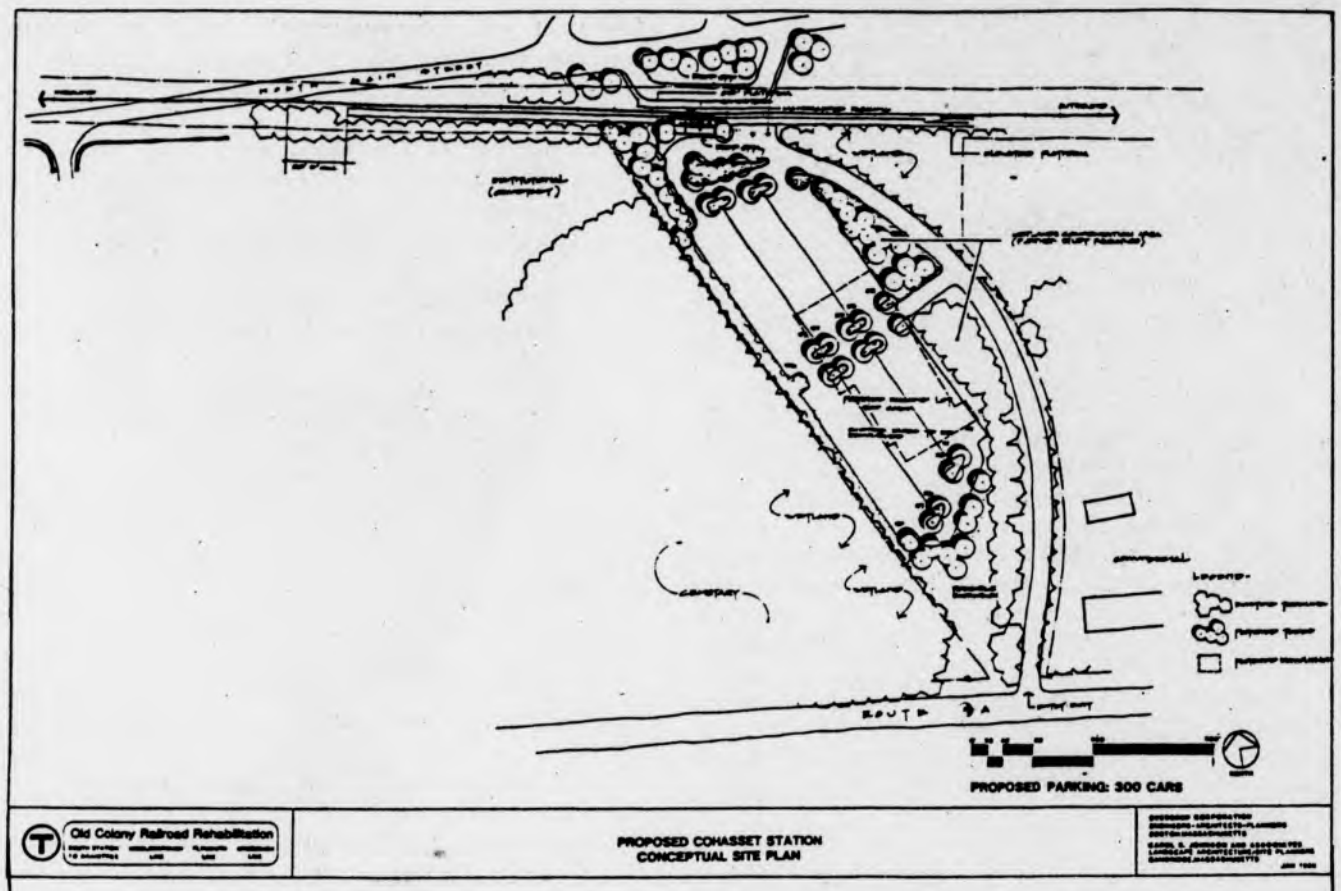
Polechronis said there could be problems obtaining federal funding because DelliBovi was not perhaps as informed as he could be in the area of Massachusetts transportation.

"We think Mr. DelliBovi perhaps didn't have as much information as he should have had relative to Massachusetts' performance in the transit area," he said.

Polechronis was referring to statements in various newspapers which were attributed to DelliBovi in which he gave the impression that Massachusetts and the MBTA had not, in recent years, been putting up their fair share or impressive share of transit costs.

Polechronis said the statement was not true.

"In a meeting with UMTA, following the statement, the MBTA presented clear-cut evidence that, in fact, we have and the Legislature has been quite generous," Polechronis said.



The proposed Old Colony station on Rte. 3A which extends to North Main Street.

There is a possibility the restoration project could be funded without federal assistance, at least for the present.

Terry Fancher, CAC chairman, believed the state would make the money available, adding, "I think they would make the commitment."

Michael J. Williamson, vice chairman of the CAC said, "If the state began the project, it could then lobby for funds when a new administration takes office."

As if in answer to Fancher's beliefs, early last week the state legislature passed a $3 billion transportation bond issue with an amendment earmarking $400 million for the Old Colony project. The bond, which has Gov. Dukakis' support, is expected to pass the Senate without any problems.

Figures were released to the CAC which reflected final cost estimates of $391,731,902 which will be submitted to UMTA. The figures are projected to be a 1999 estimate based on a projected annual inflation rate of 3.5 percent.

Polechronis said Stanley was supportive of the project.

"Once the full Legislature passes the bond bill and we can state that MA has lived up to the challenge of providing 50 percent of the funding for the project, we are hopeful that he [DelliBovi] will again come back to Ralph Stanley's position of being supportive of the project," said Polechronis.

Polechronis said subsequent to passage of the bond issue, MBTA General Manager James O'Leary and state Transportation Secretary Fredrick Salvucci will request a meeting with DelliBovi.

"Then we will be in a situation to say we have lived up to our commitment and it is time for him to live up to the commitment his predecessor made," said Polechronis. "He was Deputy Administrator at the time and we believe we have some right to continuity."

According to Polechronis, Stanley said if the state funded 50 percent of the project, it would go to the top of the UMTA priority list and they would move quickly on the project. He said DelliBovi appears not to be concurring with this idea.

Fancher expressed doubts that DelliBovi could be swayed because of his past statements regarding the project and MA transit in general.

"It would appear it's an uphill battle with DelliBovi," Fancher said. "We should go through the process and ignore him. We do have a Secretary of Transportation, do we not?"

Although the Chamber has formally extended an invitation to DelliBovi to attend a CAC meeting, he formally refused on the grounds the committee had no recommendations to offer him as yet.

Several CAC members suggested that pressure be placed on DelliBovi through the MA Congressional delegation. Polechronis said he disagreed with that course of action at the present time.

"I think it's too early to write off the Stanley agreement or to begin discussing other alternatives," he said.

Polechronis said once the bond issue is passed and signed by the Governor, if the issue is still held up by DelliBovi, they could then go to the MA Congressional delegation.

In his explanation of how the OCL restoration would benefit citizens, Polechronis said one major advantage was reducing the passenger load on the Red Line, which currently services all towns south of Braintree.

According to plans, there will be three lines servicing the South Shore and Brockton areas.

The Greenbush Line will service Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Nantasket and Scituate, while the Plymouth Line services So. Weymouth, Abington, Whitman, Hanover, Halifax, Kingston and Plymouth. The Middleborough Line will cover Holbrook/Randolph, Brockton, Bridgewater State College and Middleborough.

Although there are 21 stations planned along the three lines, only the 16 which have met with their respective town official's approval were presented to the committee.

According to Polechronis, Cohasset and Greenbush have encountered many of the same problems.

The Cohasset station, located off Rte. 3A is designated for 300 cars with significant expansion for growth demands.

"Right now," said Polechronis, "the numbers out of Cohasset are not substantial enough to warrant constructing more than 300 parking spaces," adding, "but we want to maintain the option of more for the future."

Because the North Main Street location is so convenient to the tracks, but not the parking, residents voiced concern over the possible safety factor of people being dropped off at the site as it was previously designed.

Polechronis said the revised design includes a loop on the north side of North Main Street where cars can pull in and discharge passengers in safety.

Polechronis said the revised design includes a loop on the north side of North Main Street where cars can pull in and discharge passengers in safety.

Wetlands also presented a problem at the Cohasset site, but Polechronis said, "With the updated wetland information, the design can now go forward."

The Greenbush station, with its 800 car spaces, is still in the initial design stage because of site location, ridership problems and parking space numbers.

One of the major problems is the planners have been trying to find land for an alternative entrance to the station, although that problem may be solved in the near future.

"We are evaluating this offer at the present time," said Polechronis.

Committee members expressed concern over both the drop off and ridership numbers in both Cohasset and Scituate.

Members felt the MBTA was overestimating the number of drop offs and underestimating the number of parking spaces required. They felt the MBTA, by basing its drop off numbers on those associated with the P&B bus line which presently serves the area, was not getting a true picture of the situation.

Members said the large drop off number was attributed to the unavailability of parking at the present time, but once OCL was operating and parking was available, the number of drop offs would decrease while the demand for parking increased, expressing their concern that the planned 800 spaces planned for Greenbush would not be enough.

Members explained with more than 5,000 daily riders projected for the Greenbush Line alone, and only 1,500 parking spaces planned, the members felt the drop off numbers were grossly overestimated. But Polechronis stood fast at the 800 parking space figure.

The next meeting of the CAC will be held on Feb. 25, at 7 p.m. at the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, 36 Miller Stile Road, Quincy.

Selectmen's briefs . . .

Cable transfer

After some heated discussion, selectmen voted Monday night to approve the transfer of the American Cablesystems license to Continental Cablevision.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle expressed his concerns to American representative Stephen Farquahar about the inadequate local programming in Cohasset under American Cableystems. "They have slowed down to zero," he said. "Now I'd like to know what Continental is going to do."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she has received similar complaints regarding the lack of local programming by the cable company.

"You came in here with a rush and glory, but I honestly feel you've neglected your responsibilities," Selectman James Gallagher stated. "I don't know why you're not filming different community events, such as the Memorial Day parade. I'm pretty disappointed in the interest you've shown."

Farquahar disputed a charge by Selectman Burt Pratt that Cohasset subscribers are charged higher rates than subscribers in surrounding towns. He also noted there are no plans by Continental to raise rates before July 1, 1988. The American Cablesystems official explained that local programming can only be successful if there are volunteers within the community to film and produce the programs. A new program director, Robert Bellevue, has been hired in Cohasset, he said, and a large portion of his responsibilities will be to recruit new volunteers for expanded community programming.

Selectmen noted that the transfer of the license does not open up the contract for renegotiation. The cable license, which was approved three years ago and is valid for 15 years, will be transferred to Continental Cablevision.

Dr. John Packard, a member of the Cohasset cable television committee, told selectmen that unless there are more volunteers, there cannot be more local programming. The cable company provided the town with the studio and equipment, but it is up to the residents to film the events they wish to view. He noted that American Cablesystems is one of the most reputable companies in the cable business. "Everything they said they would do, they did," Dr. Packard stated.

He added that if selectmen are receiving complaints about cable service in Cohasset, or have ideas for the company, they should forward those concerns to members of the local cable committee.

Ron Cooper, vice president and district manager of Continental Cablevision of southern Massachusetts, told selectmen the terms and conditions of the license with American will be carried on with Continental. The company, he said, is the third largest cable television company in the country, and currently holds licenses in 155 Massachusetts towns. There are 1.5 million subscribers to Continental, which is the largest privately-owned cable company in the country.

Roadrace approved

Selectmen approved a request by the Cohasset Rotary to sponsor the 12th annual Road Race By The Sea.

This year's race will begin a new location by the Community Center on Depot Court, rather than at the town hall. The race will begin at 1 p.m. March 27.

When asked by Selectman James Gallagher if the race could be delayed until 2 p.m., Logan answered no. Most sanctioned 10K races are held early in the morning, he said, and if the starting time is delayed an hour, it will be dark before some of the final racers have finished the course. He also noted that the better out-of-town racers will come early to warm up and gear themselves up for the race, no matter when the starting time is set.

The starting location of this year's Rotary race was changed in response to a request by Cohasset clergymen not to hold organized events on town-owned property during the hours of traditional worship. Selectmen noted that church worship services would be finished by the time the roadrace begins. Logan noted that most of registrations will have taken place Saturday before the race, or by mail, so there should be no crowds early that morning.

The race organizer told selectmen the Rotary will no longer sponsor a 10K walk around the course on the morning of the roadrace.

SEMASS signed

Selectmen voted to sign a contract with SEMASS, the trash-to-energy waste disposal facility in time to meet the Jan. 31 deadline imposed by the Rochester agency.

The contract, according to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, must stipulate the estimated tonnage to be hauled each year from Cohasset to Rochester. Atty. Henderson explained to selectmen that if the actual tonnage amounts to less than the estimated total, the town will be assessed a fine. And if the town deposits more than the estimated amount, Cohasset will be assessed a proportionate additional amount. If the town deposits more than 110 percent of its estimated tonnage, that tonnage can be rejected, he added. The lesser of the two fines would be if Cohasset deposits less than its estimated amount.

Selectmen agreed to sign a contract based on a disposal calculation made by Atty. Henderson, Health Agent Joseph Godzik, and Executive Secretary Donald Andrew.

Town counsel noted that contracts containing formulas his clients have no control over "makes me uneasy - to be signing something in the abstract is awkward. But sometimes you have no choice," he stated. "Our landfill is limited to what it can take in, and the other landfill in town we allege is harmful to the environment. And this outside landfill is something the (disposal area study) committee feels is best suited to Cohasset. We do not have a lot of choices. It is not a bad situation. It is an unpredictable situation."

Special town meeting voted in the fall to authorize selectmen to enter into an agreement with SEMASS. The disposal area study committee recommended the contract be authorized at the last possible moment until all alternatives had been reviewed. The town was notified this week that Jan. 31 would be the last day for Cohasset to sign on with SEMASS.

A contract with SEMASS will cost the town $49.59 per ton, although future disposal costs are subject to change. That fee does not include disposal rates to and from the Rochester facility.

Selectmen suggested the estimated tonnage disposal number be reduced to about 3,800 tons per year, taking into account increased recycling efforts by the town.

Committee members

Selectmen named four members to the new Housing Partnership Committee. The members include Rev. Gary Ritts, Edward Mulvey, Nancy Anderson and Dorothy Bjorklund.

Photography exhibit at center

The South Shore Art Center will be accepting work for its annual All New England Juried Photography Exhibit Friday, Jan. 29 from noon to 4 p.m. and Saturday, Jan. 30, from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Photographers are asked to deliver their entries on these dates to the Center at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. This annual exhibit attracts works by regional, Boston and new England photogrpahers and will run the month of February in the Center's invitational gallery.

The opening reception for the exhibit will be Sunday, Feb. 7, 4-6 p.m. with a special lecture at 3 p.m. by internationally known photogrpaher Marie Cosindas.

Coalition coastal task force formed

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

The South Shore Coalition formed a coastal facilities task force last week to address the issue of crumbling seawalls.

Marshfield was especially hard hit by a storm Jan. 2, 1987, having lost sections of its seawall. Selectmen chairman Richard Levin suggested the move at a previous meeting, and was asked head the task force upon its creation.

Endorsing the move, coalition chairman John Silva, a selectman from Hull, noted that six or seven of the organization's 10 towns are affected by the issue.

"As a result of last winter's storm," Levin commented, "area towns received money to patch the walls through help from state Sen. William Golden and state Rep. Frank Hynes.

"Hynes did some exhaustive research on seawalls on the South Shore, and it has become apparent to me that the seawalls were built as part of the federal New Deal legislation.

"Not much attention was paid to whether it was public or private property," he noted, "and the research revealed that it was a mish-mash."

Levin noted the walls were built to last 50 years, and those 50 years are up. But the price of repairing the walls is beyond anyone's means.

In Marshfield, he said, there was a study to determine where the strong and weak parts of the seawall were located. During that January storm, the weakest spots were not where the breaks occurred.

"They're next," Levin predicted.

Lori Thayer of the state office of Coastal Zone Management told representatives from the 10 coalition towns that her agency is concerned about maintaining and repairing the structures.

She said the state should look toward "preactive maintenance of seawalls." CZM will try to set up a meeting with local legislators to talk about developing legislation to look at paying for such repairs.

Levin suggested a "responsible party" be designated for maintenance and to react to disasters, whether that party be the state or federal government.

"The communities can't afford to fix them," he said. "I think it's a federal matter. It's not just here, there are problems on the west coast too."

He indicated the argument about private versus public property should be moot in this case, because a seawall protects not only the person's property that is directly behind the wall, but streets and sewers and other properties.

After the 1987 storm, Levin added, the state came in and helped, but reluctantly because it is illegal to spend public money on private property, and the ownership is clouded. "There may be a need for a lot of land-takings."

He said perhaps seawalls should be handled as are state highways, where the federal government pays for 60 percent, the state pays for 30 percent and the town pays for 10 percent of the work.

"The problem is that no one wants to claim responsibility for the seawalls," Thayer said. "And it's hard to point your finger at one group and say, 'You are responsible.'

"CZM's coastal caucus might be a great vehicle through which we can work," she said.

CZM will be pushing for coastal awareness as the agency celebrates it tenth anniversary this year.

"We are going to play this up as the year of the coast," Thayer said.

South Shore Coalition selectman representatives will seek to put on their town meeting warrants a resolution urging the U.S. government to take actions to determine the whereabouts of its veterans Missing In Action and to bring home American Prisoners of War.

The selectmen will follow the lead of the Weymouth board, which intends to ask the town's voters to send a message to the President of the United States and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives demanding "more concrete action" to be taken by the U.S. State Department to end the ongoing tragedy.

Weymouth selectmen adopted the warrant article from the Weymouth Veterans Council, and selectman Brian McDonald forwarded the suggestion to his fellow members of the South Shore Coalition, a political organization of 10 towns from Weymouth to Duxbury.

The article is a response to a vigil held by a group of Weymouth citizens called "Project 4" at Legion Field last Veterans Day.

Two Weymouth servicemen are listed as MIA, one from the Korean Conflict and one from the Vietnam War. Throughout Massachusetts, 59 servicemen are listed MIA. There are thousands of others from across the United States.

Dorothy was one of the judges that helped select the winner of the Girl Scout Cookie sculpture contest that was held at Quincy Market. To promote the cookie drive, several Boston Hotel chefs made sculptures using the cookies. The winner was Chef Georg Schargenberg of the Sheraton Hotel, and he made a replica of the Swanboat. Perhaps some saw the picture in The Boston Globe last Saturday, if not ask Mrs. Bates to show it to you. It was indeed a work of art. More news about our town's Girls Scout cookie drive will be given at a later date.

☐ If you have noticed one of Cohasset's finest policemen smiling more than usual lately, it's with good reason! Rick Grassie and his wife have a brand new son, Frederick H. Grassie III, born on December 8. He weighed in at 6 lbs. 1 oz. and is reported to be adorable! Rick and his wife Joan couldn't be happier!

☐ John L. Thompson Jr., a sophomore at Syracuse University, is on the air at National Public Radio, Syracuse Station WAER, doing play by play of Syracuse football, basketball and lacrosse games. He also does the regular sports broadcasting. Sounds as though we could have another Bob Lobell in our midst, wouldn't that be wonderful!

☐ P. Richard Hackenburg of our fair town has been appointed to the position of executive vice president and director of sales at Corron and Black of Massachusetts, which is an insurance brokerage firm.

Artist Janet Blagdon stands alongside some of her vibrant work which is featured this month at The South Shore Art Center. (J. Paul MacDonald)

☐ In other business news, James Given has joined Syska & Hennessy Engineers in Cambridge as an associate partner and project director. Mr. Given was previously manager of facilities engineering for Sverdrup Corporation.

☐ Marilyn Fessler was in town for a visit recently, and all reports are that she is looking wonderful. Marilyn had a chance to visit with many of her friends and to remember a lot of their good times. Wouldn't it be nice if she could return to our town permanently!

☐ Happy be-lated birthday to Barbara Anderson. We won't tell her age, we'll just tell you what a wonderful and warm gal that she is. We wish you many more Barbara, and here's hoping that next year your friends get you a real cake. . . .

☐ In all of the "hoop-la" over the boys' basketball team, it seems as though the girls have faded into the background. Not so! They are doing an outstanding job again this year and remain number one in their battle for the league championship. It sure looks as though their team, under the grand coaching of Bill Fallon will make their annual bid for the Eastern Mass. Tournament, and we sure wish them every success. Be sure to go and support these gals and their efforts, you'll be glad that you did.

☐ Ran into Harry Ritter the other night, and Harry reports that he is feeling just great. He only has one quest now, he is looking for a doctor that will let him return to the links before March 15, something his present doctor will not allow. Patience Harry, the longest month of the year is almost over! Besides, how do you see golf balls in snow drifts?

☐ Our selectmen certainly have a wide range of concerns, and Jim Gallagher is an example! Jim is worried about the wild birds and their search for food. He wants everyone to be sure to continue feeding them during this extreme cold and snow, because if they can't find food they will migrate elsewhere! And, once you start, don't stop! They get used to their dining areas and could starve. Jim's concern should be everyone's, so take heed and feed. We sure don't want to lose those beautiful creatures.

☐ ProfessorMoe Foley has just returned from a 17-day trip that would make anyone envious! He spent his time in Spain, Morocco and Portugal and loved it. Be sure to ask him all about it when you see him.

☐ The Cohasset Diet Center would like prospective applicants to know there are ten $3,000 scholarships available to undergraduate nutrition majors to support their junior and senior years of study.

Any interested persons may contact Leslie Jancsics at the Cohasset Diet Center, 12 Parkingway, Cohasset, or call 383-2052.

☐ Come and chase away the winter doldrums and dance the night away at the Community Center Saturday night, Jan. 30. The "Frostie Frolic" dance begins at 9 p.m. Ticket donations are $15 per couple, and are available at the door.

☐ Edna Ekberg of Hallmark 100 Properties in Cohasset attended a recent meeting of the Northeast Region All Points Relocation Service Broker's Council. The purpose of the council is to promote referral business among members in the region and to serve as a welcoming committee at the All Points National Convention to be held in Boston in July.

☐ That's the news for this week, let us know your news.

Edwards — the state's best

the public at large has been stated. I suppose that's just one of the problems with reaching legendary status too young.

Fortunately though, at the present time, this does not seem to be weighing heavily on the mind of Edwards. Right now he is more concerned with other matters, the foremost is getting through his senior year at Cohasset High. And secondary concerns such as college, Tim Perry's state scoring record, public appraisal, a state title, and even basketball itself, must take a spot on the back-burner.

This is not to say these things aren't matters which occupy him to some extent. But, up front he states that academics are his top interest.

"Right now how I do in school is what is most important," said Edwards in a recent interview. "I've got to make sure I'm doing well in the classroom before I set my mind on other things."

Most who have read this are probably already aware, Bryan Edwards is not a Cohasset resident. He is, in fact, from Dorchester. However, because of a busing program known as METCO, he, along with many other Boston-based teens, can attend a suburban high school.

For the record, the METCO program is one that countless numbers of inner-city parents try to get their children to enroll in each year.

Ironically, it was Bryan himself, then a sixth grader, who first brought the program to his parents attention.

For six years, Edwards has been rolling out from under the covers at a time of the morning when just about all of his peers are still experiencing the delights of slumber. And then, in addition to this, he has had to endure the same long and tiring bus trip on each of these days. Needless to say, he has learned, among other lessons, a thing or two about commitment.

"It's helped me to develop a lot of discipline," said Edwards, obviously aware of how important this acquired trait will become. "Here (at C.H.S) there's a lot of pressure to come to class and do well, which can be tough sometimes. But it's better than going someplace where it seems they don't care whether or not you're even there."

However, as much as Cohasset High means to Bryan, there is almost no way you could compare it to what he has meant to the school. He has, after all, in many regards, put Cohasset on the map.

Since he first became a starter for Ed Minelli, the varsity team's head coach, way back in the winter of 1983 as an eighth grader, and scored 15-points in his debut, he has been a major focus for local attention. And to almost none of those who first sat up and took notice, is it even a bit surprising that Bryan has developed into one of this area's all-time premiere basketball players.

"Brian is the most incredible athlete, as well as one of the most exceptional people I've ever been associated with", said Minelli, a man to whom Edwards attributes a great deal of his success, "Sometimes it's almost like he's too good to be true. I've really been spoiled just having him around."

"On the floor he's always elevating his play to fit the situation, and , in turn, this usually elevates the play of the rest of the team. And off the floor he is just a super nice person. As a matter of fact, if I had to name a single fault of his, it would be that he is too nice. For example, he knows he's better than everyone else out there, but instead of taking over and helping by telling his teammates what to do, he does nothing because he's so afraid that he might insult someone."

For five years, Edwards has been the apple of Cohasset's eye, while in surrounding communities, especially those which have a team in the South Shore League, he has been the recipient of immeasurable envy.

However, next year, gloriously, the latter half of this condition turns around completely. This is the result of innumerable prayers being answered, when Edwards signed a letter of intent with Boston College.

Bryan explained how and why he has made literally thousands of local basketball enthusiasts silly with glee: "I had it narrowed down to five schools. And, actually, Villanova University was my first choice, but my parents and me talked it over, and just before the signing date I decided B.C. was best for me. I figured that there I'd have the opportunity to play right away and learn a lot as well."

So, that is that. A perfect ending to a perfect five years: Bryan Edwards is here to stay, for at least four more years anyway. And, then, who knows? (Come on. Be honest. How do you think he would look clad in kelly green?)

Offer of hope

Amidst the grey clouds and cold temperatures this past week, there has been some brightness and good news.

The state recently awarded the housing authority more than $2 million in grants to begin extensive housing repairs and major construction work.

This is the most money the Cohasset agency has ever received, according to the memory of its membership. They are extremely pleased with the windfall, but realistic that it is time to begin the difficult work. It's either now or never, they admit.

The money, which Executive Director Barbara Clain applied for, must be used to renovate the elderly housing complex, search for a site to construct housing for the mentally retarded, and a separate site for 12 units of affordable housing. Once the housing authority meets with the state, we have 180 days to find a suitable site for the housing complexes.

This will not be an easy task, the housing authority members admit. There is not much money within those state grants to purchase land - a very expensive commodity in Cohasset.

They are hoping there is some town-owned parcel available for construction, or that some willing resident will donate land for these express purposes. Only a quarter-acre is needed for the housing for the retarded, and a large parcel is needed for the 12 affordable housing units.

The housing authority is geared to start immediately. All they need is the pre-construction meeting with the executive Office of Communities and Development, and they will be off and running. A consultant will be hired to guide them through the process.

But, in addition to the consultant, our housing authority is going to need a lot of luck. Finding property for $7,500 in Cohasset is unrealistic, but that is the price the state is willing to pay. The only real solution is to find some town-owned property very soon, or someone willing to donate land at a below-market price.

There are some options that may be open for discussion. The Bates Building at 43 Elm Street will be vacant as soon as the town hall addition is completed. That would free up a town-owned building for at least two or three affordable housing units. And interested residents are right now attempting to work out a way to use the former Judge George Curtis estate for housing for the disadvantaged. Although that is a complicated issue, involved a board of trustees and an interested private developer, these residents are working diligently to see if the land and houses can be used according to the will established by the deceased judge.

The town recently compiled a list of possible affordable housing sites, some of which will not be available for many years, and others that are simply unbuildable at this time. But the housing authority will certainly review that list, while soliciting empty parcels from generous private residents.

The housing authority has a long way to go, and it is a distant goal. But we hope they persevere. People within our community, and outside our community will remain homeless unless we begin to solve this dilemma. We must work to obtain decent housing for every resident in our community. As Director Clain said, this is a step in the right direction. But there is a long road that lies ahead.

We wish the housing authority good luck. We congratulate them on their industrious grant applications, and we hope they continue to pursue their goal to its conclusion. We are all interested in their progress, and we should all work together to see these projects completed. Ours will be a total community when we share our bounty with those less fortunate.

Memories from just a couple of weeks ago when Andy (l) and Charlie Young of Hillside Drive sculpted works of art in the snow.

The Barrows family expresses thanks

Letter

To the Editor:

The Town of Cohasset, the Cohasset Fire Department and a great number of family members and friends suffered a deep loss with the recent death of Edward Barrow.

A native and lifelong resident of Cohasset, Eddie spent a lifetime giving of himself to the community. His contributions in his years as a member of the Fire Department and as a caring resident of the town he loved will be long remembered by so many people who were touched by him.

The town's appreciation and affection for Eddie was reflected in the overwhelming and heartwarming turnout for his funeral services. His family extends its appreciation to all, and in particular to his Fire Department colleagues as well as firefighters from surrounding communities who made it possible for those who worked so closely with Eddie for so many years to attend and pay their respects.

For those who knew and loved Eddie, such a response from the community was very moving and very much appreciated in this difficult time. We would like to thank every one of you for your thoughts and prayers.

Troop 28 Boy Scout news

The Klondike Derby held at Cohasset's Wheelwright Park Jan. 23 was successful. Troop 28 of Cohasset hosted the derby for the Old Mills District which included ten towns, and 150 scouts and leaders.

Troop 28 sends their get well messages to Earle Bestick, who is a patient at South Shore Hospital. Earle is on the troop committee and is Webelos leader for the pack 38 Cub Scouts.

Arthur Lehr Jr. was awarded the William H. Sturgeon III award at the Old Colony Council annual recognition dinner held at the Lantana Jan. 21. Arthur received his award for his outstanding leadership with explorers.

He has served scouting for fifty years. He has been district commissioner, past district chairman, executive board member and Old Mills district exploring chairman. He is an active member with Post 28 Explorers of Cohasset. At the dinner, the honor guard was comprised of Scouts selected from the contingent to the world jamboree in Australia. Michael and Nicholas Lelecas represented Cohasset.

The Rotary Club generously donated $200 to Pack 38 for our Pinewood Derby cars and trophies.

All Den Leaders are preparing for the Blue and Gold Dinner. This celebrates the birthday of scouting. All scouts and their families are invited to attend. Would the parents please give a helping hand to their cubs to help them earn their badges?

Den 8 will be assisting in our Flag Ceremony.

Den 1 and Den 2 will be doing a skit of William Tell.

noted. "He leads just by the way he plays. He works hard and he's a skilled player."

Danny began skating when he was six or seven with the Seahawks youth organization, located at the former Cohasset Winter Gardens. He's been a member of the varsity team for four years, and has been under the direction of Coach Walsh for the past three years.

When asked how many points he has scored thus far, he answered, "I don't know. I think it's about 148 or 149."

His record-setting point last Saturday against Abington came during an assist to his brother, Brian. His brother is a 15 year-old sophomore member of the team.

"It's a special thing," Danny admitted. "I knew for a while that I was one point away from the record, and when I tied the record, I was glad the pressure was over. I knew I would tie the record at some point in the season, but I didn't know when."

Danny admitted that many kids in school are unaware of his record-book endeavors, although his friends and teammates are well aware of the accomplishment.

Coach Walsh said Danny's secret to success is simple. "He loves the game. We practice at 5:30 in the morning. But I think if we practiced at 3 in the morning, Danny would still show up at 2:30. He loves to skate."

His coach added, "He is a treat to watch. He amazes everyone with the things he can do. He's a real treat to coach."

Coach Walsh called his all-star performer a complete hockey player with excellent skills and the ability to shoot, pass, and the knowledge to play where he is supposed to be throughout the game. "He's an aggressive forward who makes things happen on the ice," Coach Walsh said, describing the league's top scorer.

Danny said he would like to attend Boston College after graduation, adding that college hockey is definitely among his future plans.

He has scored 20 goals this season, usually combining them with assists to his brother Brian and teammate Todd Fitzpatrick. "We're sort of a mini-team within the team," he said.

This seaon, Danny has averaged three or four points per game.

"Since I've known him," his coach added, "Danny has been an excellent hockey player. He is a complete player."

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

A local angle to the signing of the Constitution

By David Wadsworth
Chairman of the U.S. Constitution
Bicentennial Committee

Our American Constitution was drafted and signed at Philadelphia's Independence Hall in 1787, then dispatched to the nation's Confederation Congress in New York for its formal approval, and for distribution to the 13 separate states.

For the Constitution to become the official frame of a new United States government it would have to be ratified or approved by nine of the states. The first state to approve at a state ratifying convention was Delaware, by a vote of 30 to 0, on December 7, 1787. Pennsylvania and New Jersey followed in the same month, then Georgia and Connecticut in January, 1788.

In Massachusetts, where a ratifying convention was to be held in January, copies of the Constitution were sent to each community. Delegates to the state convention were to be chosen by counties, with each city or town to send one or more representatives.

The small town of Cohasset had been "set off" from its parent, Hingham, in 1770, and by the 1780's was a bustling community of farmers, tradesmen and seafarers. On December 3, 1787 Cohasset held a Town Meeting to consider the new Constitutional document, and to elect a representative to the forthcoming convention.

Text of the record of that meeting as it appears in the original first book of Town Records is: "At a Legal meeting held in the Town of Cohasset on the 3rd day of Dec'r A.D. 1787 — James Litchfield was chosen moderator — Then the Constitution or frame of government of the United States was read — then chose Tho's. Lothrop to represent them in convention who refused Serving — then chose Ignatius Orcutt in his room (place) he also refused Serving, then chose James Litchfield in his room. Meeting Dissolved." No reason was recorded for the refusal of two of Cohasset's leading citizens to serve at the convention. Thomas Lothrop had been Cohasset's highest ranking Revolutionary officer, a Colonel, and at the time was serving as Town Clerk. He was about to serve as the town's Representative as he had previously done, and would continue to do for seven separate times until his death in 1813. He resided on Spring Street. Ignatius Orcutt, who lived at the corner of South Main and Beechwood Streets, had been a soldier in the French and Indian War and the Revolution. He had served as Town Treasurer and Selectman in the 1770's and was a farm owner.

James Litchfield of Beechwood, also a farmer, had been a Revolutionary soldier and served as town constable and Selectman when Cohasset was founded in 1770. Early Massachusetts state records indicate that Litchfield did not cast a vote at the 1788 ratifying convention. It is not clear whether or not he actually attended the sessions in Boston. October 25, 1787 saw the General Court of Massachusetts pass the resolution calling for a statewide ratifying convention to be held in mid-January, with delegations representing each of the state's 12 counties. (At that time Maine was part of Massachusetts, and its county delegations from York, Cumberland and Lincoln were included in Massachusetts totals.)

The convention itself met in Boston Jan. 9 with more than 350 delegates in attendance. From then until Feb. 6 the convention discussed and debated the new Constitution. Daniel Shays' "farmers' rebellion" of just a year earlier had wracked the state's political structure and many delegates from rural western Massachusetts remained fearful of any powerful centralized government. They would oppose ratification, and their numbers were such as to cast the final result into uncertainty as the convention opened. More prosperous mercantile areas of eastern Massachusetts sent delegations strongly favorable to ratification. As the convention began discussion a close final vote was predicted.

In 1788 Cohasset, as well as neighboring towns to the west, was part of Suffolk County, a large area consisting of today's Norfolk County plus Boston, Hingham and Hull. (Norfolk County would be separated from Suffolk in 1793, with Hingham and Hull joining Plymouth County.) A delegate from Cohasset would have joined with such illustrious Suffolk representatives as Gov. John Hancock, Samuel Adams, former Governor James Bowdoin, John Winthrop and Gen. Benjamin Lincoln of Hingham. Of nearby Suffolk towns, Gen. Lincoln and Rev. Daniel Shute represented Hingham.

Thomas Jones was from Hull, and Cotton Tufts represented Weymouth. From the other side of the old Colony boundary, the Plymouth County town of Scituate sent William Cushing, Nathan Cushing and Charles Turner, and Marshfield sent Rev. William Shaw. Suffolk County delegates numbered 39 and Plymouth County 28. When the final ratification vote was taken on Feb. 6, all but 5 Suffolk delegates and all but 6 Plymouth delegates voted in favor.

Almost without exception the South Shore representatives were among those who voted "aye." Total vote of the convention was 187 in favor and 168 opposed. Thus Massachusetts became the 6th state to ratify the Constitution. Neighboring New Hampshire, voting with some reluctance, but generally in favor of ratification, made the Constitution the official frame of government of the United States, being on June 21, 1788 the ninth state to approve of a new national republic.

DEQE responds to landfill appeal . . .

reversal of earlier statements made in a letter dated July 28, 1987. In that letter, DEQE outlined several concerns regarding proposed expansion at the landfill.

But in this follow-up letter to Sen. Golden, McLoughlin defended his department, noting that several conditions outlined in the July 28 letter were not pertinent to the actual expansion approval granted in December. "The department," he wrote to Sen. Golden, "did not have a proper basis to impose such restrictions."

McLoughlin noted the crux of the town's appeal is that conditional expansion approval was based only on conditions concerning the preparation of the base of the proposed expansion area. But he admitted, "issuance of the plan approval without requiring those items as preconditions was based upon nothing other than consideration of department practice and consistent application of department requirements."

In the Jan. 25 correspondence, McLoughlin said DEQE "finds a number of wastewater management methods equally acceptable. The plan for the expansion area includes state of the art leachate collection with off-site disposal. In July 1987 (the first letter sent by DEQE to Cohasset Heights) the department had no factual basis for preferring on-site wastewater treatment over any of the other leachate management methods for the CHL landfill and no reason, therefore, to require construction of such a facility as a prerequisite of the proposed expansion.

"I acknowledge and regret the department's failure to provide written clarification to the town on the issues set forth in the July 28 letter which failure has given rise to the allegations of impropriety."

McLoughlin stated in his Jan. 25 letter that CHL satisfies leachate treatment and disposal requirements by collecting and trucking leachate off-site for treatment. He also noted that new regulations adopted under the state's new solid waste legislation will require the posting of financial assurances for closure and post-closure care and monitoring of the facility.

The regional DEQE administrator also noted there was a valid site assignment for CHL before the Dec. 17 conditional approval. But in its appeal of that decision, the board of health alleged DEQE was aware the board was likely to impose conditions on the landfill's site assignment. Approval of the expansion without final resolution of the site assignment by the board of health "was contrary to the Department's directives," the health board stated in its appeal.

McLoughlin explained "it is not the policy or the intent of the department to abrogate the rights and powers of any individual or body by use of this mechanism. To require the department to wait in anticipation of possible Board of Health actions would be unreasonable and unfairly provide obstacles to applicants by use of procedural mechanisms. "

He concluded, "assuming the issues raised in the Board of Health's appeal appeared to be stated as preconditions to approval of CHL's proposed expansion, the department did not have a proper basis to impose such restrictions. In the case of several of the items, e.g., zoning matters, the statement in the July 28 letter did not accurately reflect department policy. The department is satisfied with CHL's current arrangement for leachate disposal and will closely monitor its provisions for closure and post-closure treatment."

No sewer agreement yet . . .

said Jeans, "and are earmarked for receiving money this year."

"Because of the changes in both federal and state laws," said Jeans, "we are trying to bring the two communities together, we are moving forward rapidly to hasten assisting the communities in obtaining funding this year."

Whether or not to enter into an intermunicipal agreement was discussed at the meeting.

"We discussed if the intermunicipal agreement should have any guarantees relative to sludge handling — landfills and the like," said Traina, "and we were advised by the state we should not have any representations relative to that as the regulations governing landfills are going to change and become very strict."

DEQE advised that with the new regulations coming out — and if an agreement was to be based on someone's ability to provide that facility — "we may be making a mistake," said Traina, explaining that it does not mean you are making a mistake, but a landfill may not be available to accept the sludge.

This statement was addressing Cohasset's idea that its' landfill could handle the sludge. Traina said the DEQE's position was, "Maybe you can meet the requirements today, but you may not be able to under the new and tougher regulations, so don't make any long-range plans."

Confirming Traina's statement Jeans said the towns must act quickly not only because the fiscal year ends Sept. 30, but the rules are due to change and they will be very stringent, especially for landfills.

In expressing his opinion as to whether or not Cohasset's and Hull's attempts at obtaining DEQE funding were plausible, Jeans said, "It's doable."

Jeans said some of the unfundable items at the Hull plant were improvements on the sludge handling system and some improvements of the screening facilities. He said work to the septage facilities could be considered eligible.

It is not all smooth sailing for the two towns, though.

According to Traina, DEQE said Hull had not finished sending in all its reports the agency had requested. "The capacity analysis report is still needed."

DEQE wants to see the three towns do a sludge study if we were to all engage to see what would ultimately happen to the sludge, which," said Traina, " gives rise to another little article."

Reiterating Jeans' statement that Hull's septage facility may be fundable, Traina said it needs some work — "DEQE doesn't know where Hull wants to put it."

Traina said another problem was that DEQE has not accepted Cohasset's technical end of the sewer system. He said Hull's representative said because it hadn't heard from the agency, the town thought what it had sent in had been acceptable, but DEQE said it wants a meeting between Hull and Cohasset on the technical elements — where the pump station goes, how big it has to be and what kind of system Cohasset's planning to install.

Traina said there were financial problems also.

Hull's representatives claimed the town had no money and that someone else had to pay for the system.

"Sounds like a reasonable position to me," said Traina, laughing, "considering it's their plant."

The chairman said should Hingham decide to buy into the plant for an estimated $150,000 for its needs at Bonnie Briar, "That's a deal."

Jeans said one of the key factors is that the total project costs are several million dollars and that is what must be kept in mind.

Council on Aging worker reaches out to seniors

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Without any fanfare, but with quiet dedication, Karen Corcoran has been busy at work.

Her goal, as outreach coordinator for the Council on Aging, is to acquaint older residents of Cohasset with the programs and activities that have attracted hundreds of people since the senior center opened two years ago.

She does not push or prod seniors to participate. Corcoran simply and gently "extends an invitation" to residents who are still unfamiliar with the town's successful senior center.

As senior center director Kathy Bryanton noted, there are about 1,425 senior residents in Cohasset. One-third of that population is over 75 years old. And although hundreds of these residents are active and involved in the community, there are many, including the more frail residents within that category, who are unaware of the services and programs offered by the Council on Aging.

As part of the $7,400 grant from the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs, this outreach program seeks to identify those senior residents who remain uninformed about the resources available to them.

The Pleasant Street resident has been a volunteer in many capacities in Cohasset, including the New Friends program of the Social Service League and in local government and organizations.

But her responsibility in this new position, she said, "is to reach out to the community and inform the elderly residents of Cohasset about the programs and services provided by the Council of Aging. This is a bridging program."

Bryanton noted, "The senior center has been here two years. Now we're trying to incorporate people who are less likely to come out and use the center - whether that's because of illness, disability,social isolation or whatever. "

The local Council on Aging completed a survey of all senior residents in 1984. Based on the results obtained from that survey, the council learned that many people are unaware of available services. "In many respects, they remain unaware of services they need," Bryanton said. "And now the outreach coordinator will be the person to meet with these people on a one-to-one basis. She will be the best, most immediate and personal resource for them."

Corcoran continued, "since I've been here, I can't tell you how many people in town were unaware that we operate a senior shuttle bus. But since I've taken this job, I've talked to many people, just through daily conversations and it always crops up about someone they know who could use our services here."

One of the priorities of the outreach worker is to "bridge" or connect people in the community to those available services. And among the services available to seniors is transportation for the disabled and handicapped. The SCOOT van for handicapped residents is a shared services between Cohasset, Scituate and Norwell. Physician appointments and shopping excursions can be scheduled, along with the weekly therapeutic exercise class conducted at the Cohasset Senior Center.

Referrals from the Social Service League public health nurse are given to Corcoran for continued intervention. After hospital care and medical attention, the outreach coordinator is able to visit with the resident. She acquaints herself with the resident, and discusses the former patient's interests and needs. From there, Corcoran will invite the senior resident to join an activity at the center. "If they are willing to try out the SCOOT van, I will accompany them on that first ride. After that, they wonder why they never tried this before," she added.

The outreach coordinator has talked to several organizations and agencies in Cohasset, introducing herself and explaining her function at the senior center. And in daily conversations with friends and acquaintances, Corcoran said she has become aware of many senior residents who have demonstrated an interest in participation.

Karen Corcoran, The Council on Aging outreach coordinator, at her office in the Senior Center, 3 North Main St. Corcoran's responsibilities include 'bridging' senior residents with programs and activities geared specifically for them. (Kym Marcella)

"I've done a lot of volunteering through the New Friends program, and had planned to go back to work fulltime, but for personal reasons I decided to stay in the immediate area,"Corcoran explained. "I've enjoyed this type of work for a long time, and I feel grateful to be able to combine my professional and volunteer work into one position.

"There is a lot of satisfaction in volunteer work - you see a need, you address and carry it through to its result. This job is very similar to those goals," she added.

Part of Corcoran's responsibilities is to visit the elderly in their home, introduce herself and the programs available to them in this community. "I feel like a Welcome Wagon lady to them," she explained. "They are put on our mailing list and I tell them about the shuttle bus service. I try to make it like a visit between two friends. And I try to pick up on things they say, what their interests are,if they are in need of a particular service. That's the first step in the process. The next step may to ask them to our Tuesday lunch program. It's a slow, step-by-step process. But the end result is very rewarding for everyone."

The senior center director added, "it's also good for us here to know what activities they want at the center. It helps us plan the future of the senior center."

Corcoran emphasized there is no pressure applied to unwilling participants. "I just like to keep them informed of our programs and I remind them what's going on."

Among the new activities scheduled for Cohasset seniors is an afternoon Valentine's tea which will be held at the senior center Feb. 10. "It will be an opportunity for all seniors to attend a brief, entertaining event," the outreach coordinator noted. "It will be a non-threatening way for everyone to become acquainted with us."

Another new program will feature a guest speaker from the Executive Office of Elder Affairs who will speak to the seniors about long term health insurance plans.

"I can see my card file growing each week," Corcoran said, pointing to her list of names and telephone numbers of Cohasset senior citizens. "Now I am just beginning to contact our residents, and making house calls. Whereas I may have contacted two or three a month ago, now I am contacting two or three people a week."

She continued, "I extend an invitation to our frail elderly to attend the wonderful therapeutic exercise class we have at the center, and hopefully I can get them to integrate into more programs. I see it as a priority to get those residents who are home-bound, back out into their community and involved with old and new friends."

Corcoran may be reached at the senior center each weekday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 383-9112.

CHS drama festival rehearsal

Sitting in on a rehearsal of Fortress, it is understandable how Cohasset has reached the finals of the State Drama Festival for the past four years.

Ron Emmons, Cohasset's Director of Dramatic Arts, puts the cast through its paces with an intensity which strives for perfection.

Fortress is one of two, one-act plays being performed on Feb. 4 at 8 p.m. and Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. at Cohasset High school auditorium. The other, Act Three, Scene Five, joins Fortress as Cohasset's entry in this year's Drama Festival.

Written by Michael Scanlan, Fortress deals with the emotional turmoil of two friends, Billy and Kim, who relate each other's stories and eventually come to terms with themselves and one another. A unique aspect of the play is the presence of an ensemble which interacts with and reflects the events of the play. Joe Mazza and Michele Casolaro have the roles of Billy and Kim. Others in the cast include Erin Powell, Scott Caristo, Katie Tolini, Jack Beddows, Rebecca McCarthy, Heather St. Onge, Pam Haase, Jay Staunton, Doug Moe, Jen Coley, Erin Monaghan, Michelle Meagher, Allison Reilly, Jen Plante, Adam Durant, Zach Hochkeppel, J. Gaston, Lauren Kalita and Neely Hemassi.

Act Three, Scene Five will be receiving its first full performance since being published. The author, Terry Ortwein, is the director of the Paul Mellon Art Center at Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, Connecticut. The play involves comedy and romance as it deals with the egos and jealousies of five students rehearsing Act Three, Scene Five of Romeo and Juliet. Cast members include Melissa Greiner, Jason Marsac, Michelle Meagher, Erin Monaghan and Jen Coley.

Following the Feb. 6 performance there will be a reception and discussion with the authors. The first level of the State Drama Festival will be held Feb. 27 with the state finals in March.

If rehearsals are any indication, Cohasset should continue their tradition and be among the finalists.

Library grant

Mrs. Murphy, the Librarian at the Deer Hill School, was offered a grant to purchase more books from Mr. Hart, the superintendent of the schools.

To get the grant, she had to acquire one quarter of the money she was going to need in order to obtain the books. After she obtained the money, which was given to her by the PSO, she received the grant.

Mrs. Murphy then found out that Scholastic would give her more reading material for less money. She ordered books for the collaborative and the 4th, 5th, and 6th grades.

After students read their books, Mrs. Murphy will give them a strip of colored paper on which the students will write the title of the book and their names.

Mrs. Murphy will then take the strips, form them into a chain, and tape them up on the corridor walls.

Having these books read in an inter-student exchange program, Deer Hill hopes that someday the chain will go around the whole school.

Montessori auction huge success

The Montessori Community School extends a hearty thank you to all the local merchants and South Shore residents who contributed to our 12th Annual Auction.

It was a fantastic success, grossing over $42,000. The proceeds greatly exceeded the initial goal and will be used for the elementary fitness program, outdoor play equipment, cultural enrichment programs and building expansion.

All of the 150 children, ages 2-12, who attend the school from twelve South Shore communities will greatly benefit from these wonderful additions.

The school has grown and expanded to include a complete elementary level through grade six, as well as a Toddler program and programs for 3 to 6 year olds. The Montessori Community School is located at 136 Cornet Stetson Road (Route 123) in Scituate.

CHS drama workshop

The Drama Workshop presents "Fortress" and "Act Three Scene Five" Thursday, Feb. 4 at 8 p.m. and Saturday, Feb. 6 at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

Tickets are available in advance for $3 from any cast member or at the Cohasset High School office.

Tickets are also available at the door for $3 for Thursday's performance, and $4 for Saturday's performance.

Congratulations to the winner

Congratulations to Peter Bishop, the winner of Deer Hill's rename Magic Circle contest. Peter's entry, Sharing and Caring, was chosen from among the 63 entries. Other winners were Brendan Kinchla, Eric Henry, Beth O'Brien, Katie Ridge, and teacher Joe Becker.

Thanks to all who participated.

Globe scholastic art awards

Four CHS art students have won Gold Keys or Blue Ribbons at the Boston Globe scholastic art awards show. They are Allie Redfield, Jacob Powell, Corey DeSantis and Kerri Miele. They were honored Sunday, Jan. 24 at Mass. College of Art, Boston.

The art work will be on display at Mass. Art until Jan. 30, then in February at Faneuil Hall.

Trip to M.I.T.

Three eighth grade students from the High School—Lisa Coates, Keri Drayton, and Barbara Migliaccio recently visited M.I.T. where they participated in a demonstration class taught by Professor Alan Natapaff, Ph.D. The students were introduced to an innovative method for doing long division problems developed by Professor Natapaff. The students were accompanied by math teacher Maureen Lalumiere.

Library award

Mrs. Montuori's third grade class won the "Library Award" this month. They worked very hard.

Assembly on junk food

The Deer Hill students enjoyed a hands-on learning experience when the Norfolk County Cooperative Extension Nutrition Program offered a talk on alternatives to snacking on junk food.

Nancy Darling, a registered dietitian and Joan Shea, a nutrition assistant gave concrete examples of nutritious choices that are readily available to students in any refrigerator or convenience store.

The students examined the list of ingredients, calorie content and protein content found on packaged food in order to determine the value of the snack food in terms of real food value. The Deer Hill students were told to watch the fat and salt levels in snack foods. Mrs. Darling also warned the students about Nutra Sweet in diet foods because no safe level has been established for children.

Mrs. Shea gave vivid examples of sugar, salt and fat content in the children's favorite snack foods when she measured the actual content of a can of soda (twelve teaspoons of sugar, food coloring, additives and carbonated water). Potato chips (fat, salt and potato slices) and a candy bar (Karo syrup, palm oil, food coloring, additives and chocolate).

While no food is a never for children, Mrs. Darling stressed that students must learn to make the best choices nutritionally speaking and develop good eating habits even when snacking.

This program was presented under the aegis of the school nurse, Mrs. Murphy, in order to introduce the goals established for nutrition month which is in March. The Deer Hill students will be encouraged to make posters about good, healthy snacking which will be judged at the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole.

ICY WATERS

"And now, once agin, the famous U2 with 'With or Without You'," cried the DJ on 94.5.

"Yuck! I hate that song!," Peter yelled at the blaring radio. "Why do they have to play all the gushy songs at night? Oh, well, I have to study anyway. Let's see. . . I have Social Studies, Science, English. O.K., How about English? Oh, gross! I have to read some silly fairy tale about a dreamland," Peter said, as he pulled his language book from his schoolbag.

He opened to the assigned story, and began, "Once upon a time—"

"Where am I?" Peter said, looking around wildly. He was standing in an open field. The sun was shining brightly. The smell of wildflowers filled the air, and a roaring river could be heard echoing through the meadow, the blue skies overhead and the sun's warm rays beat down on Peter's face. "It's just like in the story I was reading, and if I'm right, there's a river over there!" Peter said.

Slowly and carefully, he ventured forward, a breath with every step. Pushing a few branches away and struggling through the brambles, he entered a different clearing, by roaring rapids and trees, beautifully colored trees.

He noticed a harp, a marvelous gold harp. He reached out to grab it, but instead, fell sprawling into the icy waters. Total blue engulfed him. The dark foaming waters pushed down into his lungs until he could no longer breathe.

"Eckhe—eckhe!!" he coughed and sputtered, sputtered and coughed.

"What—eckhe!—happened?" Peter said as he sat up in bed. He was wet from head to foot, and he had the chills.

He noticed a huge puddle all around him.

"So, it's true," he thought. "It's really true."

ANOTHER PLACE, ANOTHER TIME

One day in the mid-1950's, a boy named Zachery met a girl named Ilsa. They fell in love. One week, they made a date for 7:30 on Friday.

When Zack went to pick up Ilsa, she was not at home. Her parents said that she went to pick something up at the store and would meet him at the dance.

To his surprise, Zack found that Ilsa was not at the dance when he arrived. After waiting for a few minutes, Zack went outside where he saw a spirit who told him that Ilsa's house was haunted. The spirit also told Zack that Ilsa was protected by spirits. Zack was amazed to learn that the spirits had taken Ilsa to another land in another time. The spirit showed Zack a vision of the place where Ilsa was being kept; it was a castle. Many questions occurredto Zack. If there were answers, he would find them at the castle.

The spirit took Zack to an old railroad cart with a sail and a hand pump. Zack said, "Are you crazy? I can't pump this cart by my self." The spirit told Zack that it was his destiny. After many hours of sailing and pumping the cart down the tracks, Zack found a magical lake.

The spirit reappeared and told Zack to use the boat which suddenly appeared at the water's edge. Zack thought he saw the castle in the middle of the magical lake and began to row toward it.

As Zack moved toward the castle, a terrible monster rose from the water. The monster was very big with brown and red eyes, a pink nose and blue lips. His skin wasn't skin, but was a mixture of fur and scales of many different colors. The monster told Zack to go away.

Zack suddenly found himself hidden in fog and quietly rowed around the monster. He finnaly arrived at the castle and began to cross the drawbridge over the castle moat. He carefully passed through the castle door when they suddenly slammed shut behind him. The spirit returns to tell Zack that he must find the key to the tower room where Ilsa is being kept.

After searching for what seemed like days, Zack found a large gold key in an old chest. The friendly spirit then pointed the way to the tower where Zack and Ilsa were reunited.

All of the spirits appeared outside the room and told Zack and Ilsa that they had tested the two of them to make sure that they were right for each other. The spirits then transported Zack and Ilsa to their own time and place.

Reading is fundamental

R.I.F. has arrived at the Deer Hill School and we are excited. Tuesday, Jan. 12, 1988, we joined Mrs. Murphy in the cafeteria and were able to pick a book to read from a great selection. Every student in the school was able to do this and the best news is that the books are ours to keep. We can all swap with each other when we finish and we will see how many books we can read.

We agree that reading is FUNdamental.

Housing Authority grants . . .

Muncey predicted that if everything proceeds according to schedule, housing units could be ready for occupancy within a year of that pre-construction conference with the state.

"Right now, we are waiting to hear from the state to decide when that conference will take place," he explained.

Executive Director Clain said the first grant totaled $388,000 for the modernization of the elderly housing complex at 60 Elm Street. Much of the work has begun at the 64-unit complex which was first occupied in 1975. "We're very pleased about receiving that grant," Clain said. "We are now into repairing the roof and the drains, interior painting of the units, and some terrace work."

The second grant was one the authority applied for in July, 1986. Nearly two years later, the state awarded Cohasset $589,600 for the development of eight housing units for the mentally retarded. The authority is seeking a quarter-acre of land which will be suitable for the small housing complex.

"There's nothing definite yet, but again we would like to look at town-owned land first. That will save us from purchasing land which is very expensive," Clain stated. "Within 180 days this grant will expire, so that brings us to July or August to find something. We're very hopeful, but we have to begin looking."

This project will begin under the direction of EOCD in conjunction with the state Department of Mental Health.

Chairman Muncey noted that Norwell used town-owned land to develop similar housing. That town expended $550,000 for a "very nice" project, he said. "So it can be done, and done well. All we need is a minimum of 17,000 square feet of percable land."

The authority was notified last week about the largest grant every awarded to the local agency. Cohasset was awarded $1.14 million to develop 12 units of Chapter 705 housing. This money can be used to construct new homes or to renovate existing structures into affordable family housing.

"If we are going to build, we'll have to find town-owned land. We'll be entertaining any donations of land or listening to anyone who might want to sell us some property," Muncey noted. "That money does not include an awful lot for land."

According to the guidelines, there is about $7,500 available for the purchase of the land and engineering work.

"We're waiting to hear from the state about a pre-construction conference. But we'll have to wait until March to do any deep percolation testing," he stated. "But we're really anxious to get this process going."

A consultant must be hired with the initial planning money. That consultant will identify and evaluate sites for the construction of the units. Percolation tests are then completed. All results must be submitted to the state and the bids are let out for architectural services. The state's design selection committee recommends an architect and then the construction process can begin.

"We don't have a site for this housing yet," the chairman said. "The first thing we'll do is go over the list of town-owned property and see if we come up with anything suitable," he added.

Muncey and Clain said the authority is "very pleased" about the state grants. "We're going to be very busy here," the part-time executive director stated. "But we're happy to get this money and start working."

Women's Choral Festival

Four regional women's choruses join forces for a concert Saturday, Jan. 30, at UMass, Boston, McCormack Hall Theater at 8 p.m.

This event marks the first collaboration between female choral groups from: Hingham (Broad Cove Chorale, Margo Euler, director); Concord (Concord Madrigals, Johanna Hill Simpson, director); Framingham (A Cappella Singers, Kay Dunlap, director) and Portsmouth, N.H. (Portsmouth Women's Chorus, Priscilla Stevens French, director).

Singers from Cohasset participating with the Broad Cove Chorale are Sarah deLima, Diana Rousseau and Lisa Koed.

Concert highlights include Elliot Carter's "Harmony of Morning," featuring the 100 voices of the combined choruses directed by Margo Euler, and joined by the New England Conservatory Scholarship Wind Quintet, strings and solo pianist Lydia Madrick of Norwell. The large group will also sing works of Schubert and Holst.

This event is sponsored by the University Chorus, UMass, Boston. Tickets are $5 and available from participating choruses or at the door as space allows.

For more information, call 929-7340, Monday-Friday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m. The alternative date in case of snow is Jan. 31. Indoor parking is available directly beneath the concert hall.

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office Hours: Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. -noon. Office Phone: 383-0345; Parsonage Phone: 383-1422.

Annual Reports - may be picked up at the office this week, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to noon. If out-of-towners would like a copy, please write (43 Highland Avenue) or call the church office and we'll drop one in the mail.

Youth Group (9th-11th graders) next meeting: Sunday, Jan. 31, Super Bowl Party - (Time-kick off). We would like to find a willing home that would have one of the large screen televisions. Please call the office if you have one and might enjoy the invasion of 20 or so teenagers.

We need a "Cabin in the woods" - (Condo, etc.) for the TFTC (10 or so 12th graders) to have a Ski Retreat the Weekend of March 11-13 or 25-27. If you have a place you'd be willing to offer, please call Susi Coley (383-6160).

Two programs from the Beechwood Congregational Church:

1. A "Women in Difficult Transition" support group will meet for the first time, Thursday, Jan. 28 at 7:30 p.m. at the Beechwood Church. Any woman struggling in a relationship, separated, or in any other form of "difficult transition" is urged to attend.

2. Trip to Walpole Prison, to attend their Friday evening Worship service Feb. 5, leaving around 6:30 p.m. Clearance must be made ahead of time so, if you're interested, contact Gary R. by Wednesday, Jan. 27.

Open Flower Dates: Jan. 31, March 6, July 31, Sept. 25 and Oct. 30. If interested, please call Fran Walton at 383-1798.

Special Mormon lecture

Elder Luke M. Lambert, 21, will speak Sunday, Jan. 31 at the Sacrament Meeting (family worship hour) of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., in Hingham. Elder Lambert has returned from a two-year mission for the church in Veracruz, Mexico. He will report on his work as a Mormon missionary. The service will begin at 9 a.m.

Speaking also at the service will be Elder Lambert's father, Dr. Brent W. Lambert, noted South Shore eye surgeon and Mormon churchman. Bishop Bradley Johnson, spiritual leader of the congregation, will conduct the service.

Symposium on Israel

The Social Concerns Committee of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom will sponsor a symposium on Israel, Jan. 30 from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The seminar will be conducted by Dr. Gerald Showstack, assistant professor in the Hornstein Program at Brandeis University.

Showstack has extensive educational background in sociology, Jewish studies, and Near Eastern and Judaic studies. He has taught at Ben-Gurion University and served as director and advisor for a variety of programs at the Hebrew University and the Israeli Ministry of Education and Culture.

For information and to register for this program please call 843-0725. Congregation Sha'aray Shalom is located at 1112 Main St., Hingham.

Beechwood services

Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45. The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care is provided following the childrens' sermon.

Sunday School meets from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. All children in grades K-8 are invited to attend. As usual, guests are always welcome.

The Beechwood Neighborhood Social Thursday night was a great success. Many people enjoyed the covered dish supper and entertainment. Come next month, Feb. 18, at 6:30. Bring a covered dish or salad and the family.

People interested in joining Pastor Hall for a worship service at Walpole Prison must notify him before Friday, Jan. 29. The trip takes place Friday, Feb. 5, leaving at approximately 5:45. Call the church, 383-0808 or Pastor Hall at home, 545-3810, or work, 545-6800 and place your name on the list.

Curtis Estate group formed

Fight to retain property for disadvantaged

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

A group of residents are pushing forward, determined to stop the private development of the 55-acre Curtis Estate, and equally diligent to see existing structures used as homes for Cohasset's disadvantaged.

The Curtis Estate Action Committee scheduled a meeting this week with a relative of a trustee of the estate. Committee leaders Joseph McElroy, Stephen Bobo and Maria Plante were to sit down with Lynn DeGiacomo, daughter-in-law of Curtis Estate trustee James DeGiacomo. Each of the committee members was to present a rough draft containing their ideas for the most appropriate use of the land belonging to the estate of the late Judge George E. Curtis.

"I'm very optimistic," Plante said this week prior to the meeting. "I've had the door shut so many times, but I feel good about this one." For several years, Plante, an official of the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens (SSARC), has searched the community for suitable property to construct housing for retarded citizens.

She has been working closely with town officials, including the Housing Authority which was recently awarded a $589,000 grant to build housing for eight mentally retarded residents.

The Curtis Estate Action Committee members met with selectmen Monday to discuss their concerns and goals for the property. According to Plante, it was their intention to leave with the endorsement and encouragement of the town officials. They requested that selectmen sanction the committee as an official town board. Selectmen refused that request, but supported their efforts and requested periodic updates on the committee's efforts.

"We thought selectmen's approval of our concensus would give us a little more credibility when it came time to go to court on this," Plante said. "It really has become a town-wide issue with the planning board, housing authority and residents working together."

The committee members are prepared for a legal fight against the trustees who intend to sell the property to a private developer. The trustees have petitioned the court to allow the sale, despite the late George Curtis' intent to keep the property for "home and refuge free of charge for feeble, deformed or invalid women."

Neighbors of the property, along with other concerned residents, met to discuss their options last week at the

Students cleared in Rockland melee

No disciplinary action will be taken against any Cohasset High School students following a free-for-all at Saturday's hockey game in Rockland.

Rockland High School officials cancelled their Tuesday night hockey game after players from that team left the ice Saturday night and entered the spectator stands where Cohasset fans were watching the match. At least three Rockland skaters fought with Cohasset fans, and injured a Rockland police officer who was attempting to break up the melee.

No Cohasset fans were seriously injured during the incident, said Athletic Director Clark Chatterton who attended the game.

And according to Supt. Stephen Hart, another audience member at the Saturday night match, no Cohasset High School students participated in the fight, nor did he hear them heckle the Rockland players as they were exiting the rink.

"There is no indication that any currently-enrolled student at the high school was involved in the fight," he stated. "I was right there and did not hear any Cohasset student heckling anyone." Based on his attendance at the game, along with CHS Asst. Principal John DeLorenzo, and Chatterton, there will be no disciplinary action taken against any CHS student.

"There is no need for any reprimand on our part," Supt. Hart said. "I didn't really hear any heckling from our stands. Perhaps some things were said, but it would be very difficult to pick specific things out from the

Litchfield Express wants to buy land

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

A 145-year-old trucking concern ran into rough traveling at the selectmen's meeting Monday night.

The owners of Litchfield Express, a trucking firm which has been in continuous operation for 145 years, sought relief from the board in the form of either a sale or an easement across a piece of property abutting theirs, which is owned by the town.

According to official records, Barron and Isabel Salvador operated the business for many years at 81 Pleasant Street in Cohasset. Although the Pleasant Street property had been zoned residential in the 1950s, the Salvadors were grandfathered to continue their commercial operation.

In the late 1950s, however, the Salvadors purchased property on Bayberry Lane and built a residence on the site.

In addition to the house, the Salvadors built a large garage under the house which held three trucks.

According to Isabel Salvador, problems arose when Customers flock to new super store

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It may have been the social event of the season. Thousands of people swarmed this past weekend to the grand opening of the new Super Stop and Shop, and they were not disappointed.

The shelves were filled to the brim with a greater variety of items than most people ever envisioned. There were Stop and Shop officials along most aisles, waiting to serve confused shoppers lost among the numerous aisles that stretch along the 49,000 square-foot store.

Store manager Bill Ryan couldn't estimate the amount of shoppers who passed through the doors Saturday and Sunday, but he noted, "the parking lot was filled both days."

He added, "but even though this place was packed, there was absolutely no wait at the registers. There was not one single backup all weekend. We had 21 registers open, so I think the biggest wait for people was when they were placing their food at the check-out. Everything went great."

The manager, who was at the store throughout the weekend, said he had not heard any negative comments about the grand opening. "Honestly, all I heard was

Station re-vote

Fourteen residents have signed a petition article for the annual town meeting which requests a re-vote on a proposal to renovate the police and fire station.

The petition, which was presented to selectmen Feb. 1, was formulated by residents Charles DeSantis and Roy Fitzsimmons. It requests that a second vote be taken at the 1988 annual town meeting. The residents have stated there was confusion surrounding the October special town meeting vote on this issue. At that meeting, the town moderator expressed some doubt as to the outcome of the first voice vote. Several minutes later, he called for a second vote on the matter and later ruled that the article was approved.

DeSantis and Fitzsimmons argued that according to "Town Meeting Time," the call for the second vote "based upon the margin of the defeat was in error and thus the first vote stands. However, since this understanding of the bylaw and 'Town Meeting Time' has been challenged by the moderator, we feel that the most expedient method to ensure the validity of the vote on this important issue is to simply reintroduce the article at the 1988 annual town meeting," they stated in the petition.

Several voters argued that the proposal to appropriate $1.1 million for the renovations to the police and fire station was defeated by a clear majority of voters during the first voice vote. However, the town moderator decided it was unclear and called for a hand count several minutes later, which resulted in approval of the proposal.

DeSantis, who requested the intervention of the state attorney general in this matter, decided the re-vote was a more expedient method rather than pursuing the matter in court.

Poison ivy is good

The director of the Massachusetts Audubon Society thinks poison ivy should have a home along South Main Street.

David Clapp, director of the Audubon Society, reacted to news reports that a South Main Street man removed the natural vegetation from his property and replaced it with grass seed. The conservation commission ruled last month that Robert Johnston must preserve the area he disturbed along the Gulf River when he removed the poison ivy and replaced it with a lawn.

The commission told Johnston he must plan to revegetate the stretch of land bordering his home and the Gulf River.

Director Clapp stated in a letter to the commission that poison ivy is an important wildlife food and ground cover. The plant acts to hold soil in place and should be considered as an important component in the battle to retard erosion, he stated.

The commission will be reviewing a landscape plan for the area at a future meeting.

Election changes

There have been many changes this week in the various races for town elected offices.

Three more incumbents have decided they will not seek re-election this year. They include: water commissioner Lot E. Bates, health board chairman John Burns, and school committee chairman Joseph Nedrow.

Nedrow has served on the school committee for the past nine years. Burns has served a one, three-year term, and Bates has been a member of the local water commission for nine years.

Incumbent selectman Rocco Laugelle has decided to seek re-election, and notified the town clerk of his decision this week. He will be running for a three-year position on that board. Thus far he is unchallenged for the seat.

Incumbent sewer commissioner Raimund Vanderweil Jr. has taken out nomination papers for a three-year seat on that board. He will be challenged in the April election by Lot W. Bates.

Other candidates for town offices include: Sigrid Carey for a three-year seat on the board of trustees of the Paul Pratt Library; Katharine H. Sturtevant for a three-year seat on the board of trustees; incumbents AgnesMcCann and Elizabeth F. Eaton for two, three-year seats on the library board of trustees; Richard Barrow for a five-year seat on the recreation commission. Library trustee David Wadsworth has indicated he will not seek re-election to that board.

Town joins regional plan

Selectmen voted to participate in a grant application for the South Shore Coalition regional solid-waste planning program, despite the withdrawal of all state discretionary funds to Cohasset.

Because Cohasset has been labeled "unreasonably restrictive" in its housing practices, the state will not award the town any discretionary grant money. Recently, Cohasset was informed it could not participate in a regional purchasing plan developed by the Coalition.

Despite that warning, selectmen voted to apply along with at least 15 other towns, for state money to begin a regional waste disposal program.

Sen. William Golden explained to selectmen that 15 to 20 South Shore towns were being asked to support a grant application to begin the study. The funding is part of the state's new solid-waste legislation, he explained. Under that plan, $175,000 is available to cities and town to begin regional solid-waste disposal proposals. "I think we have an inside track, but we need the commitment from this town to file an application for that grant," he told selectmen. "This is not truly a commitment, but it will give the town an inside ear as to what is going on."

If these towns do not begin to control the solid waste disposal problem, it will be solved by other regional systems or private industries, Sen. Golden said. A regional plan should include the individual needs of each town, what they will contribute to a solution and what alternatives can be researched, such as incineration, recycling and regional composting.

He urged selectmen to continue their negotiations with SEMASS, while taking advantage of the opportunity to participate in a separate regional disposal effort. Sen. Golden said the state grant should be awarded by May or June and a regional plan should be completed after that.

Salvadors ask to buy town land . . .

it was found the property on which they built was a leach access for a town drain, which she claims the town never maintained.

She said her home and garage kept flooding and, "In the summer the smell was terrible."

Salvador claimed you could see the fecal matter lying on top of the ground where the town drainage system was seeking the brook which crossed her property,but could not drain properly because it was so dry.

Salvador said she had tests run by the state lab which showed the fecal count to be very high.

She said the sewer commissioner told her the count was way above the norm.

She claims this situation existed until around 1975 when, at their own expense, the Salvadors installed a drain pipe which hooked into the town line. She said they graded, filled and generally improved the town-owned property.

The Salvadors say the reason they did the work to town-owned property is because they were given the right to use it at a 1969 selectmen's meeting.

"They [selectmen] didn't put any time limit on use of the property," said Salvador.

The present board claims it has no knowledge of the prior board's action; however, in an affidavit from former Selectman Arthur Clark, he states the board did grant permission for the Salvadors to use the land.

He said at the 1969 meeting, "It was the feeling of the board that the lot owned by the town was unbuildable," and the use of the property as a parking space for three trucks "would not create any hardship to the neighbors."

He said it was the desire of the board to assist small businesses and the board therefore granted the Salvadors' request.

"The permission was given without a time limitation," he said.

However, according to town officials, the minutes of that particular 1969 meeting have been lost.

After using the land for more than 14 years and allegedly maintaining the town drain and improving town property, the Salvadors were served with a notice revoking any previous rights or license they might have to the property and giving them 90 days to vacate.

The notice was predicated on the premise that they had no variance from the Zoning Board of Appeals; therefore, they were in violation of the zoning by-laws.

According to their attorney, Joseph D'Agostino, the Salvadors were not in violation and had been operating from the property "in good faith," relying on the permission granted by the 1969 board.

According to the town's Executive Secretary Don Andrew, the notice was a result of a complaint from a neighbor who, he said, no longer lives in the neighborhood.

Selectmen appear hesitant to negotiate an amicable settlement with the Salvadors by refusing to either grant them an easemant or sell them the property.

The board contends the Salvadors must first obtain a variance from the ZBA, but D'Agostino claims this is not correct.

"Before the ZBA will grant any variance they must first obtain an agreement from selectmen to grant the easement or sell them the property," he said. "Under Mass. law, no ZBA can give someone the right to use another's property unless the applying party has the property owner's agreement."

Selectmen disagree with D'Agnostino's argument.

According to Andrew, the board claims the Salvadors must first obtain the ZBA variance before it decides on any course of action.

When asked if the board was considering the improvements and maintenance of the town's drainage system, Andrews said, "I don't feel that is relevant to whether or not the zoning by-laws have been violated."

He also said he didn't believe the seven year statute of limitations applied because under the zoning by-law each day is considered to be a separate violation.

On Jan. 22, D'Agnostino and the Salvadors were informed the case against Litchfield Trucking was to be heard in the Norfolk District Court the next morning.

D'Agnostino immediately tried to reach town counsel Richard Henderson to see if either the case could be postponed or an agreement negotiated.

According to D'Agnostino, he was told by town officials that negotiations were impossible and that Selectmen Chairmen Rocco Laugelle said that it was now in the hands of the court.

How the board reached a decision of no negotiations is not quite clear.

According to Andrew, he tried to reach selectmen to poll them as to negotiations.

"I tried more than once to reach all of the members but was unable to reach more than three," he said, "and the vote was two-to-one against negotiating."

He said in order to pass any vote, there must be four members agreed.

However on Jan. 22, when all parties appeared in court, Henderson apparently had an agreement before the judge, requesting an out-of-court settlement.

Why D'Agnostino was unable to discuss such a settlement with Henderson the day before and where Henderson derived his authority to draw up the agreement is still unanswered.

The Judgement gives the Salvadors 90 days to obtain a decision from selectmen and a variance from the ZBA. It states that should they not be granted a favorable agreement from both government bodies,an injunction will automatically become effective which will permanently enjoin them from parking their trucks on the property and no more than one truck on their own property.

Whether or not the board will look favorably upon the Salvadors' request is not yet decided.

According to Andrew, the board could decide to grant the easement, sell the property after obtaining town meeting approval, the sale of which must be at public auction, or it can decide to do nothing.

Cedarledge resident complains about litter

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

When the Montreal Express roars through Cohasset, it brings more than cold, high winds. According to one resident, it also brings a flurry of trash.

Addressing the Cohasset Board of Health at its meeting Monday evening, Melvin Waldfogel said when the high winds blow through the Cedar Street landfill, trash goes flying in all directions including into the pond located between his residence and the dump as well as onto his property and into the surrounding trees.

Waldfogel said although the fence which the town constructed around the landfill to contain the trash "is terrific," it doesn't do the job.

"Whole bags of trash come flying through the air and land into the pond," said Waldfogel.

The Cederledge Village condo resident said it was imperative the health department have a regular schedule for litter cleanup. He said that in the past two years, he had only seen cleanup crews at the landfill on two occasions.

"We have a very poor design placing the trash on top of the landfill," admitted Board member Bill Baird.

Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset health agent, said the litter is cleaned up periodically and disagreed with Waldfogel's assessment that it had only been done two times during the past year, admitting "It isn't done as often as we would like because we do have a problem getting people to do it."

Godzik explained that even though the board offers as much as $5 per hour, it cannot get workers adding, "We have gone to the Board of Selectmen, the schools and even put ads in the newspapers." He said people would come and work for a few hours and leave.

Another problem which Waldfogel brought before the board was the lack of signs at the landfill, instructing residents that all trash must be bagged.

According to a June 1987 Board of Health regulation, all trash brought to the dump must be bagged, and the board admitted there were no signs at the landfill reminding residents of this fact.

Board member Sharon Becker said the board did "need to put up signs."

Waldfogel suggested one solution might be that charitable organizations could sell bags at the site as a fund raiser.

Baird admitted the board had an enforcement problem.

"We've spoken about placing a police officer up there to enforce the ordinance, but the chief was not very receptive," he said.

In defense of the residents, Godzik said much of the trash is bagged, adding, "A lot more now than before."

Baird noted the board was planning a project which should alleviate the problem.

"Hopefully next year we will have a transfer station and remove the trash elsewhere," he said.

Another solution to the landfill problems plagueing the board is the possibility of curbside trash pickup.

"If we had household pickup," said Baird, "we could close the landfill except for two days per week."

Baird explained that with a trash truck similar to those used by BFI, the trash would be compacted, thus alleviating the problem of wind-blown trash and using less space in the dump.

As reported in last week's Mariner, the Cohasset landfill is under orders from the Dept. of Environmental Quality Engineering to rectify certain defaults the agency found at the landfill. DEQE has also levied a $3,600 Civil Administrative Penalty which the town is appealing.

One of the DEQE requirements is for a hydrogeological survey of the landfill and solving of the leachate problems.

In answer to the town's request eight engineering firms submitted proposals on the work.

Because of the voluminous size of the proposals, the town is asking the DEQE to extend its original Jan. 29 deadline to a more realistic date of Feb. 12, to give the board time to review and consider each proposal.

According to Board Chairman Dr. John Burns, the board will have its decision by its next meeting on Feb. 8.

"We may have to invite some of the firms to come before the board at that meeting," said Burns, "but we will award the contract at that meeting."

The firms under consideration are: Civil Design Inc., Boston; Weston and Sampson Engineering, Inc., Wakefield; BSC Group, Boston; Resources Control Inc., Barre, MA; Gale Associates, Weymouth; HMM Associates Inc., Concord, MA; Camp, Dresser & McKee, Boston and SEA Consultants, Cambridge.

In other business, the board reviewed six requests for variances, reviewed old business and conducted new business.

crowd. I'll say one thing, I was there and never heard any Cohasset student heckle a Rockland player."

Chatterton called Saturday's incident, "real unfortunate. The game had been stopped by the Rockland coach with just two seconds to go because the game had gotten really rough. Rockland had 12 penalties. The coaches shook hands and the skaters left the ice without shaking hands with our kids. Just as the players went off, a few of them headed right into our stands. It was a real melee for a while."

The athletic director said the first half of Saturday night's game went smoothly, but the last half of the third period "got really rough." Chatterton said he has never seen players jump into the spectator stands, but noted, "in a way it was fortunate that some of our school officials were there. We saw the entire thing and our kids, on and off the ice, were great. They never got involved in the fight."

Cohasset coach Dennis Walsh said his players witnessed the fight as they were exiting from across the rink. "They were very concerned - their parents and families were up there. But they kept cool and didn't get involved," he stated. "We really didn't know what was happening from where we were. But we were concerned."

Walsh described the final minutes of Saturday's game as "very rough." He said he didn't understand the violence of the weekend match, considering there is no longstanding rivalry between the two schools. Cohasset High School's hockey team has an outstanding season record, whereas Rockland has experienced a mediocre year.

"Our kids are good skaters and they skated well all night. Rockland is a big team, and towards the end of the game, they started to push themselves around. We don't play like that," Walsh added.

Supt. Hart said neither he nor his wife was injured, although they were in the stands where the Rockland players began fighting. "As far as I know, there were no serious injuries, although that was a real concern at the time," he said. "Everything happened at once, but there could have been some serious injuries because women and children were at the game, too.

"In my estimation, the game got out of hand. Rockland had 12 penalities - 13 and they would have had to forefeit the game. It was a rough game, no doubt about that. This is obviously beyond what you expect at a high school game," he continued. "My main concern at the time was that innocent bystanders could have been hurt in such a small area. We're just grateful that wasn't the case."

Second Congregational Church. The meeting was organized with the assistance of Rev. Gary Ritts of that church.

"It was our basic concern for the homeless, which is a basic Christian concern, that involved us in this issue," he said, noting that he contacted the other Cohasset clergymen for their support. "A lot of interest was expressed by the other clergymen. This particular issue I was somewhat confused about, and I hoped to have this meeting clarify the situation."

The issue was brought to Rev. Ritts' attention by Stephen Bobo, a member of the Second Congregational board of deacons and a member of the social and mission concerns committee. "There is a need for all clergymen to be aware of the whole issue of homelessness. It seems to me that this location would be an ideal place for housing," Rev. Ritts added. "but the issue remains important to me, whether this property is used or not."

Bobo said he became interested in the subject when he read a newspaper article several weeks ago about the estate. "As chairman of the church's benevolent committee, I have been looking for ways to extend our outreach into the community," he said, noting that a groundswell of support regarding the Curtis Estate sale has come not only from abutters but from other residents in far corners of the community.

"A good faction of this town feels we have danced around the issue of homelessness for too long," he continued. "It's time to do something and I'd like to think we can do it."

The purpose of last week's organizational meeting, Bobo said, was to gather ideas and comments and to organize an "advocacy for the disadvantaged people of Cohasset." Three chairmen were elected at that meeting, including Bobo, McElroy and Plante.

More than 60 residents attended the meeting at which the following residents were elected to committee offices: recording secretary, Christine Parker; administrative secretary, Mabel Smith; treasurer, Nancy Snowdale; publicity, Jim Riley; and political action, Maria Plante. Representatives of the Curtis estate trustees, the housing authority and selectmen were invited to the meeting.

Residents were also invited to sign a petition requesting that "the intent of George E. Curtis' last will and testament be upheld, and that the 'Curtis Home' for the needy be maintained and put to its proper use as stated in the will."

"The majority of people concerned with this issue are not abuttors," Bobo emphasized. "They are residents who want sincerely to do something for disadvantaged people."

The estate trustees have petitioned the probate court and the state attorney general for permission to supercede provisions of the will by selling the property to a private developer. There is currently an option to purchase the property for $1.7 million, with plans to construct a condominium cluster on the site.

Plante and the Curtis Estate Action Committee have different plans. "We were thinking that one of the existing structures could be rehabilitated into housing for the low income, and one for the mentally retarded, and the remaining two for elderly residents. This type of project would basically uphold the wishes the Curtis' will," Plante stated.

The committee chairman said she is optimistic about a planned meeting with DeGiacomo, daughter-in-law of the trustee, and an attorney in his Boston office. "She said she'd be willing to sit down with us and the town counsel before they go before the attorney general for permission to sell the land," Plante added. "We are claiming they can abide by the will, even though they are trying to relieve themselves from the conditions of that will.

"By her agreeing to sit down with us, it makes me feel very positive about this," Plante said. "I hope the trustees feel the same way."

The action committee is requesting the trustees forfeit the sale of the land, and donate the 55 acres to the town through the housing authority or another agency such as the South Shore Association of Retarded Citizens.

Committee continues school budget review

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school committee reviewed a $867,010 budget for the Deer Hill School, and began a review of the $2,609,952 high school budget for 1988-1989, noting that most increases and decreases are caused by staff salaries.

Monday night's discussion began with an explanation by Deer Hill Principal Ken Ekberg about the proposed hike in the equipment replacement to $3,500. Ekberg noted that the school's public address system, which is original equipment installed 37 years ago, is in constant disrepair. It will cost about $5000 to repair the system, although only one firm can complete the work because most companies do not have the proper parts.

The entire proposed budget increase for the Deer Hill School is $35,699, including negotiated staff salaries. But Supt. Stephen Hart noted that from that total, $6,200 is just for the purchase of a new public address system and a maintenance contract for the Zerox machine used by the three schools. "So we're talking about a seven percent increase in non salaried accounts, which represents about one percent of the entire budget," he stated.

In the fourth grade at the school, there is one teacher returning from maternity leave, so the budget reflects that $9,000 hike in salaries. There are no additional teachers at the school, and the only remaining increases in the salary accounts are because of step raises.

There is a $30,000 increase in the fifth grade teachers' account which is the result of a fourth teacher and class section being added to that grade. In the sixth grade, there will one less class section, and there is a $28,000 decrease in that teaching account.

The teaching supply account for the fifth grade also reflects the additional class section and a 30 percent increase over last year's appropriation of $3,680. But Ekberg explained that because of the inflationary cost of teaching materials, the decrease in sixth grade class sections does not reflect a similar decrease in materials.

As in the past, school committee members question the extensive use of workbooks in the classrooms. Each year, the cost of texts and workbooks increase and member Barbara Bliss asked if there were any alternatives to workbooks. Ekberg emphasized that workbooks are used dicriminately by teachers who recognize the different learning levels of individual students who use the same book. The students are drilled separately in their writing skills, he said, and workbooks are not used in language arts. "I assure the committee we do not have the kids fumbling through pages one after another indiscriminately," he stated.

Ekberg cautioned the committee that next year, an additional class section is expected to be reinstated in the sixth grade, with four sections in the fourth and fifth grades.

In a brief overview to the committee, Ekberg explained the responsibilities of the enrichment teacher who divides her time between the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Mary McLean devotes 60 percent of her 80 percent employment position to the Deer Hill School where she coordinates field trips and enrichment programs for all students, arranges mini-courses for interested students, and supervises specialized classes for selected students who are "pulled-out" from their classroom.

The Deer Hill budget reflects $17,582 for the adjustment counselor whose salary is divided in half by the Deer Hill and Osgood schools. Supt. Hart noted that a request by the counselor to extend his time to the summer was denied by the superintendent. "I'd prefer to do that on an emergency basis rather than on a contractual basis. That's my recommendation," he stated. "That's not to lessen the importance of his role, but keeping in mind all the priorities of this system."

The Deer Hill library account reflects an increase caused primarily by computerizing the book catologue. The budget total of $2,613 will fund a part-time position at $10 per hour to convert the entire card catalogue of books into a computer. Ekberg noted this will complete less than one-half of the books that need to be coverted into the backup system.

Supt. Hart said if he could find qualified kids in the summer to do the job, it may take less money.

Prior to the discussion on the high school budget, Supt. Hart explained to the committee and members of the advisory board's sub committee that the Zerox machine used by the three schools is constantly breaking down. The machine, which was purchased last year, costs about $660 each time it breaks, he said, which tends to occurr every 100,000 copies or about every month. The machine has already produced about two million copies, Supt. Hart said while recommending that a service contract be implemented for next year.

The school committee reviewed the social studies, foreign language and mathematics departments of the junior/high school budget. High school Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher explained that before the budget was presented to the committee, proposals had been pared down by $70,000 by school administrators.

Social studies department chairman Dorothy Wondolowski explained there is a $22,928 offset provided by a METCO grant to the department's personnel account.

Her primary objective in next year's budget is to replace most of the maps used by the department. Most of the maps are more than 15 years old, containing countries that have since been renamed, or new countries that were not in existence. That expense will cost about $1,700, she estimated.

Another $750 is requested, Wondolowski said, for the purchase of updated video materials. She is also trying to network with area school systems to provide current event videos for the students.

In the foreign language department, chairman Paul Narkiewicz explained there will be one staff reduction caused by declining enrollment in the department. Textbooks in the advanced placement and honors French classes will be combined, he noted. Because of the recent rescheduling and combining of foreign language classes, there is some doubling of the smaller classes, he said. The Latin classes, which now meet every other day, are not as advanced as previous classes but they are proceeding well through the textbook, he assured the committee.

Committee member Diana Kornet praised Narkiewicz and members of the sub committee who worked to rearrange the foreign language classes and scheduling caused by declining enrollment.

The final section of the high school budget reviewed Monday night was the mathematics department. Chairman Keiran Dunn explained that 26 year-old textbooks were being replaced in grade seven next year. "These books are so old," he said, "the students are learning to calculate loans at one and a-half percent interest."

He also proposed a $500 increase in capital outlay expenses to convert the current computers into a personal computer system. Dunn also requested a laser printer for the desk-top publishing computers, which will provide quality reproductions for use by the teachers and students.

The next school budget review will take place Feb. 22 at 8 p.m. when more of the high school budget will be reviewed.

☐ Peter A. Izzo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Izzo, was named to the honor roll for the first semester at Thayer academy. Peter is a sophomore at the school.

☐ A girl was born Jan. 11 at Newton Wellesley Hospital to Anthony B. and Shifi Catlin of Weston. The baby was named Jessica.

☐ Richard Silvia has joined the Cohasset office of the Jack Conway Company as a sales associate.

Silvia earned a Bachelor of Science degree in Education and Political Science from Bridgewater State College and attended Northeastern University for graduate studies. He was previously the New England regional manager for the GMC division of the General Motors Corporation, worked as a legislative and campaign assistant, and was an electronic media coordinator for the Republican National Convention in Detroit, Michigan. He has completed the eight day intensive training course for new associates sponsored by the Jack Conway Company.

He has been a member of the Builders Association of Greater Boston, and the Massachusetts School Committee Association. He served six years on the Cohasset School Committee and served as the fundraising chairman for the Second Congregational Church. He is a member of the American Legion and the Cohasset Historical Society.

A lifelong resident of Cohasset, he and his wife Marsha, a teacher at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset, have three children:Matthew, Danny and Amy.

☐ Al Odermatt certainly was the bearer of good tidings this week! He reports that the Cohasset Community Bloodmobile held on January 26th was the most productive in many years. 120 people showed up to give, and 109 pints of blood were donated. Al, chairman and coordinator Corinne Cahill were very pleased with the wonderful response at this time when there is such a shortage of blood. Thanks are extended not only to the 120 people who presented themselves to give the "gift of life", but also to the group promoters, the media, the Blood Day Volunteers and the Red Cross Staff. The next Cohasset Community Bloodmobile will be held on June 28, 1988.

☐ We hear that Roso Rosano is home after another hospital stint, and that he is doing well. Keep up the good work, Roso!

☐ We also hope that as he reads this, Jackie Rhodes is at home after his recent gall bladder surgery.

☐ Don't forget to order your Girl Scout Cookies, you only have until Feb. 8th to do so! They are only $2.50 a box, and they sure are yummy . . . call 383-1904 or 383-0362 to order some if there are no girl scouts in your neighborhood!

☐ Hats off to Margaret Dillon, Richard Straley and Ozzie Ingram, all who have been nominated for the Chamber of Commerce's third annual Forrest E. King Award. They are all so deserving of the prestigious award, we are sure glad that we don't have to choose! The winner will be announced on Feb. 10th at a dinner-dance to be held at Kimbal's-by-the-Sea.

☐ Hopefully, David LaVange will soon be home with all of his health problems behind him! David is a patient at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

☐ CHS is making a name for itself in the Art World, thanks in part to Allie Redfield, Corey DeSantis, Jacob Powell and Kerri Miele. They were honored recently by the Boston Globe scholastic arts awards show and won either blue ribbons or gold keys. They were honored at the Mass College of Art in Boston and their work will be on display in February at Faneuil Hall.

around town

☐ An unusual experience was enjoyed by Professor John Zotos and his son Frederic recently when the father assisted in the initiation of the Son into the NU Massachusetts Epsilon Chapter of Tau Beta Pi, the National Engineering Honor Society. Professor John Zotos was intiated into the NU Chapter in 1954, his son Frederic in December of 1987. It is unique indeed to have a two-generation family within the Honor Society, and we extend hearty congratulations to them.

☐ Talk around town is that Kelley O'Donnell and Beth O'Brien both did a grand job in their recent productions through the Diane Purdy Children's Theatre Workshop . . .

☐ Congratulations to Helen Pratt, who received the designation of Accredited Relocation Counselor for Hunneman and Co. of the Cohasset office. Helen completed advanced courses in relocation services offered by Relocation Resourced, Inc., of Norwell. The courses dealt with complexities and special problems concerning corporate relocation and transferees. There is a lot of "third-party" transaction in Cohasset, and this enables her to service clients better than ever.

☐ The new Super Stop and Shop certainly brought out the crowds last Saturday! And, how about Jack Sylvia?! Jack arrived at 4 a.m. to be the first to go in the doors as a customer! He had his picture taken as being the first, and he sure deserved to!

☐ Applause goes to our CHS Hockey team, the coaches and the staff that were present at last week's game. They taught everyone a lesson in composure and class during the skrimage that followed the game against Rockland, and we are proud of you guys!

☐ Don't forget to fill out your census and mail it back . . . the deadline is Feb. 25th, but do it early and give our Town Clerk's office a chance to stay ahead!

☐ Finally, watch for the television guide to come out, and look for the special that Channel 7 has compiled on Bryan Edwards and his CHS life . . . should be a grand one!

☐ Don't forget to keep your news coming, we love it!

Taking proper steps

Selectmen have no intention of getting involved, but in this situation, residents have everything under control.

We are referring to the members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee, a group of concerned residents who want the provisions of the late George E. Curtis' will upheld. They don't want to see 55 acres of prime property along Jerusalem Road converted into condominium cluster developments. They simply want the will upheld, which would provide free homes to the disadvantaged residents of this town.

It is interesting to note, that most of the members of this ad hoc group are not abutters to the Curtis Estate. They are simply people who want to see decent housing for those in need, such as retarded citizens, low income families and the elderly.

They became interested in this land when it was recently publicized that a private developer holds an option to purchase the entire acreage from trustees for the estate. The trustees have petitioned the court and the attorney general to release them from the provisions of the late George Curtis' will, which states the property will be used to house indigent women of the Protestant faith.

This will was written before Curtis' death in 1931, and we can therefore assume the word Protestant can be eliminated as a discriminatory description. It is clear to us that Curtis intended his property to be used for the less-able citizens of our town, and certainly not for private development of expensive housing.

The trustees have suggested that profits from the sale will be used for charities, but there is no proof the life beneficiaries have done such admirable deeds with their proceeds thus far. They state that investments have netted $1.8 million which will be set aside for charitable purposes. But the bottom line is that Curtis' will, the legal document that encompasses this whole argument, states the entire property in Cohasset is to be used for housing the needy. That is the charity to which Curtis intended his material goods be donated.

The concerned residents of Cohasset have determined this is an important issue which they will fight to its conclusion. And we believe they are correct.

The trustees of the Curtis Estate, descendants of the original group appointed by the late judge, should follow the provisions of his will. What better way to honor the wishes of this charitable man, than to use his property to provide needed homes for the many disadvantaged residents of this area? Judge Curtis would be proud that his land, which he valued as a summer resort away from his Brockton business base, still held a position of profound importance in this community.

We understand that selectmen did not want to officially sanction this group of residents as a town committee. They are not an appointed group, but simply a gathering of concerned residents who are willing to fight for something they believe in. We don't think they need the support of town officials. They are making things happen on their own, taking each step with caution, and moving slowly but very surely toward their goal of halting the Curtis Estate sale.

We applaud Atty. Noel Collins for proving free legal assistance to this group. They will need some courtroom savvy before this confrontation is over. We hope they continue to proceed cautiously and steadily.

We believe the action committee is taking the proper steps, and moving toward an admirable goal.

QUALITY AUDITING CAC MARK OF INTEGRITY

Board did not ask for 10 plans

Letters

To the Editor:

According to an article printed in the Jan. 14 issue of the Cohasset Mariner newspaper, Stephen Bjorklund allegedly told the Planning Board "he had submitted 10 copies of his most recent plans to the Conservation Commission, and if they had not given them to the Planning Board 'that's not my responsibility.' 'What the Conservation Commission does with ten sets of plans is up to the Conservation Commission,' shot back Sturdy."

The approved Minutes of the Cohasset Planning Board state "Mr. Bjorklund advised that he had given Conservation 10 sets of plans. . .Mr. Bjorklund again advised that Conservation had requested 10 sets of plans, which were to have been given to the other Boards".

We want you to be aware that:

1. Stephen Bjorklund had not submitted 10 sets of his " latest version, which includes front and back stairs to the two-story garage and office building" to the Conservation Commission.

Mr. Bjorklund only submitted two sets of the above referenced plan, and that was not until our January 19, 1988 Meeting, several days after his alleged statement.

2. Although the Zoning Board of Appeals does require 12 (not 10) sets of plans and does distribute them, the plan they sent the Conservation Commission does not contain the added stairs. Moreover, the Conservation Commission does not distribute plans to other boards. Additionally, the Conservation Commission has never requested 10 copies of any plan. In the past we required 2 sets of a plan, but the Board recently voted to require 4 sets because of the need for copies for our files, our Consulting Engineer, and for field inspections by Commissioners.

To require 10 sets of the same plan might imply that the Conservation Commission is wasteful and extravagant, and our Commission wants you to know that the Commissioners do not want to put homeowners or developers under such an expensive burden.

Sincerely,
Merle S. Brown, Chairman
FOR THE CONSERVATION COMMISSION

Resident wants housing in town hall

The Cohasset Town Hall housed more than 400 homeless people for one year in the the early 1900s and if one resident has her way, it may once again become a shelter for the homeless of Cohasset.

Appearing before selectmen Monday night, Mary Klein admonished the board for its apparent lack of concern regarding the unavailibility of housing for the moderate income and homeless people.

Klein reminded selectmen the town was a Housing Partnership Community and, as such, it was incumbent upon them to provide housing for all segments of the community.

She asked selectmen to "evaluate the use of the town hall as a temporary homeless shelter," adding, "I would like to have this option available."

Klein wondered what facilities would have to be added to make town hall habitable and told selectmen that, "of course some other building could be considered."

She also requested that planning begin immediately for the conversion of the Bates building from municipal offices to low-income housing instead of waiting until August.

Klein also asked the board to rescind the sales contract for the Independence Building on the grounds that it was illegal.

"Because the property is held by the town in trust, and has been since 1669, it cannot be leased or sold to a private individual for private use," Klein said.

On the premise the contract was illegal, Klein called in the state attorney general to render a decision.

Selectman Burtram Pratt reminded Klein that neither Bates nor the Independence buildings have been accepted by the state housing program.

"You cannot pass the buck to the Executive Office of Community Development," Klein said.

She said by authorizing town meeting to vote the sale in April of 1985, it had violated the provisions of the 1983 EOCD agreement.

Klein also requested the Government Island apartments be immediately converted into low-income housing. The current lease should be rescinded and income guidelines should be applied. She said she knew of one family who resides in the apartments and has three adult working members. She noted they certainly could afford more than the $325 per month rent. She charged that the board and the town housing authorities were not "keeping track of the present tennent's income."

"I don't believe there is even a list maintained by the housing authority of low-income people," she said.

Klein also suggested the board consider initiating a tax structure whereby the town would tax owners who sold their property above the assessed value.

"People make large amounts of money which was not taxed," said Klein. "It's like carpetbagging."

She said the town could even collect back taxes from positive things," he stated. "One woman came up to me and said she had never seen so many items in one store. It was mind-boggling, she said. The only other comments I heard was how gorgeous the store is, and how they like the variety including the new deli, coffee shop, and the bakery."

There were Cohasset police officers stationed at the store's entrance along Rte. 3A and throughout the 400-car parking lot. "There weren't any problems," reported Chief Joseph Kealey, who said his men will remain at the store until they are relieved of duty by the store's management.

"We'll probably have them around for a week or so," Ryan noted. "But everything went so well, I'm hoping the crowds don't diminish. "

Almost 600 persons were expected to attend the grand opening of the store last Friday night. They were treated to guided tours of the super store, while sipping champagne and tasting hot horsd'oeuvres.

Saturday morning, company representatives joined local officials in celebrating the public opening of this 15 th super Stop and Shop in the state.

The store, wnich is almost double the size of the former store on Rte. 3A, will employ about 350 persons. Most of the positions have been filled, according to Ryan, although there are still some openings.

The wide aisles are uninterrupted by product displays. And another feature of this newest Stop and Shop is the addition of touch-screen computer store directories which help shoppers locate needed items.

Ryan called the store's concept "one-stop shopping," where one store contains a deli, general merchandise, fresh fish, a video store, housewares, a bookstore and a florist.

Company vice president James Carroll estimated that between 20,000 and 25,000 customers will shop in the Cohasset store each week. Those customers will be from Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Norwell. He also noted the Cohasset store, which had to meet specific requirements regarding the store's facade and sign, was the first super Stop and Shop to feature a different architectural design. Members of the local planning board and design review committee required the unique facade for this store.

"This store is proof that a town and big business can work together and come out with a fine product in the end," Carroll said.

Developer Donald Staszko, who labored for three years to receive the necessary permits to begin construction, said he knew all along the supermarket would be built. "I knew I had the right to build this, and my counsel knew that, and always advised me," he said. "He knew we were doing the right thing. I had the will to hang in there when most people would have walked away."

Staszko, who was involved in all aspects of the construction and design of the store, said the choice of Ryan as Cohasset manager was wise. "This man is personality-plus," he stated. "He's a caring man, someone who will be here all the time and won't be hiding. Cohasset is very lucky to have this man here."

Ryan noted that crowds at the store should subside by the end of this week. "But actually, I'm hoping they don't die down. We can handle this amount of business every day! " he added.

Thousands of items filled seemingly endless aisles at the Super Stop and Shop on Rte. 3A. There are 21 shopping aisles in the 49,000 square-foot store.

The video tape department at the Stop and Shop will be attended by David Singer, Lisa Salciani (l) and Susan Holdsworth (r).

School news

Thanks from "Tip"

During "Tip" O'Neill's hospitalization, Osgood's own third grader, Joel Puorro designed a get well card-type poster all the third grade students could sign and then Joel delivered the poster card to Mr. O'Neill. Joel received the attached letter from Mr. O'Neill thanking everyone for their kind wishes.

January 25, 1988

Joseph Osgood School
Sohoir Street
Cohasset, Massachusetts 02025
ATTENTION: Joel Puorro
Dear Joel:

How kind of you and your fellow classmates to think of me during my recent hospitalization.

I certainly appreciate each and everyone signing the poster and thank you for thinking of me.

With my very best wishes for a happy and healthy new year.

Sincerely,
Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.

No p.m. Kindergarten Friday

Because of Friday's special program, all afternoon Kindergartener's are invited to join the morning session. Afternoon Kindergartener's should assume the time and bus assignments they had during the fall session. All children in Kindergarten will be dismissed to buses at 11:35.

IMS news

Winners of the December IMS contest were the following: Grade 6 Class—Mr. Shultz; Grade 5 Individual Winners: Mr. Deakin—Jason Crossman, Ryan Freeman, Kevin O'Donnell, Caitlin O'Leary, Josh Roth, Danny Varisco; Mr. Levine—Jessica Jenkins, Corinna McMackin, Matthew Larson, Herb Creehan, Liz Corcoran, Thomas Greco, Anthony Wigmore; Mrs. Magoun—Jessica Aronson, Eddie Marks, John McDonald.

Early release day

Thursday, Feb. 4, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Junior/Senior High School, noon; Deer Hill School, 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, 12:50.

Lunch will be served in the elementary schools and food service will be available at the junior/senior high school.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow staff at the elementary schools to participate in health education programs, and the staff at the junior/senior high school to attend a workshop presented by Ron Walker of the Peabody School in Cambridge on student motivation.

Valentine Cabaret

The annual Cohasset High School "Valentine Cabaret" will again take place at Kimball's Thursday, Feb. 11.

Featuring the High School chorus, small ensembles, and soloists, the evening of light-hearted music will be complimented by a silent art auction.

A buffet supper with cash bar will be served from 6 to 7:30 p.m. At the same time, artwork in the silent auction can be viewed, and bidding will be received. The Cabaret Show will be presented from 7:30 to 9 p.m. Photos, paintings, drawings, and batik work representing students in grades 7-12 will be auctioned off at the conclusion of the Cabaret.

Reservations should be made in advance, as seating is limited and the Cabaret has sold out in past years. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for students. Checks should be made payable to the Cohasset Arts Boosters Club and sent to Ms. Beverly Lacks, 37 Old Coach Road, Cohasset.

After school program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct an after school sports and low-organized game program for the following days and times at the Deer Hill School gym:

Tuesdays, 3:30 p.m. to 5 p.m., beginning Feb. 2; grades K through 2 Wednesdays, 3:30 to 5 p.m., beginning Feb. 3, grades 3 through 5.

The program, consisting of low-organized games and team sports, will be conducted by recreation department staff members, offering a structured and supervised environment for children who wish to participate.

Registrations will be accepted via telephone by calling the recreation office at 383-6791. There will be a $8 per person fee, with a 50 percent family discount offered for second and subsequent children for the six week program.

Drama festival rehearsals

Sitting in on a rehearsal of Fortress, it is understandable how Cohasset has reached the finals of the State Drama Festival for the past four years.

Ron Emmons, Cohasset's director of Dramatic Arts, puts the cast through its paces with an intensity which strives for perfection.

Fortress is one of two, one-act plays being performed on February 4 at 8:00 p.m. and 6 at 7:00 p.m. at Cohasset High School auditorium. The other, Act Three, Scene Five, joins Fortress as Cohasset's entry in this years Drama Festival.

Written by Michael Scanlan, Fortress deals with the emotional turmoil of two friends, Billy and Kim, who relate each other's stories and eventually come to terms with themselves and one another. A unique aspect of the play is the presence of an ensemble which interacts with and reflects the events of the play. Joe Mazza and Michele Casolaro have the roles of Billy and Kim. Others in the cast include Erin Powell, Scott Caristo, Katie Tolini, Jack Beddows, Rebecca McCarthy, Heather St. Onge, Pam Haase, Jay Staunton, Doug Moe, Jen Coley, Erin Monaghan, Michelle Meagher, Allison Reilly, Jen Plante, Adam Durant, Zach Hochkeppel, J. Gaston, Lauren Kalita and Neely Hemassi.

Act Three, Scene Five will be receiving its first full performance since being published. The author, Terry Ortwein, is the director of the Paul Mellon Art Center at Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, Connecticut. The play involves comedy and romance as it deals with the egos and jealousies of five students rehearsing Act Three, Scene Five of Romeo and Juliet. Cast members include Melissa Greiner, Jason Marsac, Michelle Meagher, Erin Monaghan and Jen Coley.

Following the Feb. 6 performance there will be a reception and discussion with the authors. The first level of the State Drama Festival will be held Feb. 27 with the state finals in March. If rehearsals are any indication, Cohasset should continue their tradition and be among the finalists.

What is a Rockathon?

The Rockathon scheduled to be held Friday, Feb. 12, is a fundraiser for the Heart Fund. Students will be asked to form teams and gather sponsors who will pay you by the minute for every moment you and your team members are in the rocking race.

Prizes will be given to five top fundraisers. Of course, it wouldn't be a Rockathon without rock music. But, giving prizes to winners is not our main goal. . . this is a memorial Rockathon in honor of Mr. Davis and Mr. Sheehan, both beloved members of our faculty, whose hearts gave out during the last two school years. Perhaps, this need not have happened if the funding for research and education had been available. Our purpose is to raise funds for the American Heart Association as a memorial to Mr. Sheehan and Mr. Davis. Mr. Fortin suffered a heart attack during the last school year and Mr. Thompson's recent mild heart attack is still fresh in our minds. Let's do something now so that you and your families will not become part of tomorrow's statistics.

A Rockathon is a contest of your skill as master of the rocking chair. People who wish to participate in this Rockathon should form a team of 3 persons and then see Mrs. Contis or Mrs. Wunschel for sponsor sheets. Sheets will also be available at main office and in the cafeteria.

First you must form your team. Then, you sign up sponsors and have them indicate just how much they will pledge for each minute your team is in rocking motion. Rocking persons will rotate every fifteen minutes with only a 30 second changeover time allowed. You will be under the constant supervision of faculty and parent observers.

We are now soliciting the loan of rocking chairs from people in the community so if there is an idle rocker at home, we certainly would like to borrow it for the Rockathon. (Please, no priceless antiques).

As soon as your team is formed, please get your sponsor sheets to Mrs. Contis. Make sure that you have them write in their names, addresses and telephone numbers.

The Rockathon will be held in the upper gym and will begin at noon and continue to 3 p.m. Arrangements are now being made to provide for late transportation for those who need bus transport.

Faculty volunteers happily accepted.

Sixth grade writing samples

The following pages contain short stories written by the sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School. They are participating in the annual writing contest at the school. Ed.

Great Aunt Marie

Last April I went to Florida on vacation. Half of the time we spent having fun in Disney World and the other half with my great aunt in Imokalee.

My great aunt Marie is very special to me. She is a very kind and generous person. Her mother died when she was two years old. Even though she didn't have a perfect childhood she learned how to be unselfish and caring. She has opened a soup kitchen in Florida for migrant workers. They are people who pick crops for very little money.

While we were there, Marie showed us the area, I became aware of how little some people have. I could see how much she cared for them and how much they loved her.

She really has a unique gift for making people feel special. When she comes to visit she never forgets us by bringing a little gift or just by lots of love. I admire my aunt very much.

Mrs. Magoun

Rap, rap. That's the sound our Social Studies map makes when Mrs. Magoun flings it up.

There is only one thing I don't admire about Mrs. Magoun and that's her little granny glasses that she wears at the end of her nose. I think they make her look old. She has diminutive, glossy brown eyes and rich brown hair that makes her look like a farmer or farmer's wife I should say.

Mrs. Magoun's way of teaching is different than any way of teaching. Her mouth is like a river overflowing with words that make learning fun.

Mrs. Magoun almost never wears a skirt so I like to think of her as a more mellow, our casual teacher, instead of the ones that look they're going to some fancy banquet. But that's why I like Mrs. Magoun because she is one of the most down-to-earth teachers I've ever had.

The Card Shark

My Aunt Betsy is the best card player in the world. The only thing is, she never tells me that I miss a move until it's her turn! She is so sneaky. She always says, "Oh, Larissa, you could have blocked me here, but you didn't."

Aunt Betsy wins every game we play. Whenever I tell Uncle Bob she won, Aunt Betsy keeps quiet, never admits she won to anyone but me.

Aunt Betsy is such a good card player that she even lets younger children win sometimes. Just so they won't get discouraged.

She is always so sweet about those kind of things. Expecially one time when Katrin was so close to losing. Aunt Betsy let Katrin win.

When my Aunt Betsy and I go shopping, she always wants to go into a trick shop to get trick cards!! She is the best aunt ever!

How Personalities Change

My former friend, Tracy Thompson was my best and only friend. We would play together every day, and Tracy always had a new imaginative idea about what to play. On her swings we would play and she would giggle about fake first grade crushes. We were only about six or seven then. But we fought continuously together, for reasons I have no memory of. Often we would not make up for a day or two.

When I started first grade, two months late after going to a different school, she was proud to take me to the bus stop for my first bus ride, and wanted to show me around the school. She would have been my personal guardian if she hadn't had classes to go to.

Every winter she left for Florida and only came back for the summer. As she left each time she would tell me, in a voice like the wind, "I love you. I wish I could take you with me." And I could tell she really meant it.

One winter Tracy did not go back to Florida. She stayed in Cohasset. We went skating on Straits Pond, and for a first time skating Tracy learned very quickly.

When Tracy moved to Florida permanently we were both sorry. The soft blue eyes of Tracy's were lonely and sad. We wrote letters, but soon they had dwindled in exchange and we became further apart in mind and heart, although the distance of many miles remained.

One time Tracy came back to visit in Hull, a few miles down the street from me. Tracy seemed to have changed little over the one or two years she had been gone. She still wanted to play those same imaginary games from the past. But I said no.

Now our personalities have split. We no longer so closely resemble each other. One day I realized I must tell her the truth, she was no longer my best friend, although it was not easy after six years of close friendship. Soon we both realized the loss of a valuable friendship and the letters altogether stopped.

Sometimes I remember those good days with an imaginative loving friend, Tracy Thompson.

Who's the Boss?

I remember the day Boss told me that he loved me. It's a day I'll never forget.

Boss was sitting in his den when I said, "I'm here to give you this piece of squash pie from Mother."

He's a quiet man and when I gave him the piece of pie he smiled. "You can tell your grandmother for me, thank you very much."

I was about to leave when he said, "Come here a minute, I want to show you my painting, I did it quite a while ago."

"O.K., Boss," I said.

As I was looking at his painting, I began to wonder.

"How the heck did Boss get the name Boss?" So I asked him.

He smiled, "I'll tell you," he said. "Your Uncle Walter had just got married to my daughter Gene, Walter really didn't want to call me Dad, not really Ed, so he called me Boss. When your cousin Geralin was born she heard her father saying things like, 'hi, Boss,' or 'good morning, Boss.' She caught on fast and started calling me Boss. Before long it spread through the whole family."

I sat down next to Boss. "I really didn't want you to come over here for you to look at my painting," he said.

"What did you want," I asked?

"I want you to know how much I love you. This much!" He gave me a big hug and kiss.

I never really knew my grandfather until he told me that.

I said, "Thanks, Boss, I love you too."

Someone Special

My grandma is a jolly person with gray, frizzy hair and rosy cheeks. She has blue, twinkling eyes, and a huge grin. She wears glasses so whenever you look at her you see yourself. Like a lot of grandmas she likes to bake sweets. She usually does that instead of playing games. She is very kind and likes all sorts of animals. In fact she has three dogs and three cats. She doesn't get very bored because when she's not baking she's either making crafts, taking care of the farm, delivering puppies or kittens, or writing to all seventeen of her grandchildren. She doesn't smoke or criticize anybody. She enjoys working and going for rides with Grandpa farther into the country side. Personally, I think she looks like Mrs. Claus because of the way she walks, the way she's always smiling, and her generosity toward other people. My grandma is not quite into the times because of the clothes she wears, the expressions she uses, and how shocked she is at the things the children of today know. Another thing that's interesting about my grandma is she has a twin brother named Lester Horace Peabody when her name is Esther Dorace Peabody. My grandma is always full of love and that's what I like about her best, and that's why she's someone special to me.

Megan Bruns

My Mom

My mom is more than just a mom; she is my friend. She has a special laugh that I could tell her apart from anyone, even if she was at the other end of the store than I was. My mom is the kind of mom that talks to me and comforts me when I'm sick. She also plays a game of cards with me after skiing when it is very cold outside.

My mom has brown eyes and brown hair. She always has a smile on and has rosy red cheeks.

Another pleasant thing about her is that she doesn't just play around and make us laugh; she also works very hard to keep our house clean, our family organized, and have dinner ready when my dad gets home from work.

I admire my mother very much and I hope when I grow up I am as good a mother as she is.

A Lady Who Never Gives Up

Her blue eyes shed a soft tear as my family walked into the nursing home. My great-grandmother was looking great. She didn't look pale or wan anymore. Her gray hair had shiny white twists in it that showed how dignified she was. I gave her a big hug and her eyes swelled up with tears.

I remember when I was little I walked in while she was taking her pills. There were about twenty different pills with bright colors that you just couldn't keep your eyes off. I asked her why she had to take so many pills. She just smiled and explained what each pill was for.

At the nursing home my great-grandmother established many things. She take pottery classes and has promised to make me something.

There have been some incidents that scare me. She has had some close calls with heart attacks, but she is still alive and well. I am fully aware that she may die soon, but I don't go around fretting about it. And even if she dies I'll always know she loves me.

She sometimes does funny things; for instance she asked my parents if they were married yet. She forgets people a lot but she's entitled to that when she's 90 plus.

When she wants something she has her own way of saying so. Like once she kept repeating how nice it was for us to come, that meant it was time to go. If she tries she can make it to 100!!!

Grandpa Jones

My grandfather is a one-of-a-kind, unique person. He is tall with a very slim body. He has just a few strands of hair on his head.

My grandfather is a great storyteller. He can tell stories with fictitious characters. Or he can tell true-to-life stories about his childhood. He lived in China in his early childhood. He tells me and my friend George about the great floods and mudslides that ruined his village.

Grandpa Jones can also play the violin. A few years after he moved to Boston, Massachusetts, he played for the Pops. I really enjoyed going to listen to his concerts.

My grandfather is a terrific sailor. He and I enjoy going for a sail. We sometimes even stay over night. We spend most of our time fishing and looking at the beautiful vast sea.

Most of all, I like my grandpa because of his personality.

THE HARP

Once upon a time in a land full of frolic and enchantment there stood a magical forest, just east of the village where Prince Jamie and his royal family lived. Jamie was an ordinary boy with no friends, except of course, Fi Fi, his poodle who accompanied him everywhere he went. If Jamie wasn't busy meeting all of England, he liked to stay home and listen to Rosie, his maid, tell of fairy tales to him. Jamie enjoyed listening to them very much. He even memorized a couple. But his very favorite was the one in the Magical Forest of his land. It was said there was a harp hidden underneath the "Fountain of Pleasure" and anyone who dare to touch the harp will shrink to a petty speck of dust. But Jamie was determined to find it. The next morning Jamie and Fi Fi set off to find this magical harp. Jamie put on play clothes so if he got dirty his father wouldn't mind. As for Fi Fi she was quite a peculiar sight.She had pink bows on each ear and a red sweater that was one of Jamie's old ones. "Get that off," Jamie bellowed. "We have to hurry and look for the harp." The sun shone brightly over the tree tops and the birds were all singing a blissful tune. Jamie skipped along and whistled while he kept a close eye out for the harp. He came across a waterfall that led straight over a cliff. The cliff was only about ten feet deep, but Jamie didn't want to take any chances. He ran around till he came to an area that was safe to crawl down. It looked quite gloomy, but Jamie kept looking. He came around the corner and saw a beautiful sight. There was the harp, surrounded by green grass and beautiful trees, delightfully fragrant flowers, and the sparkling water cracking against the sides of the cliff, while the reflection from the sun made it look as though the smooth blades of grass had tiny dew drops falling one by one into the water. "The Fountain of Pleasure" stood flowing over the cliff while only a small portion of the opening wasn't surrounded by water. "So it's True," Jamie thought. "It's really true." Jamie went to take a closer look and ran through the opening. "It's Beautiful". he thought. As Jamie was walking around it, he tripped over a rock and plucked some of the strings on the harp. "Oh no." Jamie screeched. "What is going to happen to me?" Just then he heard a voice and as he was turning the harp began to speak. "You may have three wishes," the harp said."What?" Jamie questioned. I am a magical harp and anyone who finds me and plucks my strings is granted three wishes". The harp replied. "Oh wow, can I make them now?" Jamie asked. "Of course you can," the harp said."I will wish of good health for my family, good health for Fi Fi, and Um. . .Oh Ya, that I can visit you whenever I want." Jamie asked. "You may have all of these if you promise never to tell about me to anyone." The harp stated. "I promise." Jamie said. Then your wishes are granted.

Jamie left for home with Fi Fi once again, trailing behind. He got to bed and fell asleep dreaming of meeting that magical harp again.

The Magical Harp

It was a moonlit night and I was sitting on my grandfathers lap while he told me a story of the magical harp. He told me the harp had powers from Greek gods from the ancient Greek myths.

To this day no one has found the harp. The only thing people know is that the harp is somewhere in the hills of Santa Fe, New Mexixo.

After I fell asleep I had a dream of searching for the harp. In the moring on the news to my surprise they were having a contest to whoever finds the magic harp wins 1,000,000 dollars, but you have to let the scientists examine the harp to make sure it's authentic. When I told grandpa he told me I could go as long as I'm careful and I don't talk to strangers.

I went to the town hall to sing in to be included in the search party. When I heard the gun go off to start the search I ran right towards Taos Hills. I was in the woods for about two hours then I finally came to an old bridge over a little stream. Suddenly I heard, "Hi little boy." I looked around and right in front of my eyes was a little fairy with two little wings and a wand. She said "I'll grant you three wishes since your the first person back here in three hundred years." I said, "can I use the wishes anytime I want?" She answered yes.

My first wish was to be taken to the magic harp. She said, "yes, but there is a demon out there guarding the harp." Lets go I said with excitement. When we got there the trees were all dead and the stream was dried up. suddenly, the ground began to shake and then suddenly this ugly green creature breathing fire and throwing rocks appeared through the trees. I said "Little fairy I wish that demon would disappear. Seconds later the fire breathing and rock throwing stopped. The trees turned all green and the stream was running. It was the most beautiful sight in the world. That's when I saw this gold shining thing and screamed it's the harp. The fairy said, "yes it is." I hopped across the stream and picked up the harp and yelled, "it's true, it's really true." After celebrating for about five minutes I said I wish I was back at town hall and before I know it I was with tons of people surrounding me. Well, I never did see the fairy again but grandpa and I were rich and we lived happily ever after.

Cousin Cool

When young, you probably had a hero, or an idol. Well, one of my idols was real.

His name is Tom and has curly, dirty blond hair. His clothes are always in style too.

I suspect the real reason why I worshipped him was because even though he was almost grown-up, he still treated me respectfully, but jokingly. Tom, my brother, and I would always play hide and seek. It still makes me laugh to think about hiding in a closet with someone walking by totally unaware that you're right next to them.

Tom was my cousin, my cool cousin. He was like a god to me, always telling my family and me great stories about what happened to him recently. Some were so gruesome that they still today make my stomach churn and my skin jump. I never talked during these conversations or stories, my jaw would be locked open in awe, just listening.

The thing that probably made me adore Tom so much was the way he was so generously kind. He always interested me, and still does.

Cohasset High School sports

By Mike Spellman
Mariner correspondent

Here's a suggestion I propose in earnestness: let's start up a petition to cancel the remainder of Cohasset High's hockey games and reschedule it so that they play all their games against either Duxbury (10-1), or Hanover (8-1-1).

After all, as it is growing ever-increasingly evident, these three teams stand so far apart from the other six South Shore League teams that even when they simply go through the motions a blowout is virtually assured.

And, if this doesn't go through, my alternative proposal is that the post-season play get underway imediately, or A.S.A.P., so that we may dispense with the types of things that took place this past week, which clearly illustrate the disparate levels in this league.

Last week Dennis Walsh's troupe locked horns with Sandwich and Abington, two teams just below the big three in the standings, and had an incredibly easy time of it cleaning their clocks.

Wednesday, at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham the Skippers unleashed an incredible barrage on the Sandwich net that resulted in a 10-2 win, which wasn't even as close as the score might indicate.

For most of all of the 45 minutes the puck stayed in Sandwich's zone and more true than not Cohasset was afforded the luxury of being able to pick it's shots.

Leading the way for the Skippers in the rout was Dan Pompeo, (5g, 3a), who, by himself, helped account for 80 percent of his team's offense Jamie Hoffman (2 g), Craig Mulcahy (1g, 2a), Todd Fitzpatrick (4a). While in net Peter Sandblom and Joel Reidy combined for 24 saves.

And, then Saturday night, at Rockland Rink, Things went bad to worse in terms of parity in the SSL anyway. However, if you are a Skipper backer, things were and still are fantastic.

Again the Skippers were paced by Danny Pompeo, which notched 3 more goals and 2 assists, which brought his week's total to 8 & 5 and season's to 20-22. They rolled over Abington 9-2, although at one point in the game, the opponents held a lead (1-0).

Girls Gymnastics

The girls dropped to 1-5 in league competition last week with a disappointing 104-85. 1 loss to South Shore League rivals Norwell (4-2). However, a few strong individual performances, especially by seventh grader Tara Gallagher, who placed third in the all-around, helped the Skippers at least maintain respectability.

Vault: 1) Kara Connerty (N), 8.2; 2) Karen Phillips (N), 7.9; 3) Dee Mullen (N), 7.8; Bars: Connerty (N), 7.6; 2) Mullen (N), 7.0; 3) Gallagher (C), 6.3; Beam: 1) Connerty (N), 7.0; 2) Mullen (N), 6.3; 3) Gallagher (C), 5.6; Floor: 1) Connerty (N), 7.7; 2) Phillips (N), 7.2; 3) Mullen (N), 7.0; All-Around: 1) Connerty (N), 30.5; 2) Mullen (N), 28.1; 3) Gallagher (C), 25.1.

Boys Basketball

Following last week's play, the boys basketball team (10-2) is just one win away from qualifying for the EMass Tourney. They've beaten all of the teams in their league, they're one of the top rated teams in division 3, and there is no reason to believe that they won't walk off with another league crown. So, you ask, what could possibly ruin the enjoyment of this, at least momentarily anyway. Read on, and you shall discover.

Tuesday night, in their own gymnasium, jampacked for the occasion, the Skippers lost the battle for bragging rights in the S.S.L. when Duxbury, of the big school league, took the first bite of the season out of Cohasset's perfect league record, beating them going away, 91-78.

If there is, however, some consolation for head coach Ed Minelli and his troupe, it is that they helped provide the basketball-crazed throng with quite a show. For this hotly-contested battle, indeed, held everything a good high school game is expected to: big shots, frantic defense, and, most of all, a whole lot of intensity.

For the first 16 minutes the game stayed relatively close, as there were more than a handful of lead changes and ties, neither team ever really taking any kind of advantage.

At the first break the score was deadlocked at 18 by way of basketball's version of the triple-play, in terms of the frequency of occurence anyway, the four-point play, which came on a 40-foot buzzer beating heave by a player who specializes the improbable, Bryan Edwards.

Through most of the second quarter the two clubs again stayed within two or three points of each other, but an 8-0 Cohasset run, sparked by the hot outside shooting of Edwards (16 first half points) and his backcourt mate Dave Shultz (17 points), gave them a 42-37 lead with just a minute remaining, and which should have taken them into the locker room.However, some sloppy play helped Duxbury run off five successive points of their own to close out the half and pull even.

The story of the second half was, quite simply, that the shots which fell for the Green Dragons in the first half continued to do so, while, for the Skippers, just the opposite was true. However, despite having frosted over, miraculously, Cohasset was still within striking distance in the latter stages.

Unfortunately, though, Duxbury, down the stretch opened it up behind some torrid free-throw shooting (in all they were 25-33) while Edwards, a woeful 2-15 in the second half (including 1-8 on 3 pointers), and his teammates continued the bricklaying at their end.

My Grandpa, Poppy

My grandfather has a bit of white hair around his ears. The rest of his head is bald, as bald as the head of a bald eagle.

Grandpa likes to tell us stories. My brother and I will ask him to tell us some fairy tales and he'll tell us any fairy tales he's ever known. Sometimes he replaces some of the words with funnier words to make us laugh.

Grandpa, also, will tell me stories of when he was a little boy growing up in Italy. He and I will talk to each other using some Italian and Polish words that he has taught me.

My grandfather also likes to play games. He and I play card games a lot, such as "STEAL THE DECK" and "GO FISH." We play a word game called "BOGGLE," too. Sometimes I play Boggle with just him and sometimes I play with just my grandmother. But, I have the most fun when I play with them both at the same time!

I care a whole lot about my grandfather (Poppy) and love him a great deal.

Great Bravery

I admire one little four year old boy. He had a little brother who followed him around the yard. He has a new baby girl, a sister, in his family. He might not have been able to see her. He hadLeukemia,a form of cancer. He was in the Hospital for quite a while but I was never allowed to see him. He had lost most of his hair and was very weak. He kept fighting and he overcame this disease. After a while his hair grew back in and he regained his strength. Near the summers end he liked to spend time with his family and friends at the beach. He would constantly be visiting the ice cream truck and the bathroom. The reason I admire him is because of his unique and "Great Bravery."

Uncle John has a lot of humor. He loves to tell jokes and tease people.

Even though he didn't complete college he's one of the smartest people I know. He reads constantly, it doesn't matter what book it is, he'll enjoy it.

He's the friendliest person ever, and has not an enemy in the world. When he laughs his salt and pepper hair touches his eyebrows. His smile goes from one ear to the other, and his black eyes sparkle like a star.

He enjoys going to historical places to walk around in. Every time he comes to visit me we always go somewhere different.

John cares a lot about people's feelings and dreams. When I tell him about what I want to be or do later in life, he doesn't laugh at me like most people do. When he calls on the phone he talks to me about things I care about and enjoy.

If someone asks him to go somewhere, he's ready to go without question.

Even though it's bad for his heart, he'll eat ice cream three times a day. Every time he comes to Cohasset we make sure there's ice cream in the freezer.

I'm very lucky to have an uncle who cares about me as much as John does.

Marisol Perry

Last April I went to Florida on vacation. Half of the time we spent having fun in Disney World and the other half with my great aunt in Imokalee.

My great aunt Marie is very special to me. She is a very kind and generous person. Her mother died when she was two years old. Even though she didn't have a perfect childhood she learned how to be unselfish and caring. She has opened a soup kitchen in Florida for migrant workers. They are people who pick crops for very little money.

While we were there, Marie showed us the area, I became aware of how little some people have. I could see how much she cared for them and how much they loved her.

She really has a unique gift for making peaple feel special. When she comes to visit she never forgets us by bringing a little gift our just by lots of love. I admire my aunt very much.

The Harp

It was a cold but beautiful fall day. The trees were covered with colors of red and gold. I used to come here when I wanted to get away from all of the excitement at home. I would sit on a rock and throw pebbles into a little stream that flowed in the forest behind my house. The day seemed so perfect to have something missing but that week my dog Gretchen had been hit by a car and had died. She was the prettiest dog in the town. How I wish she was with me listing to the birds chirping and to the unusual sound I was hearing. It was like a harp that echoed all around me. When I went home that day I told my mom what I heard. She said it must have been some bird. My little sister suggested that it could have been a little angel. For some reason I accepted my sisters answer more. A few days went by before I was able to go back to my favorite place. As I walked closer to the stream I could see a sparkeling harp just waiting to be played. Then I heard a splash. I looked down at the stream there were three little ripples in the water. So its true I thought its really true. Right beside the harp I saw a little box I opend it and there was a puppy as pretty as Gretchen just waiting to be loved.

The Harp

I have the best uncle in the world. I don't know anyone better. One day my mom told me something that almost killed me. My uncle was going to die. For the first few minutes I was numb. I couldn't move, it was like someone punched me in the stomach really hard. Then I started to cry, I cried and cried until my face was puffy red.

The next day we went to see him in the hospital. He was in pretty bad shape. He was dying of heart disease. He looked at me and said "I have a secret to tell you if you do not tell anyone".

"I promise," I replied.

Then he stated, "In the woods behind your house, about a mile back is a golden harp, it's a magic harp, if you make a wish and run your fingers over it, the wish will come true." After that he died.

As soon as I got home I told my mom I was going for a walk. I took my dog, Goldie, with me and we went to find the Golden Harp.

As soon as we entered the woods a chill went up my spine as I thought of my uncle. Since I had done all my crying before there were no more tears left in my eyes. We walked on for what seemed like a year until we reached the rocks that my uncle had told me about. I looked all around for the harp but nowhere in sight.

"It was a joke," I thought in my mind. But then all of a sudden I saw it, the Golden Harp, it was so beautiful I couldn't believe my eyes.

"So it's true, it's really true," I said to Goldie.

We ran over to it and stared as if lightning had struck us both. Very slowly we took a step closer. I made a wish, I wished that my uncle would have a wonderful second life in heaven.

Opera in Hingham

On Friday and Saturday evenings, Feb. 5 and 6 at 8 p.m., Longwood Opera will present its productions of Rossini's Barber of Seville and Puccini's Tosca at the Old Ship Church, 107 Main Street, Hingham. Friday evening opera goers will hear the Barber of Seville sung in English with keyboard accompaniment, while Tosca will be sung in Italian on Saturday evening. Both operas will be fully-staged and will feature some of the Boston area's leading young professional singers. Tickets are priced at $10 (adults), $8 (senior citizens) and $5 (students/ children) and may be purchased at the door or reserved in advance by calling Longwood Opera at 232-8258.

The opera company presented La Boheme at Norwell's Cushing Hall last November.

Vacation art classes

February vacation is just two weeks away and again this winter the South Shore Art Center will offer its ever popular vacation week drop in centers in Cohasset, Hingham and Norwell.

The daily drop-in programs will meet February 15 through Feb. 19 from 10:30 a.m. to noon in Cohasset at 119 Ripley Road, in Hingham at the Community Center and in Norwell at the First Parish Church.

Young artists ages six to twelve will work on daily painting, drawing and collage activities. No pre-enrollment is necessary for these sessions.

Again this year the drop in program is being funded by a grant from the Joseph Drown Foundation, a Los Angeles based group and the February drop in is also being funded by the Cohasset and Hingham Arts Lottery Councils.

Through these grants the Center has been able to expand its drop in program to its satellite locations and in the process has increased the participation. Last year's two drop in series—in February and in April—drew 457 children.

The drop ins are designed to allow young artists to come in on a leisurely basis to the Center to work on art projects under the guidance of the young artist staff. This is an excellent opportunity for children to experiment with their creativity and to expand their artistic horizons.

All supplies are included in the $3 per day workshop fee.

For further information please call the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548. The Center is also funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities.

PSI Symposium meets

PSI Symposium will present at its next program, speaker Marilou Seavey, a Silva Mind Control instructor and also trained in Neuro-Linguistic Programming (NPL). Her topic will be "Personal Power and Influence: Communication Magic Through NLP." PSI Symposium meets at the First Parish Church, 24, River St., Norwell, Sunday, Feb. 7 at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited. Suggested donation is $5.

In her talk Marilou will cover the following topics:

— The art of creating rapport . . . and what is it anyway?

— Elements of rapport - in behavior, in language & cultural — Mental and behavioral flexibility - at conscious & unconscious levels

— How to get rapport, know when you have it, keep it, use it or break it

— Conversational Hypnotic States using everyday conversation to induce others into trance states

— Embedded Commands subtle hypnosis for directions with a powerful impact

— Creating worthwhile outcomes

— Overcoming unconscious resistance

— Conflict resolution for personal growth

Gourmet club meeting Feb. 9

The Scituate Gourmet-Decorator Guild will meet Tuesday Feb. 9 at 8 p.m., at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church on Country Way in Scituate.

The meeting is entitled "Tea for Two" (or, for a crowd), and will feature various ideas on how tea can be used for formal or informal entertaining with both small and large gatherings.

Nonmembers are welcome to attend for a fee of $3.00.

LaLeche League to meet

The Scituate/Norwell La Leche League will meet Tuesday, Feb. 9, at 7:30 p.m. at the home of Ann White, 34 Pyramid Lane, Scituate. The topic for informal discussion will be "Baby Arrives: The Family and the Breastfed Baby."

people who had already sold their homes for huge profits.

Klein suggested the money collected from this kind of a tax could be used for low-income housing.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said he didn't think the idea was feasible as most of the people had moved to parts unknown.

He said the tax which she proposed was the same type of property sales tax which was voted down by the state legislature last year.

The board assured Klein it would move as quickly as possible to provide low-income housing.

In other business, the board voted:

--To appoint Robert Moody to the Housing Partnership Committee.

--To appoint Capt. Robert Silvia acting fire chief during Chief Daniel Brock's vacation.

--To accept Austin O'Toole's resignation from the Conservation Commission and to post a vacancy to same.

--To request the Mass. Department of Revenue to perform a Capital Needs Evaluation excluding the water department's funding the deficit.

--To sit down with the water department and discuss its repayment of a $400,000 deficit to the town.

Local resident featured in new dinner theatre

Live dinner theatre arrives in downtown Quincy this month. The first production at the new Quincy Center Dinner Theatre will be "Not Now Darling," featuring Cohasset's Molly Hochkeppel. This play is a frothy British comedy that should be just the ticket to brighten a dreary mid-winter night.

Darling Productions of Braintree will join Rural Lodge AF & AM in the new venture, which will be located in the Masonic Temple on Hancock Street across from the Quincy Center T station.

Evening performances of "Not Now Darling" will be given Feb. 20, 21, 26, and 27, with a matinee Feb. 28.

Evening performances start at 8:45 p.m., preceded by a social hour at 6:30 p.m. and dinner, with a choice of two entrees, at 7:30 p.m. Tickets, which include dinner and the show, are $22.50.

Sunday matinees start at 3 p.m. with dinner at 1:30 p.m Those tickets are $17.50. To make reservations, please call 843-5862.

Darling Productions has staged 36 shows over seven years at Christo's II Dinner Theatre in Brockton.

Before that, the company did dinner theatre at Dunfey's Hyannis and summer stock at Priscilla Beach Theatre in Manomet and Old Colony Theatre in Plymouth.

Every time they move to a new venue, the opening show is "Not Now Darling." However, it has never been staged in Quincy.

"We've been doing this show off and on for twelve years and it still cracks even us up," says producer George Stevens, who named the company after the show.

The group has been without a stage since Christo's II closed its doors in December.

Searching for a new home, Stevens was delighted to find that the Quincy Temple, built in 1929, contains a full professional-type stage complete with working footlights, its original cloth drops, an old-fashioned pin rail and dressing rooms.

At the same time, Temple officials were searching for fundraising ideas to continue to maintain their beautiful building. The match seemed a natural.

The theatre comfortably seats 300 for dinner and there's plenty of free parking available.

Over the years, Darling Productions has employed hundreds of actors and stage technicians from South Shore towns and Boston.

The cast of "Not Now Darling," all theatrical veterans, includes Stevens and his wife Tommie of Braintree, Molly Hochkeppel of Cohasset, Skip Maloney and Pam Rich of South Weymouth and Madelon Finnegan of North Andover.

Also featured are Jim Leonard of Hingham, Rosie Martinez of Marshfield, Tom Moloney of Taunton, and Greg Bazaz of Stoughton.

The play's action—and there's plenty of that—takes place in an elegant London fur salon. It is a nicely naughty mix of champagne, shenanigans, mistaken identities, and mink.

It is the producer's philosophy to keep things light after dinner. The company's repertoire includes British and American farce, Neil Simon and other mainstream comedies plus an occasional musical.

The opening season will also include Neil Simon's "Last of the Red Hot Lovers," March 19, 20, 25, 26 with a Sunday matinee March 27.

Barney Cashman is a gentle middle-aged nebbish who wants to join the sexual revolution before it's too late. He tries to find true—if illicit—love with three wildly different women.

The parts were played on Broadway by Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy.

The company will begin a new year-long season in the fall which will include longer runs of each production.

Reservations for all shows are available at 843-5862. Visa and Mastercard are accepted, or pick up your tickets personally at Darling Productions, 654 Rear Washington St., Braintree.

ANNOUNCING OUR 7th EDITION

Where local residents look first ...

Book more local business!

Did you know that 90% of all consumer needs are met within a 3 to 5 mile radius of home? And that 85% of all telephone shopping is done within the local exchange? It's true! Local business can be big business! If you know how to attract it.

How do you do it? By making sure that local consumers find you when they're looking for the type of products or services you sell. And you do that by advertising those products and services where local consumers look first. Manning's Little Phone Book.

Advertising in Manning's Little Phone Book is targeted advertising. Targeted advertising is cost-effective advertising. Advertising that works! Advertising you should know about.

To find out what advertising in The Little Phone Book can mean to your business, call your Manning representative today. Remember, to book more local business, make sure you're in the local book. Manning's Little Phone Book.

Why local consumers look in the Little Phone Book first.

- ☐ IT'S ALWAYS HANDY. It usually sits on top of the big directories, or right next to the phone.
- ☐ IT SAVES TIME. Tells buyers where to find what they're looking for — quickly, conveniently, close to home.
- ☐ IT'S EASY TO USE. Compact and lightweight. Fewer pages to search through. Easy to hold in one hand while dialing the phone with the other.
- ☐ IT'S COMPLETE. Every local business and residence is listed.
- ☐ IT'S HELPFUL. Pack with thoughtful extras like money-saving coupons, restaurant guides, listing of professional services, and a handy fold-out street map.

"WE'RE READY NOW TO HELP YOU ATTRACT MORE LOCAL CUSTOMERS"

Cohasset worship . . .

Shabbat services

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 112 Main St., Hingham on Feb. 5 at 8:00 pm. Services will be conducted by SHASTY, the Temple Youth Group. SHASTY will be hosting a regional convention of Temple youth groups. Feb. 5-7.

Homemaking meeting Feb. 11

Love—you can't bottle or store it but you'll have a plentiful supply if you share it. Such is the theme of Homemaking, LDS style Thursday, Feb. 11, at 7 p.m. The place? The Meeting house at 379 Gardner St., So. Hingham.

Homemaking meetings are held monthly in Mormon churches for members and friends. "They are an evening out, special, just for women," says Diane Mangum of Norwell, the group's leader.

Women of Cohasset are welcome to attend, and learn how to make a lacy-ruffled heart wreath to adorn your wall, or, to share ideas for great family home evening lessons that express our love to family members, or, learn to put love in our cooking with a pastry demonstration conducted by pastry chef, Stan Hardy.

As a momento you may receive a booklet of: poems and scriptures on love, and recipes of the fun finger deserts of the evening. If you are coming to the meeting, please call Diane to let her know, at 659-4709.

Beechwood services

The Beechwood Congregational church invites everyone to worship Sundays at 10:45 a.m.

The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care is provided downstairs following the childrens sermon.

Sunday school for children grades K-8 meet Sunday morning from 9:30-10:30 a.m. children are working on a project involving a visit to a nursing home on Valentines Day. All neighborhood children are welcome to attend.

Pastor Hall and a group from the church will be attending a worship service at Walpole prison Friday, Feb. 5. It is too late to sign up this time but people interested in attending next time may call the church and leave a message.

Mark the date . . . Feb. 18 at 6:30 p.m. The next Beechwood neighborhood social,bring the family and a covered dish for an evening of fun.

Church numbers: church 383-080; Pator-Hall 545-3810 home; 545-6800 work.

St. Mary's services

The Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults will be explained to all parishioners of St. Mary of the Assumption Parish in Hull, Feb. 21 from 3 to 5 p.m. at St. Ann's Hall, Lewis and Samoset Streets.

The movement is coming to the parish, and all adults aged 16 and over are urged to attend the parish meeting. Wine, punch, and cheese will be served.

Also, St. Mary's Worship Committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 8 at St. Ann's Hall to plan meaningful liturgies. All parishioners are urged to attend.

Saint Anthony's Parish

Cohasset worship

St. Stephen's Church

PANCAKES ON SHROVE TUESDAY: Our Shrove Tuesday Pancake Supper will be held Tuesday, Feb. 16 at 6:30 p.m. It is a wonderful time to celebrate before the start of Lent. The pancakes and sausage always seem to hit the spot and there is a pinata filled with candy for the children. Streamers and balloons add a festive Mardi Gras atmosphere to Walton Rodgers Hall.

Traditionally Shrove Tuesday was the day families would use up their butter and eggs to conserve the perishable food in their larders before the Lenten fast—hence pancakes. "Shrove" is so named from the shriving (an old word for confession and absolution) of the people in the churches on that day.

ASH WEDNESDAY: Our worship, Ash Wednesday, Feb. 17, will entail a Eucharist at 9:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. The Litany prayer on this day is particularly moving. Ashes will be administered to those who wish. It is completely voluntary. The significance of the ashes is as a sign of penitence and of our limitations. Lent is a time of self-examination when we are made aware of our need and reliance on God's love and forgiveness.

LENTEN COURSE ON PRAYER: A Lenten Course on Prayer will be given Tuesday evenings beginning Feb. 23 at 7:30 p.m., coupled with Morning Prayer on Thursday mornings (before the commute) at 6 a.m. starting Feb. 25.

The course will begin with our questions on prayer, and learning what centers us in the fragmented world in which we live. We will look at various personal devotion and meditation. We will ask if there is a feminine as well as masculine view toward prayer. How do we integrate prayer into our busy lives? Finally, of all the different types of prayer we will explore what works for us and end with a practice of prayer that empowers us for our daily life.

Morning prayer Thursdays will give us ongoing experience with a daily prayer that is integral to our tradition.

NEW HYMNALS: There is still time to donate new Hymnals 1982 for the church in memory of loved ones. This is a wonderful memorial. The books cost $10 each. Bookplates with the names of those in whose memory they have been given will be placed in the Hymnals. The Hymnals will be blessed and introduced when Bishop Johnson comes for confirmation on Sunday, February 28.

CONFIRMATION: Bishop Johnson will be with us at the 10 a.m. service Sunday, Feb. 28. Young people and adults will be confirmed on that day. Confirmation is a public affirmation of our faith and a strengthening of the Spirit within us to carry out that faith.

DRUG FREE KIDS: Straight talk from parents to kids about drug and alcohol abuse is the purpose of a video, "Drug Free Kids: A Parent's Guide," to be shown at workshops beginning in February. Mimi White, drug and alcohol education coordinator for Life Resources, Inc., and a consultant to the Catholic schools in Boston, will use the video as the foundation for workshops on Monday nights, Feb. 8, 22, & 29, and March 7 from 7 to 9:15 p.m. in the audio-visual room at Cohasset High School.

Reservations are on a first-come, first-served basis and may be made by sending a check for $10 to the Social Service League, 16 Highland Ave., Cohasset. The $10 fee will admit either a single parent or both parents, and the number who will attend should be indicated on the check. Additional information may be obtained by calling 383-0771.

First Parish

HABITAT HOUSE RAISING WALK: Habitat for Humanity's 12th Anniversary House Raising Walk, scheduled for June-September 1988, will pass through towns serviced by South Shore Habitat.

Starting in Portland, Maine June 26, thousands will walk and work their way down the coast and arrive in Atlanta Sept. 15 for a celebration, during which time more than 1200 miles will have been walked, more than 120 homes built and $1.2 million raised.

The House Raising Walk will harmonize a symbolic consciousness-raising walk and an action-oriented house raising effort. Monday, July 4, the walkers will proceed southwest from Boston. They will pass through Randolph and other South Shore towns and will spend a night in Brockton.

DRUG FREE KIDS: A PARENT'S GUIDE—will be shown at workshops sponsored by the Social Service League of Cohasset beginning in February. Mimi White, drug and alcohol education coordinator for Life Resources, Inc., will use the video as the foundation for workshops to be held Monday nights, Feb. 8, 11 and 29 and March 7, from 7 to 9:15 p.m. in the audio-visual room at Cohasset High School.

After six-year fight, court sides with landowner

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

After a six-year battle against the town, the owner of a Pleasant Beach property won the right to build a home upon his land.

Superior Court Justice David Kopelman ordered the zoning board of appeals to issue a special permit to Barbara O'Pray, trustee of Waterfront Realty Trust, and to co-owner Donald Staszko.

The zoning board has the option to appeal this decision which was rendered following a superior court trial. The plaintiffs were represented by Atty. Charles Humphreys and the town was represented in court by Atty. Richard Henderson.

Judge Kopelman found the zoning board "exceeded its authority, was unreasonable, arbitrary and capricious" in its denial of the special permit. Citing legal precedent, Judge Kopelman concluded that preventing the owner from using coastal wetlands "for any practical purpose would not be within the scope and limits of any power or authority delegated to the town under the Zoning Enabling Act, G.L. c. 40A."

O'Pray requested a special permit from the zoning board at a July 12, 1984 public hearing. The board denied the application two months later. At that time, the board found the waterfront property location "changes shape, elevation and countour annually due to wave action." The zoning board also decided the trustees failed to comply with a section of the bylaw regarding construction in a floodplain and watershed protection district.

The owners propose construction of a four-bedroom, single-family residence with an attached two-car garage on the Jerusalem Road side of the Pleasant Beach property. The house will be constructed on 17 concrete pilings, and will include an on-site septic system.

In his Feb. 5 decision, Judge Kopelman noted after the town's conservation commission denied the septic system plan, the trustees appealed the decision to the state Department of Environmental Quality engineering (DEQE). DEQE subsequently awarded a superceding order of conditions, noting "the proposed dwelling and apparent structures can be built subject to conditions

Former firefighter files nine-count lawsuit vs. town

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Former Cohasset firefighter Richard Conley and his wife, Martha, have filed a lawsuit against selectmen and the former fire chief, charging them with nine counts of negligence, reckless conduct, emotional distress and loss of consortium.

The 50 year-old firefighter retired in the fall of 1987 with a disability pension awarded by the Norfolk County Retirement Board. Conley was awarded the pension following two work-related accidents in which he injured his back. He had worked as a Cohasset firefighter since May, 1960 and retired in October, 1987.

Although Conley had been appointed an acting captain, he was a firefighter at the time of his retirement. The first accident occurred in January, 1985 when Conley fell off a fire truck. He was hospitalized and unable to work for several months. Based on a June 7, 1985 diagnosis from a physician employed by selectmen, Conley was ordered back to work on light office duty. His first day back on the job, June 8, 1985, Conley fell off the chair at the watch office and re-injured his back.

Although the county retirement board initially refused his disability pension, Conley appealed the decision to the state Public Employee Retirement Administration which awarded the pension.

According to Conley's attorney, James L. LaMothe Jr., "up until his retirement last fall, Dick was made to work part-time, off and on doing light duty." When Conley was awarded the disability pension, he retired from the department.

When asked if Conley is currently employed elsewhere, his attorney stated, "not that I am aware."

The lawsuit specifically names the members of the board of selectmen in 1985, including Frank England, Mary Jane McArthur, Diane Sullivan, Clifford Mitman and Rocco Laugelle, along with former Chief Martin

Harbor odor forces report

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

Persistence and fortitude were the watchwords of a group of Cohasset citizens who care about their town and its surroundings.

"If you work very hard at any project and you believe in that project, you can get help," said Daryll Roberts who was perhaps the one citizen most directly responsible for the cleanup study of Inner Little Harbor.

When he moved to Cohasset five years ago, he settled next to Inner Little Harbor.

"Not only were the aesthetics lost, but the stench was terrible," he said. "The condition lasts from about April to July."

Roberts said he called a meeting of all the harbor's abutters to see what could be done to get rid of the problem. He said they knew it was algae and had seen what had been done in Hull to correct a similar problem.

After several meetings at which representatives of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, Division of Water Pollution Control were present, it was decided to try and obtain a DEQE grant to study the problem and find out if it created a health hazard.

Roberts said DEQE had been "very helpful" in assigning a project engineer to do a study to see if the proposed project qualified for DEQE funds.

Finding that the proposed Inner Little Harbor project did qualify, DEQE informed the citizens' committee the estimated cost of a study would be $40,000, of which it would fund 70 percent with the town responsible for the additional $12,000.

"Not only were the aesthetics lost, but the stench was terrible."

Daryll Roberts

An element which is found missing from many of today's communities is caring about the community and the banding together for a common cause.

However, this is not the case in Hingham, at least with the abutters of Inner Little Harbor, for before the town had approved its share of the study money, this small group of people had quietly donated $3,000 from their own pockets to help defray the cost of the study.

With all the approvals in hand and the funding in place, the town advertised the project for bid.

Presenting the low bid was IEP Consultants of Sandwich.

IEP Consultant Dave Worden, who has been conducting the first phase of the study, said the Diagnostic Feasibility Study is complete.

He said the study was to define the problem and ascertain what was causing it.

Cohasset's week . . .

Cohasset caucus Feb. 27

Registered Democrats in Cohasset will be holding a caucus Saturday, Feb. 27, at 2 p.m. to elect delegates to the 1988 Massachusetts Democratic Convention.

Cohasset will be electing four delegates and two alternates, equally divided between men and women, to send to the Convention. The apportioned number of delegates has been allocated on the basis of a formula giving equal weight to Democratic Party registration and the average vote for Democratic candidates in the last general elections for governor and President for which figures were available at the time delegate tabulations were prepared.

Donna J. McGee, chairman of the Cohasset Democratic Committee, will call the caucus at Cohasset Town Hall.

The caucus is open to all registered Democrats, persons ineligible to register and media representatives. The only persons eligible to participate in any portion of the caucus are those who are registered Democrats in the ward or town as of December 30, 1987. There will be no absentee or proxy voting.

Candidates for delegate and alternate must also be present, voting and give his or her written consent to be nominated and that nomination must be seconded by two persons present at the local caucus.

All ballots will be written and secret. Those candidates receiving the greatest number of votes on the first ballot will be elected.

Each candidate will be allowed to make a two-minute speech and to distribute on his/her behalf one sheet of paper listing qualifications and ideas.

Slate making is allowed, but no special preference shall be given to slates. There is no quorum requirement for the caucus.

There will be no admission or expense charge at the caucus, although donations may be solicited.

Discrimination on the basis of race, sex, color, creed, national origin, religion, ethnic identity, philosophical persuasion or economic status in the conduct of the caucus is strictly prohibited.

Challenges to the delegate selection process can be filed in writing with the Compliance Review Commission, c/o The Massachusetts Democratic State Committee, 11 Beacon Street, Suite 426, Boston, MA 02108 no later than February 29, 1988.

Free tax assistance

Volunteer counselors trained by the Internal Revenue Service will be available in many cities and towns in Massachusetts from February 1 through April 14.

Persons using this service should bring with them copies of their previous year's federal and state tax returns and forms for the current tax year, including W2s, 1099s and other relevant materials showing income for the year.

Please call Mildred Harrington (383-0216) or Betty Van Slyck 383-1561) for an appointment.

Curtis committee meeting

The Curtis Estate Action Committee will brief concerned citizens on the results of their first meeting with the trustees Saturday, Feb. 13 at 10 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. The action committee will present preliminary proposals for the use of the Curtis Estate at that meeting.

High school budget Feb. 22

Monday, Feb. 22, the school committee will continue its review of the 1988-89 high school budget. High school parents are encouraged to attend this opening meeting, scheduled for 8 p.m. in the home economics room in the west wing of the high school.

School budget meetings provide a forum for public discussion of school programs, policies, and priorities, with each department head presenting a comprehensive overview.

Learn about the school, register your ideas, and offer essential support.

Hazardous waste grants awarded

Hingham and Cohasset were recently awarded matching funds for household hazardous wastes. The state Department of Environmental Affairs awarded the grants as a match of estimated costs for the collection, transportation and disposal of household hazardous waste, according to Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray.

Communities that have not been previously funded under this program were eligible for a 50 percent match, those with prior funding a 35 percent match. These grant funds are administered by the office of Safe Waste Management.

Cohasset was awarded $1,751.50, with a 35 percent match; Hingham was awarded $3,396.60 with a 35 percent match.

Cohasset, Hingham and Hull will collectively hold a household hazardous waste collection day in the spring. The Massachusetts Area Planning Council will designate the day.

The site of collection is tentatively planned for Station Street, Hingham (the town parking lot.)

For further information contact the town health agent.

Advisors reject department budget hikes

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

The advisory committee recommended drastic cuts and was unable to vote on two proposed budgets presented to it Tuesday night.

Committee Chairperson Jane Goedecke told representatives from the conservation commission and the health department that money was not available to fund their increased budgets.

Conservation Chairman Merle Brown told advisors that because state law did not allow him to charge more than $25 for a Notice of Intent, the commission was unable to raise much revenue. He said last year the commission only raised about $2,100.

The commission's $12,000 requested budget is up 50 percent over last year's, but according to Brown, it still is one of the lowest in the area, adding, that other towns in the area are amazed at Cohasset's low conservation budget.

He cited Halifax with a full-time conservation person whose salary alone is $37,000, Hanson's at $21,000 and Hanover with a part-time person who draws $19,000. "We're a coastal town and have to deal with a lot of waterways," Brown said.

He said the overall building growth may be down, but not in conservation areas.

"There's a lot of wetland left," Brown said.

Brown told the advisors that he was talking to legislators about raising the $25 NOI fees, but if they were favorable it would take time.

The largest increase was the need for the commission's secretary, Patricia Walsh, to work an additional 20 hours per week.

Answering the committee's question as to whether or not the additional hours were necessary, Brown said, "We really need her. We just can't keep up with the paper work."

Walsh presently works 20 hours per week for the commission and 20 hours per week for the sewer commission, but, unknown to Brown, the sewer commission has requested an additional 84 hours per month of her services.

Goedecke said that until the committee checked with the sewer commission it could not vote the proposed budget.

The board of health's proposed budget ran into trouble right from the start.

Although there was no increase in personal money, the travel and meetings more than doubled from $240 to $750.

Board Chairman William Baird said the increase was so Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent, would be able to attend meetings and seminars on hazardous waste, toxicology and health-related matters to enhance his skills which, to date, he has been unable to do.

"Someone in the town should have some knowledge about hazardous materials," said Baird. "If we should ever have a spill it could be a disaster."

Another item which brought raised eyebrows from the board was hazardous waste inspection which had a price tag of $30,000, up 50 percent from last year.

"If something should happen at the landfill we might need Camp, Dresser and McKee to rush in and that costs money," said Godzik. "Of course," he added, "if nothing happened, then we wouldn't need the money, but I would rather it would be there."

Lab tests was another item the committee felt could be slashed despite Baird's explanation of why he felt it was necessary.

According to Baird, who is an environmental engineer, the state does not require any town under 10,000 population to test for chemical contaminants in its drinking water. The only requirement is that the water meets EPA minimum standards.

He said that each test costs $1,200 and "It would be nice if we could test at least a couple of times a year."

Office supplies took a huge jump which was attributed to paper used in the department's copying machine.

It was decided that key counters would be purchased by each department to keep track of how many copies each made and they would be charged for their own usage.

Godzik announced the department would hold its annual hazardous waste collection day, but due to the Hazardous Waste Management Agency grant just being received, he could not give an exact date.

He said this year the collection would be a regional endeavor with Hingham, Hull and Scituate joining Cohasset.

The request for the department to purchase a respirator did not meet favorably with the advisors.

Baird said a respirator was needed especially if a man had to go into a manhole where the air was foul and oxygen lacking.

"That could be a life-threatening situation," he said.

Godzik said he could use it when he went to investigate asbestos removals. He said he does not enter the places now, but usually looks through a window, because itis too dangerous to enter without a respirator.

Godzik explained the advertising budget had increased due to printing new laws, posting bid requests for new equipment and more studies on the landfill which would have to be advertised for bid.

The department is, however, trying to hold the line.

Godzik said the department has doubled its permit fees,and the tipping fees for Cohasset Heights landfill has risen from 50 cents per ton to $1.67.

The bottom line, however, is the health department's budget has leapt $20,000 from $90,000 to $110,000.

The landfill fared little better for its proposed budget skyrocketed from $282,000 to an estimated $454,000 plus.

The landfill, which has been beleaguered by the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and beset by almost insurmountable problems, saw its proposed budget slashed.

Despite Godzik's explanation that the landfill was rapidly losing room to put any more trash, the advisors felt the request for a Sheepfoot compactor at more than $100,000 and a chipper, which would reduce large logs, pallets and sheets of plywood to mulch, were not fundable this year.

When Godzik explained that the chipper was portable and could be used by other towns, it was proposed the department wait until the new Solid Waste Management Act which was passed last year and provides some $250 million for such project, could be put into effect. In order to receive a grant, Godzik said Cohasset would have to join with other towns and form a coalition.

Despite major problems with seepage, the $50,000 for leachate control did not pass the advisors.

"All the money we've spent capping and seeding Phase I of the landfill was wasted," said Baird, "because the DEQE wouldn't let us expand Phase II."

He said DEQE told the department to build up Phase I which it did. It also created a leachate problem. According to Baird, the leachate won't run down through the capped portions because they are frozen.

Deer Hill students celebrate Black History

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The proud heritage of black Americans is being celebrated this month by the sixth grade students at Deer Hill.

For the past several weeks, students have researched and prepared reports on Americans who have made significant contributions to black culture, its history and its future. Under the guidance of teacher Katherine Whitley, the students poured through books at the Paul Pratt and Deer Hill libraries, searching for information about their selected subjects.

Oral reports were given by the students, as part of their observance of Black History month. Their subjects ranged from well-known entertainers such as Bill Cosby, to sports heroes and scientists - men and women such as Abraham Lincoln, John Brown and Willie Mandela. Each student made a personal choice and began their research using the facilities at the two libraries.

Four Deer Hill students recently talked about their reports and the subjects they selected. Gerht Lubitz gave his report on baseball legend Jackie Robinson. Kenya Cannon completed her report on gospel singer Mahalia Jackson, and Lauren Almeida researched the extensive background on Bejamin Banneker, an astronomer, farmer, mathematician and surveyor who lived two hundred years ago. Charlie Endriss wrote his report about Martin Luther King Jr., the man who helped attain civil rights for all Americans.

Gerht said he chose Robinson, "because I was interested in learning about how he got into the major leagues," he said, admitting he combined his interest in baseball with the school report.

Charlie said he used many different books to complete his report on the well-known Civil Rights activist. "I think he was a very good man," Charlie said after finishing his studies on Martin Luther King. "He changed a lot for the blacks, and I agree with the way he won civil rights. He was not a violent man."

Lauren explained that Banneker had been a slave for seven years, and never finished higher than the eighth grade. He was a self-made man, studying math and astronomy and eventually helping to survey the boundaries of what would be Washington, D.C. "He accomplished many things," she recalled. "But he wasn't really admired until after he published his almanac.

"I think he was a very nice man, and well known by many people. There is a park in Washington named after him," she added.

Kenya said she chose Mahalia Jackson as her report topic because she admired her songs. A member of the church choir at Mt. OliveTemple of Christ in Mattapan, Kenya now sings many of the songs performed or written by the world-famous gospel singer.

"She always sang gospel, which are songs about the Lord," Kenya explained. "The gospel was very important to her because her father was a minister and she was always going to church. She seemed to be a nice person." Kenya said she admired the singer, although she has never heard any recordings of the performer.

Jackie Robinson "made a big difference" to all black athletes who aspired to the major leagues of professional sports. Robinson is credited with breaking down the "color barrier" of sports as the first black in professional athletics. "He had a lot of courage," Gerht noted. "He was recruited by the owner of the Brooklyn Dodgers who wanted a black man on his team. One time he asked Jackie what he would do if he was playing shortstop and someone slid into him and cut him. Jackie asked him, 'do you want to know if I'll have the guts to fight back?' And the owner said, "No. I want you to have the guts not to fight."

METCO coordinator Patricia Brown was invited to listen to the oral reports given by the sixth graders. She walked away with lots of information and was impressed by the students' newly-acquired knowledge. "They all did such a great job. By giving the oral reports, they shared their information which was beneficial to everyone. They all did a wonderful job and we all learned a lot," Brown stated.

which will prevent any adverse impacts to storm damage protection, prevention of pollution and flood control."

Former Building Inspector Edward Poskus, zoning officer for the town, determined the waterfront plans were in compliance with state and local building codes. But because the land was located within a floodplain, a special permit would be necessary for construction.

The property trustees also received approval from the state Coastal Zone Management (CZM) "that the site is not considered part of a barrier beach." The property owners had argued in superior court last year that the site was not subject to flooding or wave damage. And FEMA concurred, noting "that even in a 100-year storm event, flooding would not occur on this site above elevation 16." The judge noted in his decision that FEMA already determined the proposed structure is located at an elevation where it will not suffer any wave damage. In fact, Judge Kopelman noted, the National Flood Insurance Program would permit the plaintiff to insure his property, even if it were constructed at an elevation of 16 feet, which is five feet beloew of the proposed elevation of construction. He concluded, "I find that neither the land where the proposed house is to be located, nor the proposed structure itself, would be subject to wave damage or flooding during severe storm events. Even the great blizzard of 1978 failed to produce waves with sufficient height and energy to reach the ridge or knoll upon which the plaintiff proposed to build her residence."

The superior court judge explained that the next door property, owned by Virginia Sherbrook "is at its highest point two feet below the elevation of the ridge on which the plaintiff (trustee O'Pray) proposes to construct her residence."

He noted, "a 100-year storm event would be much more likely to cause damage to the Sherbrook property than to the plaintiff's proposed construction.

The judge enumerated the reasons for approving the appeal, noting the trustees demonstrated the construction will not obstruct flood flow and will result in minimal change on grades; the land is not subject to flooding or wave damage; the residence is located at a substantially higher level than required by Cohasset bylaw; the proposed enlargement of the retention area will increase the flood storage capacity; the sewage disposal will not cause pollution; the land does not derogate substantially from the purposes of the floodplain and watershed protection district or zoning bylaw; the proposed construction would have no effect upon the water table.

Judge Kopelman concluded by stating, "to deny her (O'Pray) the grant of a special permit would render this unique residential property essentially valueless. the denial of a building permit to the plaintiff is all the more egregious when one considers that a building permit was issued to the owner of the adjacent lot."

He added, "the power to regulate under the zoning bylaw cannot be exercised on such a manner and to such an extent that it deprives the plaintiff's land of all practical value to her or anyone acquiring it, leaving her only the burden of paying taxes on it."

Cohasset Community Center courses offered

The Cohasset Community Center will offer low impact aerobics Monday through Friday from 9 to 10 every morning and Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 5 to 6. Come as often as you like.

The center is also offering jazz exercise Monday evenings from 7 to 8:30 and dancercise Wednesday evening from 7:30 to 8:30.

Fitness equals fun on Saturday mornings, with a class for men and women that includes a workout and ends with stretches and a warm down. Professional diet and nutritional counseling are also offered on Tuesday evening. Call the Center at 383-0088 for complete information or to sign up for any of these classes.

Bowling is available to all from 3 to 5 every afternoon and from 1 to 5 every Saturday and Sunday.

The Cohasset Community Center is a non-profit organization. Membership is open to all. Call 383-0088 for more information on or to reserve a place in class. All courses must be pre-registered.

Seniors to discuss Long Term Care Insurance

The subject of Long Term Care Insurance will be the topic of discussion Thursday, Feb. 25 at 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Senior Center as the Council on Aging welcomes Ms. Kathy Glenzel, Health Policy Analysts from the Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

Glenzel's presentation will focus on what exactly Long Term Care Insurance is and is not, what the state is doing to insure it's availability for people, what policies are currently available, and what can we expect in the future with regard to protections for long term care needs. She will briefly review nursing home levels of care, and how long term care insurance is covered

The speakers come to us from EOEA, the state office responsible for services to elders in Massachusetts. They will bring with them information comparing long term care policies that are currently available and a checklist for people to use when considering the purchase of long term care insurance.

The lecture and discussion will be held at 1 p.m. sharp at the Cohasset Senior Center, 3 North Main Street, and everyone is welcome. Call the Council on Aging at 383-9112 for more information.

New Service: You can have it fixed!!!!

Selectmen interview firefighter applicants

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

Selectmen held interviews to fill two full-time positions on the Cohasset Fire Department at their Feb. 1 meeting.

Among the the five hopeful firefighters were:

Paul Mogan, 22, who said he took the firefighter's exam two years ago and Cohasset was his first choice.

"I would be a good firefighter and helpful to this community," he said.

Mogan has taken two CPR courses and attended Massasoit College where he studied law enforcement.

William Sestito, 21, has been with the department for the past nine months as a temporary firemen and said he enjoys the work.

"Since I've been with the department, I've joined the dive rescue team and taken several courses at Massasoit in firefighting technology including Introduction to Fire Science," he said.

Sestito has also attended seminars in Hull on how to fight fires in townhouses and garden apartments.

Philip Trask, 24, hails from a family of firefighters with two brothers, Mark and Peter, presently on the department.

Trask, who has a liberal arts degree from UMass, said he "understands pyrotechnics quite well," and if he were selected "would consider the fire department to be my full-time job."

"I see the fire department as a long-term career," he said.

Francis Mahoney, 25, is a certified EMT and has been employed by Bay State Ambulance since 1985.

Mahoney is also knowledgeable in the use of anti-shock pants. The pants are used to stablilize trauma patients who might otherwise expire from shock on the way to the hospital. He said the pants are inflated and causes the patient's blood to circulate properly and elevates the blood pressure to a norm.

"It keeps the patient alive a little longer," he said.

James Curley, 28, has been a call fireman for 11 years and is certified CPR. Curley said he took the EMT course but missed taking the exam.

The fact that Curley wishes to become a full-time firefighter is evidenced by his many courses on firefighting at the Mass. Firefighting Academy. He has studied the nature of fire, forceable entry and ventilation, vehicle extracation including using the Jaws of Life, propane firefighting and basic life support rescue.

Curley has been CPR certified since 1980 and has taken a breathing apparatus seminar. He has also taken a weapons' and markmanship course with the Boston Police Department.

Curley feels he would be an asset to the department because, "I have lived here for 28 years and know all the streets and the surrounding areas," he said.

The board is expected to announce its decision at its Feb. 10 meeting.

Former firefighters file lawsuit . . .

Dooley and Executive Secretary Donald Andrew.

In the lawsuit that was filed Jan. 28 in Norfolk County Superior Court, Conley alleges that selectmen, former Fire Chief Martin Dooley and Executive Secretary Donald Andrew "negligently and carelessly permitted the floor in the watch office of the Central Fire Station to become and remain in an unsafe and dangerous condition . . . Richard M. Conley was caused to fall from a chair to the floor of the watch office due to the unsafe and dangerous condition of the floor."

The lawsuit also claims Conley "suffered several injuries with resulting permanent diability, pain and suffering, and incurred medical, hospital, surgical and pharmaceutical expenses and lost earning capacity."

In a second count of negligence, Conley alleges the town ordered him back to work June 7, 1985 "when it knew or should have known that Conley was physically unable to perform the duties of a firefighter.

"As a direct result of the aforesaid negligence and carelessness, on June 8, 1985 . . . Conley was caused to fall from a chair to the floor of the watch office of the Central Fire Station, suffering severe injuries with resulting permanent disability, pain and suffering."

A third count charges selectmen with reckless or intentional conduct and alleges that as a direct result of the conduct of Martin Dooley (and selectmen) on June 8, Conley fell from the watch office chair, and now requests judgment "for all damages incurred by them as a result of their willful, wanton and reckless conduct, plus punitive damages as the Court deems just and proper with interest and costs."

The former firefighter has also charged selectmen with a violation of the open meeting law, noting that May 13, 1985 the board discussed the physical condition of Conley without notifying him or affording him the right to be present.

As a result of that executive session, selectmen required Conley to return to duty as a firefighter. And in a fifth charge against the board, Conley alleges selectmen ordered him back to duty "with the intent to cause (Conley) to suffer severe emotional distress, and as a direct result of said acts, (Conley) suffered severe emotional distress."

The complaint continues, "all of the said defendants have done various other extreme and outrageous acts with regard to the handling of the plaintiff's disability claims field in connection with his fall at the fire station on June 8, 1985, with the intent to cause him to suffer severe emotional distress."

A sixth complaint alleges that Executive Secretary Andrew provided confidential medical information regarding Conley to the Cohasset Mariner "causing the plaintiff to endure considerable emabarrassment and severe emotional distress and damaging the plaintiff's reputation in the community."

A seventh charge was filed by Conley's wife, Martha, who stated "as a direct and proximate result of the negligent acts or omissions of the town of Cohasset, (Martha) Conley was caused to suffer the loss of society, companionship, services, love, affection, and consortium of her husband, Richard M. Conley."

And in a final charge filed by Mrs. Conley, she states selectmen ordered her husband back to work June 7, 1985, "with the intent to cause (Martha Conley) to suffer severe emotional distress."

The charge continued, "All of the said defendants have done various other extreme and outrageous acts with regard to the handling of the plaintiff's, Richard M. Conley, disability claims filed in connection with his fall at the fire station on June 8, 1985 . . . wherefore (Martha Conley) demands judgment for all damages he has suffered as a result of their intentional conduct, plus such punitive damages as the Court deems just and proper, with interest and costs."

Algae problem in Little Harbor . . .

"The problem is a type of algae called filamentous green algae and, in the spring when it's in bloom, it doesn't create an odor," he said, "but during the summer months when the flowers die and it rots, the stench is overwhelming."

He said although each month for three days at high tide the flood gates are opened and the Inner Little Harbor is flushed out, this doesn't get rid of all the algae.

"Many of the algae mats stay inside and regenerate new growth," said Worden.

He said the probable cause of the rapid and healthy growth of the algae was from nutrients, either from nature or man-made. Worden would not be more specific as to the cause except to say he would be giving his report to the town and the committee at a meeting Feb. 17 at Cohasset Town Hall.

He did explain, however, that phase two, the study to find an appropriate and cost-effective solution, would begin immediately and end in August of this year.

around town

☐ Had a nice chat with our town moderator, Bill Weeks, last week. One of his functions as town moderator is being a member of the appointing committee, and he was extremely pleased with two recent appointments that the committee made. Phil Smith (who has done wonders for our downtown shopping areas) is now a member of the advisory board, and G. Robert Jackson is a member of the capital budget committee. Good luck to you, gentlemen, and congratulations on agreeing to be a working part of making our town run!

☐ Happy belated birthday to Letitia Jordan. Letitia had a special birthday on Feb. 5, and we hope her trip downhill is as good as it was up!!

☐ If you want to find someone you haven't seen for a while, or want a new experience, be sure to head up to the new Super Stop and Shop! Everyone is making several trips up there, in fact some go twice a day. It's a grand addition to our town, and seems to have all that one would need under the same roof!

☐ Can you believe that next week is vacation time for our students? If your plans are "up in the air" be sure to include the South Shore Art Center in them. . . they are again planning the daily "drop-in program" for children aged 6-12. The kiddos will be under the guidance of an artist staff, and can experiment with different mediums to show how creative they can be. We even know of one woman who framed her child's picture and then worked around it to create a whole room. Nice way to spend a dull winter. Call the Art Center at 383-9548 for more information.

☐ Coach Dan Magner received his award from the Boston Globe recently. As you may remember he was named coach of the year for Division 3 in soccer. Dan has been the head coach for the past two years and holds a career record of 34-6-6. The Boston Globe began this award program in 1906, so Coach Magner has certainly joined the ranks of many exceptional people.

☐ It doesn't seem possible that after the up-comming elections, Joe Nedrow won't be serving on the school committee. After nine years on the board, it seems as though he should be a permanent fixture! Mr. Nedrow has more than done his share for our students and his reputation for being fair and honest was shown over and over again. Here's hoping that his replacement will be thinking of the students at all times like he did, and that he or she follows in Mr. Nedrow's footsteps. As they say, "He's a hard act to follow." We thank you for all of your time and efforts, Joe!

☐ What a wonderful way to treasure Jack Langmaid's memory! In case any of you missed it, a Steinway piano was donated to CHS in his memory recently, and it was a much-needed treasure! Be sure you take a look at it the next time you are at the high school, and think of what a fine man he was.

☐ Carolyn Contis and Pat Wunschel are surely doing their part for the Heart Fund and are hoping that the students will do theirs. On this Friday there will be a Rockathon to be held in memory of two wonderful CHS teachers, Charlie Davis and Ed Sheehan. Both of these gentlemen had heart problems, and what finer way to pay them tribute! See one of the ladies above for details and "get rocking." If you are unable to rock, then lend them your rocker for a fun-filled afternoon with a definite goal to be obtained.

☐ We understand that Helen Livingstone had a heart attack while wintering in Florida, and we certainly are hoping that she is on the mend as this goes to press.

☐ Cohasset's own Molly Hochkeppel is destined to be a star shortly. . .she will be starring in "Not Now Darling," to be played at the new Quincy Center Dinner Theatre. The dates are the last two weekends in February, and the night sure should be a fun time. You can start with a social hour at 6:30 p.m., dinner at 7:30 p.m. and show time is at 8:45 p.m. Reservations may be made by calling 843-5862.

☐ One man that does a lot for our town without getting much publicity is Glenn Pratt. He sure has had a large role in our Community Center and what it is today, and for that alone the whole town says a big thank you!

☐ Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray distributed to the town libraries in her district the new Plymouth and Brockton bus schedule. Stop by your library and pick one up. As the bus schedule states on its front learn how to relax and beat the traffic. When the southern artery and third tunnel start construction you will be glad you did.

☐ Brenda and Jim Litchfield are sure busting their buttons over the efforts of their granddaughter, Kimberly! Kimberly is a freshman at Aquinas Jr. College and, through all of her efforts, finished seventh in her class. . .that's out of 165 students, folks! Good work, Kimberly, keep it up!!

☐ That's the news from here, let us know what newsworthy event took place in your house this week.

Republican candidate for re-election

Tom Barry of Duxbury has announced his candidacy for reelection to the Republican State Committe from the Norfolk and Plymouth district, to be elected at the Republican Presidential Primary Tuesday, March 8. The district includes Cohasset and Hingham.

Barry is currently a member of the Plymouth County Charter Commission, elected in 1986 to represent Duxbury and part of Marshfield. He is a former Duxbury selectman and was a member of the 1979-1980 Duxbury Charter Commission.

Barry was first elected to the State Committee in 1976. He has served as Treasurer and Assistant Treasurer of that body. He has served as President and Vice President of the Plymouth County Republican Club. In 1980 he was a delegate to the Republican National Convention, pledged to Ronald Reagan.

He has also served as Chairman of the Duxbury Republican Town Committee. Before moving to Duxbury in 1972, he was Treasurer of the Boston Republican City Committee and Chairman of the Ward 22 Boston Republican Committee. In 1968 he was appointed by President Johnson to serve as a non-paid member of local Selective Service Board #31 in Suffolk County.

He is a graduate of Saint Columbkille High School. He holds a B.S.B.A. degree from Boston University, where he was a finance major. he has a Masters degree in Business Administration from Babson College. In addition, he holds a certificate in banking from the American Institute of Banking. Barry has been a data processing professional for many years.

Editorial

Do you have the guts?

What have you done for your community lately?

What have you done for the town that educates your children, protects your homes, plows your streets, picks up your rubbish, tends your parks, monitors your elections, feeds your faucets, watchdogs your health, prunes your treees, stocks your library and finds housing for our elderly and underprivileged?

Is it time for you to give back to the town?

Then why don't you run for office this year.

Cohasset desperately needs more leaders with intelligence, strength, forsight, leadership and compassion.

There are only two more weeks to take our nomination papers for the April 9 election.

Papers must be submitted to the board of registrars by Feb. 29.

There are several important offices up for grabs and only a handful of candidates have taken out nomination papers. Some offices will go uncontested.

Among the offices open in town government are: a selectmen's seat, a five-year planning board vacancy; a water commission seat; two school committee vacancies; a sewer commission seat; two library trustee positions, and a recreation commission vacancy.

Are we all really that satified with the running of the town?

Running for office is not easy/ It takes guts.

You might think it takes the golden mouth of Demosthenes, the intelligence of Einstein and the bankroll of John D. Rockefeller.

This is not so.

Town government needs grassroots intelligence, time and commitment.

You can finance your campaign on a shoestring if you like.

You can make homemade signs and walk door to door to tell your story.

The Mariner will help candidates as much as possible to tell their story to the community.

We will publish formal announcements, accompanied by a photograph from the candidate.

In addition, we also will have the candidates' corner for individuals to express ideas and issues which are discussed at coffees or other gatherings.

The more citizens who participate in the running of a town, the healthier it becomes.

You might not even win the first time out, but most candidates — winners and those who do not win (there are no losers) — find campaigning a growing experience.

Besides meeting very caring people who live in this community of nearly 22,000 year-round residents, candidates learn first-hand about town government.

This is your town. And it needs good leaders.

We take off our hats to the candidates who have already thrown theirs into the ring.

But we need more candidates — many more.

Is 1988 the year that you have the guts to put your ideas, your time, your commitment, your personality on the line and run for office?

Keep up with Cohasset –

Goals of Curtis Action group

Letters

To the Editor:

The Curtis Estate Action Committee was established Jan. 26, 1988 at a meeting in Bates Hall of the 2nd Congregational Church of Cohasset. Its broad objective is to ensure that the proceeds of the Curtis bequest are used for charitable purposes locally, as was intended by Mr. Curtis in his 1931 bequest but never carried out. The immediate objective is to prevent execution of a proposal, by the current trustees of the Curtis estate, to sell that part of the bequest which is real estate (55 acres in Cohasset, between Windy Hill and Forest Avenue). A purchase and sale agreement with a Plymouth developer, Frank Westgate, who proposes to build a 30-40 unit cluster condominium project, apparently has expired.

The will of George E. Curtis, a Brockton manufacturer who died in 1931, left securities and a 55 acre estate with a large house and two smaller houses, in trust, to be used to provide shelter for "feeble, deformed and invalid women without means", to be known as "The Curtis Home".

In addition to the Cohasset real estate which is believed to be worth about $1.7 million, there are securities worth about 2 million. Of this, $1.8 million currently is set aside for the charitable purposes of the will. The remaining $200,000 provides income for the small annuities of the seven remaining beneficiaries whose benefits will revert to the Home fund on their demise. The total current assets for charitable purposes is therefore about $3.5 million.

The wishes of Mr. Curtis never were carried out, perhaps because the trustees felt that the income from the estate was insufficient for the operating expenses of a shelter. This may have been true in the 1930's when returns were low relative to the sum of the annuities to the numerous beneficiaries then living. The large house was rented for many years, but is now vacant and deteriorating.

The Trustees have submitted a "Cy Pres" dated December 9, 1987 to the Probate Court to permit the real estate to be sold and to permit proceeds of the sale plus other funds in trust to be used "for charitable purposes — to relieve distress and want among the needy, the elderly and the infirm in Plymouth county and contiguous towns with particular emphasis on home, health and housing needs". It is expected that the Court soon will hold hearings on the matter. The State Attorney General is a defendant to this proceeding, pursuant to Massachusetts General Laws, and has indicated an intent not to oppose the Trustee's proposal, but this was before concerned citizens began to question the matter. The Cy Pres petition claims that wetlands restrictions etc make the real estate unsuitable for operation of a Home! It is not explained why it would be suitable for use by a developer.

It is imperative, therefore, that strong and concerted action be taken to put an indefinite hold on these proceedings, before approval is granted to depart from the intent of the will and before the land is irrevocably sold and no longer available for the purpose intended by Mr. Curtis. Large numbers of signatures on the Committee's petition, from Massachusetts voters (not just Cohasset) are essential.

That having been achieved, then we can proceed —hopefully with the cooperation of the Trustees — to evaluate how best to accommodate the several potential beneficiary organizations, such as the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, elderly housing, affordable housing, etc., and how to achieve equitable compromise between the competing interests for the not — unlimited resources. It seems probable that the income from the securities portion of the estate can be supplemented by other funding. As impetus, it should be noted that the state can withold significant discretionary funds because of the town's failure to provide affordable housing.

The will requires that there always be at least two trustees and that they be selected and appointed by the Probate court. More trustees could be added by the court.

The intent of the Trustees to sell the land was noted by nearby residents of Windy Hill Road, whose initial concerns were environmental (loss of watershed and flooding from Rattlesnake Run into Straits Pond). However, the concerns were broadened by the revelation that the charitable intent of Mr. Curtis had not been honored, and became a determination to correct the situation. The pastors of the Cohasset churches are concerned also.

The ad hoc committee established January 26 consists of: Cochairmen, Joseph McElroy, Stephen Bobo, Maria Plante; Counsel, Noel Collins; Treasurer, Nancy Snowdale; Administrative Secretary, Mabel Smith; Recording Secretary, Christine Parker; Petitions, R. Murray Campbell; Public Relations, James Reilly.

Attorney Noel Collins, a resident of Scituate who practices in Cohasset, is donating his services to this effort, but additional legal assistance may have to be engaged at some cost. There will also be incidental expenses for postage, printing, telephone, etc. and a tentative budget of $2,000 is suggested. Donations and pledges to the Curtis Estate Action Committee should be directed to the Treasurer or to any member of the Committee. Checks should be made out to the Curtis Estate Action Committee. (Until and unless we incorporate as a tax exempt organization, donations are not deductible for income tax purposes.)

Some disposition of the land is going to occur soon. That is obvious. Neither the Trustees nor ourselves would be fulfilling our responsibilities if we did not seek to use that asset (either the structures and land, or the proceeds of its sale) for the benefit of the needy and disadvantaged in this area. The majority of homeowners truly want to use the Estate for charitable purposes while protecting the value of their property, the local area aesthetics and quality of life. These goals are not incompatible. Now, what we critically need is consensus among the homeowners and potential beneficiaries as to how the property will be put to use. Otherwise, the Trustees, probate Court, and the State AG could use our disarray as an excuse to approve the sale of the land to a private developer as the only way to use the total assets of the Estate for charitable purposes. It is very clear to those of us who have read the Will that George E. Curtis wanted his estate in Cohasset, supplemented by the securities, to be used to help the needy. We must now avoid an adversarial relationship between homeowners, disadvantaged and potential beneficiaries because that will assure failure on "our day in court".

We must set aside preconceived notions, stereotypes, and yes, perhaps even prejudices and selfish motivations to understand that potential users of the "Curtis Home" are not a threat but another component of our total community.

Let's have charity and understanding and proceed together or most certainly we will fail.

The proposal put forward by the Trustees in their Cy Pres petition may serve charity better than the inaction of the past 57 years, but it is not the best that can be done for the needy and disadvantaged.

Please sign the petition, and obtain other signatures if possible. We need signatures, not only of Cohasset voters, but of other Massachusetts communities, in order to obtain the support of legislators and to influence the A.G.

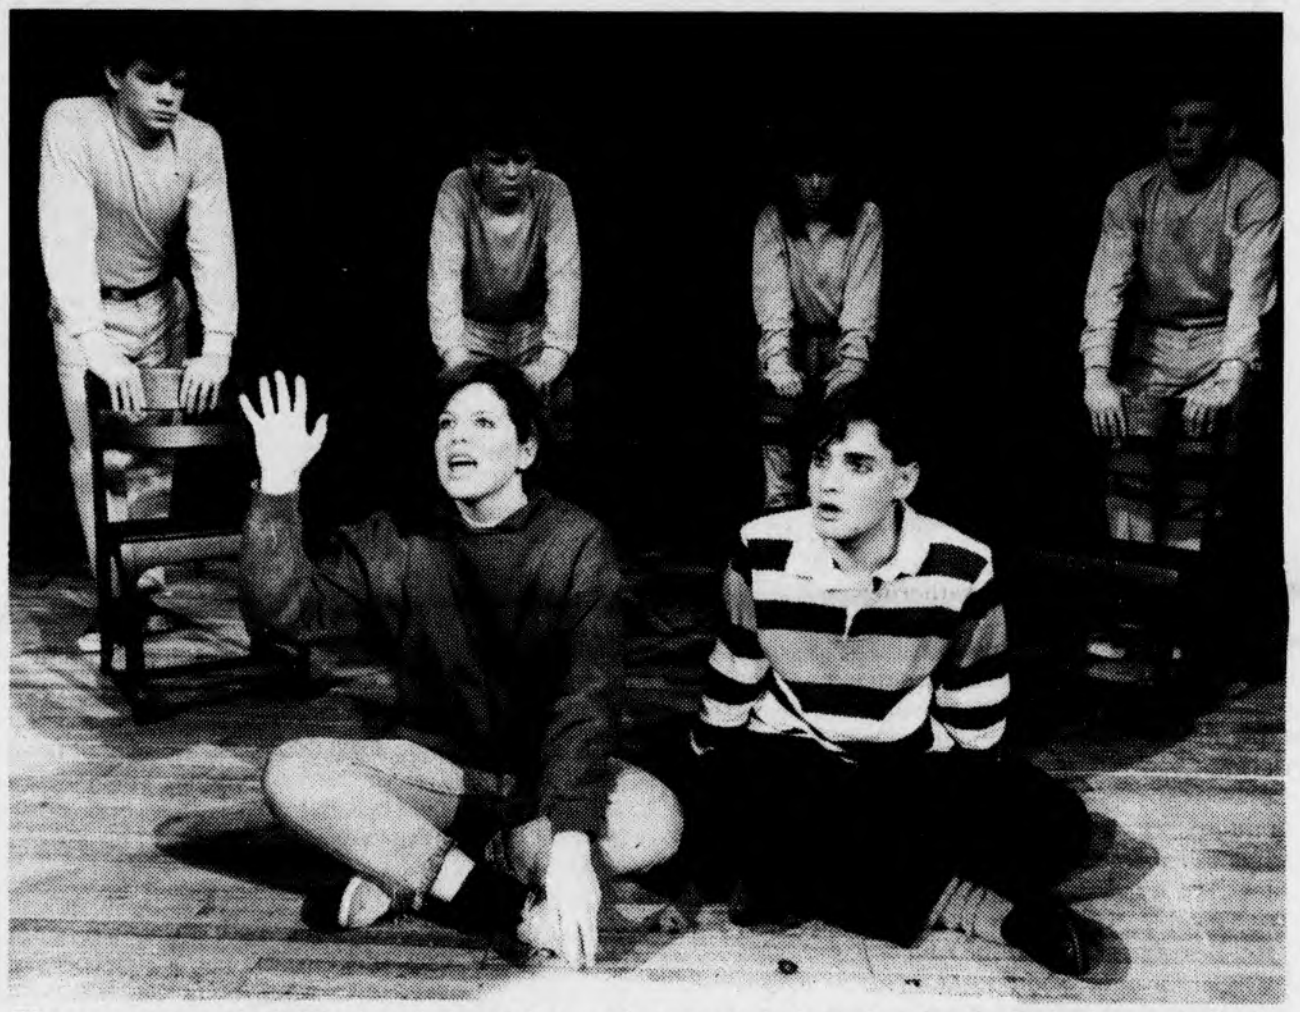
Janet Ditmar applies stage makeup to Joe Mazza prior to his performance last weekend at CHS.

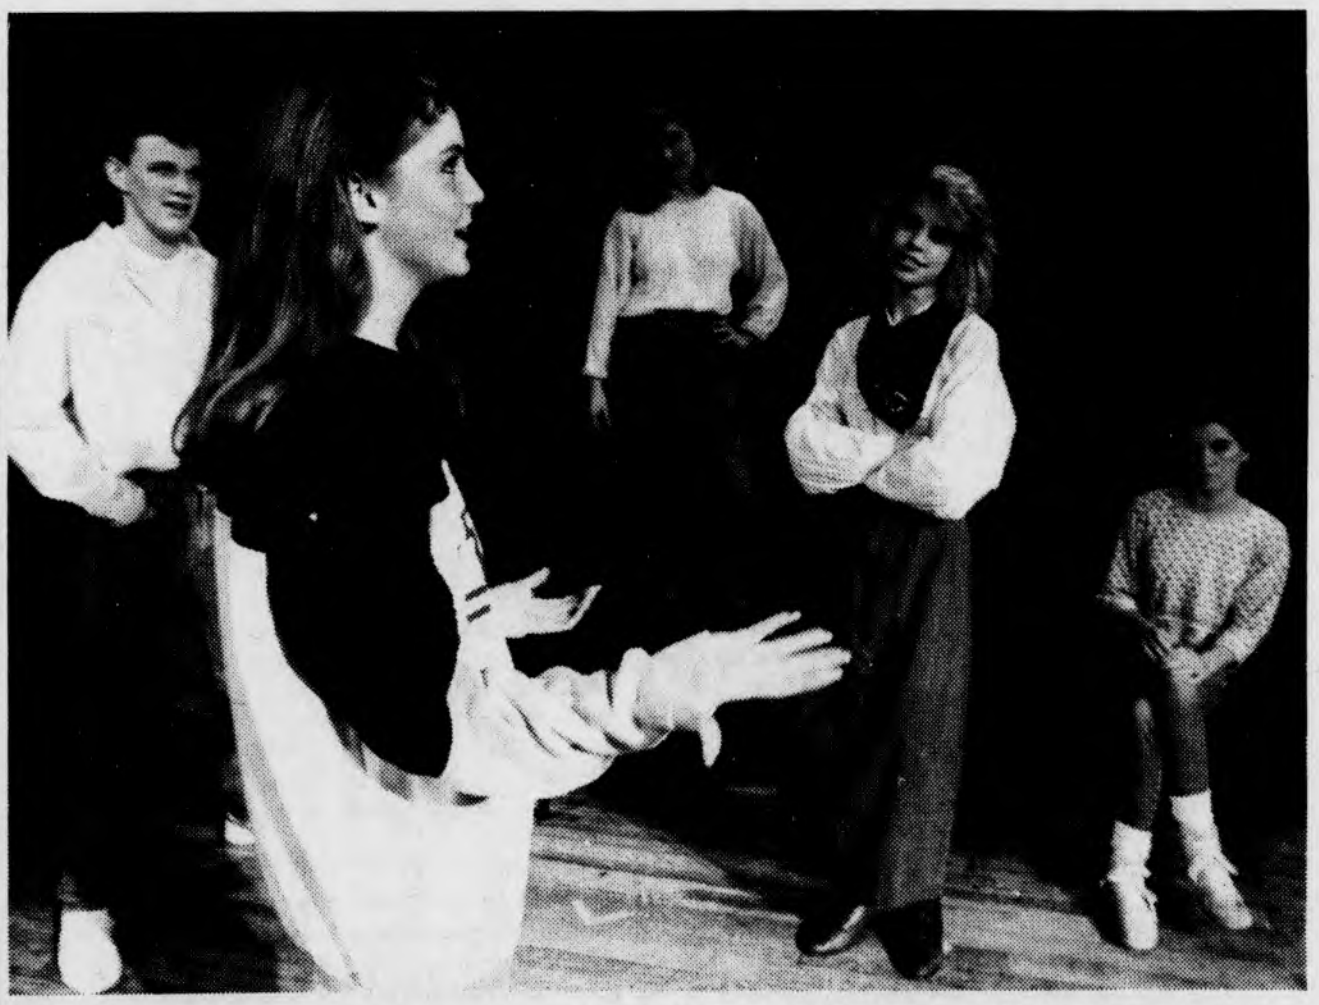
CHS prepares for drama festival

There is no lack of talent in the Cohasset High School Drama Club. Those who attended last week's performances were treated to an evening of entertaining theatre. Ron Emmons, Cohasset's Director of Dramatic Arts, directed both plays with his usual talent for eliciting the best performances possible from his young actors. The results were very exciting.

The first production, "Act Three, Scene Five," was written by Terry Ortwein, the Director of the Paul Mellon Art Center at Choate Rosemary Hall in Wallingford, Connecticut. The cast included Jason Marsac and Michelle Meagher with Melissa Greiner, Erin Monaghan and Jen Coley. There performances were witty and sensitive,and thoroughly enjoyable. A delightful forty minutes.



The ensemble cast of "Fortress" staged two performances last week prior to their drama festival competition. The actors include: (front) Michelle Casolara and Joe Mazza; (background) Jack Deddows, Adam Durant, Alison Reilly and Zack Hochkeppel.



The CHS drama workshop will also perform "Act Three, Scene Five" in the Boston Globe Drama Festival. The cast includes: (l to r) Jason Marsac, (front) Lisa Coley, Melissa Greiner, Michelle Meagher and Erin Monaghan.

"Fortress," the second production, was written by Micheal Scanlan. Excellent performances were given by Michele Casolaro and Joe Mazza as principal characters. The supporting cast included Erin Powell, Scott Caristo, Katie Tolini, Rebecca McCarthy, Heather St. Onge, Pam Haase, Erin Monaghan, Michelle Meagher, Allison Reilly, Jack Beddows, Adam Durant, Zach Hochkeppel, Jen Coley, Neely Hemassi, Doug Moe, J. Gaston, Lauren Kalita, Jen Plante and Jay Staunton.

They comprised the ensemble which was required to perform some very precise acting, exhibiting their hard work and Mr.Emmons talent as a director."Fortress"is Cohasset's entry in the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. The preliminary competition will be at Hingham High School. Cohasset has placed in the finals for the past four years.

Thanks to all who helped make the Drama Club production such a success, those behind the scenes and all the talent on stage. And again, a special thanks to Ron Emmons for bringing it all about. Good luck to everyone!

First prize winner in the South Shore Art Center's photography exhibit and contest was Fran Nichols for her color photography.

J. Paul MacDonald of Plymouth placed third in the black and white photography competition.

First prizes were awarded in color, to Fran Nichols of Duxbury for her piece "Nautilus;" in black and white, to Steven Nelson of Milton, for his piece, "Door with Ivy, Camden;" and in special effects, to Susan Haas of Hull, for her piece "Primitive Lefts."

Kris Carnovale of Worcester received a second prize for an untitled color work, John Droege of Plymouth received a second in black and white for a piece, "Mosquito Cove," and Nichols also received a second in special effects for her work, "Two Shells."

Third place awards went to Ronald Wilson for his color work, "East Blue Hill, Maine" and to J. Paul MacDonald for his black and white, "Abuelo." Wilson is from East Bridgewater and MacDonald is from Plymouth.

Honorable mentions were given in color photography to to Lynne Layman of North Scituate for a piece, "Palace Woman, India" and to Jeffery Raymond of Belmont for his black and white photograph, "Vermont."

These All New England Juried Photography Show awards were funded by the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council as administrated by the Arts Councils of Abington, Canton, Cohasset, Holbrook, Pembroke, Plymouth, Rockland, Stoughton and Weymouth.

Juring the exhibit were Bonnell Robinson, associate profesor of photography and art history at the Art Institute of Boston; Betsey Fuchs, whose works are included in the collections of Boston Public Library, the MIT Rotch Visual Collections Library and the Waltham Historical Commission; and Ron Polito, associate professor of art at the University of Massachusetts, Boston where he is the director of the communications department.

The juried photography exhibit is in the Bancroft Invitational Gallery and an exhibit of works by members of the Marblehead Art Association is hanging in the Dillon Members' Gallery.

Both exhibits are open to the public Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For further information, please call the Center, 383-9548. South Shore Art Center programs are funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Artist of the Month

The parent volunteers in the Artist of the Month program did a project dealing with Chinese symbols in order to coordinate with the excitement of learning about China that is occurring throughout Osgood.

Children made Chinese banners by drawing symbols on special "rice" paper and then decorating with long bright strips of tissue. While the program was taking place, children took turns drawing their symbols on a piece of fabric designated for their class which will be used to decorate the body of a huge dragon that has been made by DeeDee Nicynski, Janet Amiri and Alix White Bigley for the Dragon Parade on Friday, February 5.

We would like to thank the following volunteers for their help this month: Connie Afshar, Cheryl Bugley, Sue Cameron, Betsy Connolly, Karen Devine, Retta Dwyer, Martha Equi, Kathy Gray, Debbie Hanian, Lee Jenkins, Linda Keller, Janet Lamp, Patty McCarthy, Marianne McLaughlin, DeeDee Nicynski, Olga Nohe, Donna O'Donnell, Betty O'Sullivan, Susan Pile, Moira Stansell, Priscilla Sullivan, Kathy Walsh, Ronnie Wach and Gail Whitehouse.

Eastern Edison visits

Dan Johnson and Dick Desmarais from the Eastern Edison Company visited the Deer Hill School on Jan. 28, 1988 to teach the students about electricity.

They demonstrated equipment worn by Edison workers to protect them while working with wires. They also showed us a film that explained the dangers of electricity and how to use electricity safely. It was an informative presentation.

Winter landscapes exhibits

Osgood students created the winter landscapes now being exhibited at the Paul Pratt Library and the Osgood School. First grade art work is the result of a unit on trees. Students observed the shapes, colors and textures of different trees, drew them with craypas and crayons and finally painted snow. Third grade student work is a personal interpretation of a winter landscape with the learning focused on spatial concepts.

Career program Grades 9-10

From Feb. 1-12, the guidance Office and P.S.O. are sponsoring the second in a series of career speakers as part of a yearly Career Education Program. Mrs. Carol Anglin and Mrs. Joanne Chittick from the P.S.O have coordinated efforts to bring in a wide variety of speakers on math-related careers. Local speakers, many of whom have students attending Cohasset schools, have been enthusiastically received by the students who especially enjoy hearing from adults who are apt to be friends of their parents or neighbors as well.

This week, Ray Kasperowicz met with approximately 50 students and shared his experiences in his career in accounting. (After the program ended, his son Peter stopped by to give his father words of support along with a few barbs!) Another local resident, Jill O'Donnell presented her description on how she reached her position in the field of computers. She highlighted the opportunities for those who have not as yet worked with computers and overcome the many fears shared by beginning programmers. Friday, John Gaston will be speaking to a group of students on his field of Project Management Development. Overall, the program, now in its fourth year, has been a great success exposing students to a wide variety of job/career possibilities available to them.

Bring in UPC codes

Bring your Prince UPC codes to school by Feb. 26 and the homeroom that collects the most will be rewarded with an ice cream party. This is the final deadline for the Prince Birthday Contest, so do your best!

There will be an ice cream party for the homeroom that brings in the most UPC codes.

Granpa

My granpa's a sailor. Whenever I think of him, he reminds me of the sea.

His hair is wavy with specks of grey in it. Ever since I can remember, he has had a long brown pipe with an aroma that doesn't bother me at all.

I sit down with him in his favorite chair and he says, "Have I ever told you that I love you?" Yes, Pop, and I love you even more!" There's something about my pop that is so wonderful that I can't even explain it. It's like he would do anything for me, and it's the same with me.

When I am with my pop and we're holding hands, the only sounds we hear are the ticking of the clocks and the beating of our hearts. While we are sitting there, the wonderful waves crashing up against the rocks echo beautiful songs into our ears.

Pop's been married to Kiki for many years. He knows about girls, as he had four daughters to teach him. I always know what mood he's in — just by looking in his eyes. They are different shades of blue. His eyes and moods reflect the moods of the sea.

Short stories from the sixth grade

The following stories were written by the sixth grade students at Deer Hill School.

Fun Things That Start With "B"

Some of my favorite things start with B.
Basketball, beaches, and fun things like these.
Baby brothers can be fun too,
Except when they tell you what to do.
Baseball is fun if you hit a homerun.
Boomerangs are great when they fly figure eights.
Bon Bons are yummy when they're down in your tummy.
Bikes are neat if you can ride in the street.
Bocce ball is fun for the Italians to do.
My babysitter and I like to play it too.
But the best thing of all begins with a C
And that's candy for you and candy for me.

Andy Kamataris

One Mean Lady

(Read to the tune of In the Very Merry Month of May)

I was sitting on the subway one day
Next to a very, very fat lady
And what to my surprise
She poked me in the eyes
And I have feared her from that day!
I was walking in town the next week
And then I saw the same lady, OH, EEK!
She said that I reek,
And slapped me on my cheek,
And I feel meek from that day!
I was running in the park the next year
And the same big lady came near.
She growled like a bear
And gave me a stare,
And I sure got a scare that day!

Nick Terry

Wooden I

What's that?!
Where?
Behind the chair.
Where?
There!
Oh me, oh my,
It has one I.
One eye?
Yes, one I.
I can't look. I'm afraid.
What's that you say?
You're afraid of an I?
Why?
A "thing with one eye will make me cry.
But it's only a wooden I.
A wooden eye?!
And you're not scared?
It must be a monster with lots of hair.
Wooden letters don't have hair!
Wooden letters?!
Yes, the wooden I.
Oh, what the heck, I'm so confused!
I'm hungry, let's get some food.
How 'bout a sandwich? Want some too?
Wooden I! Wooden I!

Chris Stevens

We put Christmas lights around our porch.
It the night they light up like a torch.

Behind our cabin is a hill.
Sledding down it, is a thrill.
So this is my poem about my cabin in Maine.
If you do not like it, that is a shame.

Charlie Endris

I see Randy of the Redwood up in a tree
I hear the famous line, I want my MTV!
My mother and father say its driving them berserk.
I always sit and watch it while I do my homework.
Remote Control is a quite exciting show,
When they say "Off the air" well someone has to go.
Monty Python's Flying Circus is a cool show too,
They've got things like flying sheep and boxing kangaroos.
Oh well, Club MTV is another story,
I find watching people dance is extremely boring.
And watching MTV is the way to be,
I find day by day its the channel for me.

Brendan Mulligan

Hair — How Does It Go?

How do you wear your hair?
Up in a bun for a serious look
Or down in your face for reading a book.
How do you wear your hair?
How do you wear your hair?
Down past your bum for a hippie look
Or tucked in a hat to look like a crook.
How do you wear your hair?
How do you wear your hair?
With red and green stripes to look like a punk
Or pile it with barretts and combs to look like junk.
How do you wear your hair?
How do you wear your hair?
Curled to look like Shirley Temple
Or pulled off your shoulders to show off your dimple.
How do you wear your hair?
How do you wear your hair?
Cut to a crew cut to look like a man
Or teased wildly to look like a fan.
How do you wear your hair?

Maine

We have a cabin up in Maine.
I like to fly there in a plane.
There is a mountain up in Maine.
I like to ski there, but not in rain.

Near our cabin is a lake.
I like to fish there when I wake.
We have a boat out on the lake.
It's fun to drive — a piece of cake.

Close by our cabin is a road.
On the road are tiny toads.

Going Up the Chairlift

Going up the chairlift
Looking down below
Seeing the lovely blanket
Of newly fallen snow.
Going up the chairlift
Glancing at the sky
Seeing a couple of birds
As they fly on by.
Going up the chairlift
Feeling very cold
My hands are getting frostbitten
Just like I've been told.
Going up the chairlift
Taking off my glove
So I can feel the snowflakes
Falling from above.

Hope Gaston

Fire

The sparkling fire is a wonderful sight,
As I sit here gazing, filled with delight.
Colors of orange, red, yellow, and blue,
But do not forget, purple is one too.
A fire can be subtle,
A fire can be fierce.
A fire can cause trouble,
The thickest walls it can pierce.
The smoke is arising into its flight,
From the ashes below, of radiant light.
The fire is not always this mighty and bright,
For once the ashes have dimmed their color,
The ashes will turn a ghostly white!

Tim Brister

The Kitten

The sweet little kitten
Got stuck in my mitten,
On a cold, wintery day.
"Oh, please little kitten,
Get out of my mitten,
'I'd like to go out to play."
"For my friends are all waiting for me,
To go sledding down by the old oak tree."
So that sweet little kitten
Got out of my mitten,
On that cold wintery day,
And I finally go out to play!

Larissa Huskins

She grabbed the pebble with splintery hands,
The sun was that pebble in an azure land.

To see the sun as a pebble,
Hold it forever in your hand.

The wind was a hurricane moving swift and quick,
The moon was motionless
As motionless as a mountain and yet quite as big.

The wind soon just stopped and the land was still,
But the pebble went plop back to the hill.

Diane Saldi

Cherry Blossoms

They float through the air
They sail through the breeze
I don't think it's fair
When they get caught in trees.

They usua ly come in the spring
Not in the winter or fall
You don't see them while you're skiing
Sometimes they brush up against the wall.

Their color is pink
They are pretty small
You will miss one if you blink
And they won't come if you call.

They look most beautiful
When they are attached to trees
But I feel most sorrowful
When the trees begin to freeze.

So if you see one flying around
Just let it sail away
And if it happens to fall to the ground
Just turn and walk away.

Sarah Atherton

The Mole and the Goal

While dribbling down the field
The defense formed an iron shield
I smiled as though to say
Ok, I've got this under control
And then I dribbled toward the goal
Now I was as timid as a mole
The sweeper came to take the ball
But I quickly turned and made her fall
Now I was facing toward our goal
But it was too late before I saw the hole
It was the mole that made the hole
But I got up and scored a goal.

Sheryl Saef

Seasons Change

Icy Winter

As the wind blows
And the snow flows,
We sit by the fire
Since we are very tired
From skiing all day
And riding our sleigh
On mountains high
That fill up the sky.

Hello Spring

As the robin sings to the flower buds
Begging them, please, to come out and play,
I sit alone in my chair thinking to myself,
"Spring's hibernation is soon to end,
And then I may go swimming
And play with my best friends."

When tomorrow comes, sun or rain,
I shall be waiting by the window pane,
For Spring's arrival from Winter's past.

Sunny Summer

Beach-balls fly among the sky;
Children splash and build castles of sand
As the sun shines down welcoming me
To it's own little land

Magic Fall

I leap through piles of leaves,
Tossing them near and far, Maples,
Oaks, and Hickories, there are so many more.

The swaying trees
Are dancing ladies.
At Autumn's Harvest Ball.

Courtney Shultz

The Joys of Fall

A field full of huge oak trees,
With bright red, orange, and fold leaves.

The sight of the first fallen snow
Or the howling of wind catching the warm chimney smoke.

The smell of a juicy, fresh killed turkey
Roasting on an open fire.

The crackling sound of leaves
As they slowly fall off the trees.

The laughing of children as they jump and play
In the newly fallen leaves all day.

Or just the nice soft sound
Of the cool wind blowing through the trees.

Girls Basketball—Tuesday vs. Sandwich, won 52-37; Friday vs. East Bridgewater, won 44-24.

Gymnastics—Monday at Hanover, lost 103.45-89.25; Wednesday at Scituate, lost 109.4-93.2.

Hockey—Wednesday at Whitman/Hanson, won 11-4; Saturday at Hanover, lost 5-2.

Wrestling—Wednesday vs. Norwell, won 48-9; Friday vs. Weymouth South, won 51-14; vs Stoughton, won 46-15.

This Week's Action

Thursday—Wrestling at Whitman/Hanson (7 p.m.)

Friday—Boys Basketball, All-Stars at Norwell (7 p.m.); Girls Basketball, All-Stars at Norwell (6 p.m.).

Saturday—Hockey at Scituate (5 p.m.); Wrestling vs. Plymouth/Carver (10 a.m.)

Sunday—nothing.

Monday—nothing.

Tuesday—nothing.

Wednesday—Boys Basketball, Hall of Fame Classic at Massasoit (TBA); Girls Basketball, Hall of Fame Classic at Massasoit (TBA).

BASKETBALL

Both the boys' (13-1) and the girls' teams continued their tuning up for post-season play this week, as they both got in their requisite time with sparring partners, and disposed of the sacrifices, Sandwich and East Bridgewater, with relative ease, in games that held all the drama of a milk-logged bowl of breakfast cereal.

And, with Hull (boys 11-7, girls 5-9) and Abington (boys 5-14, girls 3-11) on the schedule this week, it doesn't appear as if things are going to be on the upswing as far as excitement goes.

However, Skippers' faithful, keep the spirit, the Eastern Mass. Tourney is just around the corner, and with each uninspiring, thoroughly predictable blow-out of a hapless rival their post-season date in late February grows nearer. So, don't despair.

After all, following Wednesday's games (with the Abington games), there are the annual SSL All-Star games at Norwell High on Friday night, where all can rest assured that CHS will be well represented, and next Wednesday's Hall of Fame Classic at Massasoit College in Brockton, which, if nothing else, will serve as a nice break from the recent lethargia of league play, And, anyway, look at the bright side, at least you don't have to report on it.

THE GIRLS TEAM

Tuesday, the girls all but wrapped up the SSL-small-school division crown, a formality the boys took care of weeks ago, when they hosted the same Sandwich team (12-2) that is responsible for the only blemish on their record, and who they were in dead heat with entering the grudge match. However, it was with surprising ease that the Skippers were able to dispatch their guests by the score of 52-37, as they jumped out quickly, taking control almost immediately and never relinquishing it.

As usual, it was co-captains Cindy Spooner (13 points and an incredible 18 rebounds) and Marge Murphy (11-points, 10 rebounds) who paced the Skippers to victory, but strong supporting performances from senior point-guard Liz O'Leary (8 points, 10 rebounds, and 7 steals) and Debbie Hartley (8 points) also contributed in a major way to the final outcome.

Friday, at CHS once again, the girls treated the host East Bridgewater players to a little home cooking, as they conducted a lesson on the benefits of solid defense and held the Vikings to a measly 24 points, which was more than sufficient to keep them feeling entirely unthreatened on their way to tossing in 44.

The Skippers, who opened up an 8-2 first quarter advantage and never looked back, again received an abundance of strong individual performances. This time it was O'Leary who lead the way with nine points and seven steals, while Spooner (seven points, 12 rebounds), Hartley (eight points) and Sara Bishop (eight points) filled the valuable supporting roles.

BOYS TEAM

On the other side of the ledger, the boys performed with equal success in their two game road stint this week, with impressive, though altogether predictable whallopings, as they trounced their two hapless hosts by a remarkable average, of 31 points without ever really having to extend themselves.

Tuesday night in Sandwich, Bryan Edwards and the troups, showed all interested parties the true disparity that exists in the SSL-small-school division, as they handed the league's second-place Sandwich team (10-6) their collective heads on a platter, 78-54.

Although Cohasset never really seemed in danger of losing this one, Sandwich remained pretty well within striking distance through the first three quarters. However, a fourth quarter run sparked for the Skippers by all-. . .everything Edwards, who poured in 38 points (including four three pointers) and snatched away an even dozen boards, of 10-2, which drove the stake home, allowed the Skippers the luxury of simply coasting to the final buzzer.

Friday, Ed Minelli's boys performed before a standing room only crowd at East Bridgewater High School. Very few went home disappointed, as Edwards razzled, dazzled, shaked, baked, and, for the most part just shot lights out. When it was all over the scorebook pretty much told the story. The non-Metco program players for Cohasset had 50 points, the Vikings had 63, and as for Jim O'Brien's future protege, he had a mere 51 points, including ten three-point bombs, and 13 rebounds.

WRESTLING

The Wrestling team is heading into the last week of the season with booming confidence following three victories in as many tries. This enabled them to move their season mark to 9-8 (5-1 in SSL action).

Wednesday, Coach Torin Sweeney really had his team up for a meeting with league rivals, Norwell, at home, and it payed off, as the Skippers humbled the Clippers by a lopsided score of 48-9.

Victories lead toward post-season play

And then, Friday afternoon, the boys were able to boost their overall record up and then beyond the .500 mark with an impressive showing and two wins in a non-league tri-meet, at home, against Stoughton (2-2 in the Hockomock League) and Weymouth South (0-5 in the Old Colony League).

Incidentally, with the three solo victories at the 152-lb. level, Glen Froio managed to remain the Skippers' lone unbeaten wrestler.

COHASSET GYMNASTICS

The 87-88 campaign for the gymnastics' team sputtered to its conclusion this week, as the girls dropped both of their meets by considerable margins, which capped off their first ever winless season in league competition at 0-8.

Monday in Hanover, the Skippers received solid performances from several key team members, most noticeably seventh grader Tara Gallagher, who, with a third place finish on the uneven bars and respectable marks in the other events, tallied high enough to walk away with the third best overall score in the meet, yet still proved to be no match for the Indians and the league's premier gymnast, senior Dayna Curran, who, with a total score of 32.85, lead her team to the 103.45-98.25 final.

BOX SCORE: BARS: 1) Curran (H), 8.35; Darcy MacDonald (H), 6.7; 3) Tara Gallagher (C), 5.5; BEAM: 1) Curran (H), 7.75; 2) MacDonald (H), 5.65; 3) Liz Buckley (C), 4.55; VAULT: 1) Curran (H), 8.35; 2) MacDonald (H), 7.8; Debbie Reed (H), 7.6; FLOOR EXERCISE: 1) Curran (H), 8.4; 2) MacDonald (H), 7.45; 3) Melissa Rousseau (C), 7.2; OVER-ALL: 1) Curran (H), 32.85; 2) MacDonald (H), 27.60; 3) Gallagher (C), 23.35.

Wednesday, this time at Scituate High School, the girls were again routed by their hosts, this time by a final of 109.4-93.2.

However, once again, all news was not discouraging, as Gallagher took third in the over-all honors for the second straight meet, and Liz Buckley, just as she had in the Hanover meet, notched a strong third place score on the beam.

BOX SCORE: VAULT: 1) Schaller (S), 7.75; 2) tie—Critchley (S), Nicole Molinari (S), 7.65; BARS: 1) Critchley (S), 7.65; 2) Tara Gallagher (C), 6.25; 3) Kerrin Thomas (S), 6.15; BEAM: 1) Critchley (S), 8.2; 2) Schaller (S), 6.7; 3) Liz Buckley (C), 5.45; FLOOR EXERCISE: 1) tie—Critchley (S), Debbie Lawrence (S), 7.5; 3) tie—Molinari (S), Lori Edwards (S) 6.9; ALL-AROUND: Critchley (S), 31.0; Shaller (S), 27.15; Gallagher (C), 23.9.

As I alluded, the season was not in the least a waste. The prospects for the future aren't all dank and dismal, when their best all-around gymnast is a mere seventh grader, and when most of the other top performers are still years away from cap and gown measurements, would certainly be ludicrous.

Unfortunately, though, a turn-around will not occur overnight. The Skippers, barring anything out of the ordinary happening, have at least a few more tough years ahead of them. But, with a little commitment and a lot of hard work, as well as the natural development of Gallagher and the others, there is every reason to believe head coach Ruth Ann Sargent can build a successful program here at CHS.

THE BRYAN EDWARDS WATCH

With games of 38 and 51 points this week, Cohasset High's all time leading scorer moved to within just 261 points of former Catholic Memorial great Ronnie Perry's state record of 2,481.

There remains only two games left on the regular season schedule plus some additional play at next week's Hall of Fame Classic in Brockton, at Massasoit Community College.

However, with a number-one ranking in the coaches Division Three pool, outlooks at this point appear good that the season will be prolonged significantly (in Eastern Mass. Tourney, which gets under way in the last week of February), which would give the senior a solid shot at making a run for it.

Natural Science Center winter programs

Travel to places near and far with Programs at South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

WEDNESDAY NATURE WALK

The South Shore offers a wide variety of habitats to explore. Seek out native and rare flora and fauna with a staff naturalist every Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon. On Feb. 17, discover the natural beauty of the shoreline in a walk through the Glades — one of the best spots to spot harbor seals! Call 659-2559 to preregister (members/ Free; non-members/ $4).

TURTLES, TEMPLES AND TERMITES

Excavate mammoths in South Dakota, track monkeys through the jungles of Nepal, and map lagoons in the Polynesian kingdom of Tonga. These are just a few of the adventures that Blue Magruder, public affairs director of Earthwatch (the non-profit research organization) will share on Friday, Feb. 19 from 2 p.m. to 3:30 p.m. Preview expeditions that need volunteers! Refreshments. Pre-paid registration required (members/ $3; non-members/ $4). Call 659-2559.

NATURE NURSERY

Nature Nursery for three years olds is now offered on Tuesdays! Teacher Emily Powers introduces young children to the wonders of nature through walks, stories, songs and other nature-related activities. The program builds self confidence while developing sensory skills and the fun of learning. Register for the six class session: Tuesdays, Feb. 9, 23, March 1, 8, 15, 22 from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Children must be 3 years by August 31, 1987. Pre-paid registration required (member/ $55; non-members/ $70). For additional information call 659-7715 or 659-2559.

BIRD SEED SALE

Remember to place your order for bird seed by Friday, Feb. 19. A wide selection of seeds at low prices are offered. Also available in the museum store are guide books, bird feeders, suet balls and binoculars. Call 659-2559 for more information.

South Shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover/ Route 3 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. In the event of weather cancellation of Norwell Public Schools, the Center's programs will be postponed, but the Center will remain open. Trails, exhibits, store, library. Free Admission.

Cohasset Savings report

Cohasset Savings Bank (NASDAQ:CHTE) reported net income of $583,000 for the year which ended Dec. 31, 1987. The bank coverted from mutual to stock form of ownership in May, 1987.

The 1987 net income of $583,000 compares to $785,000 for 1986, a year that included a dividend of $198,000 from the Mutual Savings Central Fund, Inc. and gains of $294,000 on the sales of securities. In 1987, the bank did not receive a dividend from the Central Fund and securities gains amounted to $64,000. For the fourth quarter ending Dec. 31, 1987, net income was $161,000, compared with $235,000 in the fourth quarter of 1986 when the Central Fund dividend was received.

"Despite extra expenses associated with the heavily oversubscribed stock offering and a major change in data processing services, net income for 1987 was the second highest in the banks's history. Operating results of the bank were most encouraging, with an increase of $518,000, or 35 percent in net interest income, a key indicator of a bank's performance," Donald E. Bates, president and CEO, stated.

"With certain non-recurring expenses behind us and conversion funds effectively invested, we are confident that our improved performance will continue."

Cohasset Savings Bank is a 142-year-old community thrift institution with offices in Cohasset and Scituate. Assests at Dec. 31, 1987 were $59,225,000, and stockholders' equity at that date was $11,982,000.

Special Olympic medal winners

The following are the results of the Cohasset Winter Special Olympics held on January 24 at the Hanover Bowladrome: Jon Mello — Gold medal; Jay Northnagle — Bronze; Peter Plante — Fourth place.

The following are the results of the Cohasset Winter Special Olympics at the Plymouth County Area Games. The events were held at the Pilgrim Arena in Hingham Monday, Jan. 18. The Cohasset Athletes competed in the speed skating and downhill skiing events.

10 m — assisted — David Legere — Gold; Joe Hegner — Silver; Peter Plante — Bronze.
10 m — unassisted — Ryan Wiggs — Bronze
100 m — Jay Northnagle — Gold; John Mello — Silver; Michael Goodhue — Bronze.
300 m — Jay Northnagle — Gold.
Downhill skiing — John Mello — Gold.

Congratulations to all participants and Good Luck in the state finals competition in Lennox, MA Feb. 24, 25, 26.

Amateur gardeners meeting

The next meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be the Recipe Exchange Luncheon at the home of Mrs. Aylsa Goodrich Tuesday, Feb. 16, at 1 p.m. Co-hostess will be Mrs. Sil Trott.

Historical Society to meet

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold its annual spring dinner meeting with special guest speaker Wednesday, March 23, at the Unitarian Parish House Hall.

Caterer for the dinner will be Jessica. The evening's special program will feature guest speaker Kenneth Gloss, proprietor of the renowned Brattle Book Shop, Boston. His fascinating topic will be "Treasures in Your Attic, Old and Rare Books."

Gloss, son of the late bookmaster George Gloss, is an authority in the field of old and rare documents and books. As part of the evening's special program he will appraise old books brought in by persons attending the meeting.

The Society's spring dinner meeting promises to be a unique and informative event for members and friends. Be sure to reserve the date March 23 on your calendar. Additional details relating to the forthcoming meeting will be available soon.

ANNOUNCING OUR 7th EDITION

Where local residents look first ...

Book more local business!

Did you know that 90% of all consumer needs are met within a 3 to 5 mile radius of home? And that 85% of all telephone shopping is done within the local exchange? It's true! Local business can be big business! If you know how to attract it.

How do you do it? By making sure that local consumers find you when they're looking for the type of products or services you sell. And you do that by advertising those products and services where local consumers look first. Manning's Little Phone Book.

Advertising in Manning's Little Phone Book is targeted advertising. Targeted advertising is cost-effective advertising. Advertising that works! Advertising you should know about.

To find out what advertising in The Little Phone Book can mean to your business, call your Manning representative today. Remember, to book more local business, make sure you're in the local book. Manning's Little Phone Book.

Why local consumers look in the Little Phone Book first.

- ☐ IT'S ALWAYS HANDY. It usually sits on top of the big directories, or right next to the phone.
- ☐ IT SAVES TIME. Tells buyers where to find what they're looking for — quickly, conveniently, close to home.
- ☐ IT'S EASY TO USE. Compact and lightweight. Fewer pages to search through. Easy to hold in one hand while dialing the phone with the other.
- ☐ IT'S COMPLETE. Every local business and residence is listed.
- ☐ IT'S HELPFUL. Pack with thoughtful extras like money-saving coupons, restaurant guides, listing of professional services, and a handy fold-out street map.

From the garden . . .

By Joan Pinkham
Mariner staff

February is a capricious month, a time of change, teasing us now and then with a whiff of spring in the air.

It was named for Februarius, a Roman god, and this being Leap Year, we have an extra day to endure before welcoming March. The days are getting longer though, as lengthy as those of October.

Bundle up against the cold, venture down to the coast and check the coves and creeks for waterfowl. The beaches we share with so many in the summer find us alone with snowy owls in Duxbury and ducks along the North River, feeding on mussels at low tide. And in Scituate Harbor, as you turn into Cole Parkway behind Front Street, there are ducks galore, with a few Canada geese mingling with the gulls and scooters.

Warren Harrington, Marshfield's conservation agent, tells us that a classic place to take the children to feed the ducks is in Jenney Pond, near the grist mill in Plymouth. He laughingly calls it "the bread-feeding kingdom of the world."

For a "breath of spring," plan to attend the 117th New England Flower Show March 5 through 13 at Bayside Exposition Center.

For the Seaside Gardeners of Marshfield, it will be a second venture in this competitive event which is open to all federated garden clubs in the state.

Since this fall, Eleanor Hoehn and Susan Chapman, co-chairmen of the club's flower show committee, have been preparing members for a windowsill collection to be entered in the flower show.

Each club member has been asked to nurture a thriving plant which hopefully will blossom in time for the display.

The specifics facing entrants are: cultural perfection, a southern exposure, arrangement, variety, rarity and color. Plants must have been in a member's possession since December to be judged in the above categories.

Specimens must be labeled by correct botanical and common name. Reference material used for the project was obtained through the Ventress Memorial Library staff.

If February's indoor activities begin to pall, it's time to enjoy a change of scenery with a day trip, if only to some of the local florist shops all decked out for Valentine's Day.

You're invited to join a trip to Quabbin Reservoir on the 13th, led by ornithologist Randy Tate in a search of the nation's symbol, the bald eagle. Call the South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell at 659-2559 for details.

Also, this is the month when the Chinese New Year begins the Year of the Dragon. Arnold Arboretum hosts one of the largest collections of Chinese plants outside China.

In honor of the year 4686, lectures and displays are offered saluting China's contributions to the floral riches of the western world.

A call to Ed Shonio, a staff member at Bridgewater State College, is necessary to arrange a tour of the college's greenhouse and, when spring approaches, a walk through the botanical gardens there.

To reach Shonio, call him either Tuesday, Wednesday or Friday at 697-1200, Ext. 2251.

The sun is weak, the days are short, and windowsills are cold, but all this suits certain plants just fine, as it is now their rest time.

Jade plants, aloe, crown-of-thorns and cacti just want to be left alone as they are in a dormant state and need water maybe once every two weeks. If you wish to start a cactus collection, you may begin by buying inexpensive varieties found in dime stores.

We all have our Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter cacti and repotting, fertilizing or watering them generously right now is a serious mistake.

When you do water them, just pour a miserly amount into the plant's saucer; the water will then rise upward to the root area. In this way excessive moisture will not collect around the stem and lead to rot, which usually guarantees the plant's demise.

A Roman cynic of the first century said the rose is the flower of love because there are thorns on the stem to wound the unwary. Still, a rose remains the favorite Valentine flower—even one red rose, it seems speaks more to the heart than a whole bouquet of anything else. Should you be sent a Valentine gift of flowers, recut stems at an angle with a sharp knife and put the flowers in a vase, and recut the stems daily. Some add an aspirin to the water, others add a little charcoal. Refrigerating them overnight prolongs their life.

Though a rather dowdy black, grey and white, our pin-up of the month embodies cheerfulness, verve and courage. Selected by the South Shore Natural Science Center is one bird that we welcome throughout the winter at our feeder—the Black-capped Chickadee.

First Parish

Canvass Committee:

Preparations for our 1988-89 Every Member and Friend Canvass are now underway under the leadership of co-chairs Jack Martin and Bobbi Leary. Special Gifts Chair will be Bill Phelps. General Gifts Chairs will be Chartis Langmaid and Roger Whitley. Communications Chair will be Diana Kornet and Special Events Chairs will be Millie Mitman and Megan Phelps. Also serving on the Planning Committee will be Ken Wilcox, Treasurer and Ed Atkinson, Minister. The Canvass will begin with a kick off dinner Saturday evening March 19. Be sure to save the date now.

Outreach Committee:

Nine members of the parish participated in the work party last Saturday at Boston Habitat's Dorchester Project. Jack Martin reports that four units are now complete and ready for occupancy.

Free Tax Assistance for Older Persons:

Volunteer counselors trained by the Internal Revenue Service will be available in many cities and towns in Massachusetts from February 1 through April 14, 1988. Persons using this service should bring with them copies of their previous year's federal and state tax returns and forms for the current tax year, including W-2s, 1099s and other relevant materials showing income for the year. Please call Bety Van Slyck (383-1561) or Mildred Harrington (383-0216) for an appointment.

Elder talks about church mission

Elder Robert Edmunds, 21, will report this Sunday on his two-year mission in Italy, at the 9 a.m. family worship hour of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham.

Elder Edmunds, an active member of the local LDS church, has served as a Mormon missionary for the past 24 months. He expects to resume his education at Brigham Young University.

Also speaking on the program will be Brother Beau Woodbury of Cohasset. Brother Woodbury, a Boston attorney, has served many years in Church positions. He and his family recently moved to the South Shore

Shabbat services

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham on Feb. 12 at 7:30 p.m. Rabbi Karol will lead the family service and bestow birthday blessings on children born during the month of February.

Beechwood services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45 a.m..

The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Adult child care is provided downstairs following the children's sermon.

All children in grades K-8 are welcome to attend Sunday School from 9:30-10:30 a.m. as usual guests are welcome. This week the children will be taking Valentines they made and cookies to the shut-ins and to a local nursing home.

Feb. 18 at 6:30 pm. is the next Beechwood social evening. Bring the family and a covered dish for an evening of fun. This event is open to one and all, members, friends and neighbors.

Last Friday a large group from the church went to Walpole Prison and attended the church service held there every Friday. They visited with the participants afterward. Pastor Hall is planning another trip soon. If you would like to come along, call the church and leave a message, 383-0808 or Pastor Hall, 545-3810 (home), 545-6800 (work).

Wednesday, Feb. 17 marks the beginning of Lent. Six weeks later, we celebrate Easter, one of the most sacred times of the Christian calendar. These six weeks can be a time of renewal for everyone. Think in your heart how you, personally, will observe the Lenten season.

Second Congregational Church

CRISIS CORNER: In our continued efforts to support such organizations as the Quincy Crisis Center and Dove, we are asking you to bring food items and paper products to our "Crisis Corner." Until further notice, we do not need donations of used clothing. Thank you.

Sunday mail eliminated

Sunday mailbox pickups will be eliminated beginning Sunday, Feb. 14, and area post offices will be reducing window service hours in order to comply with operating cuts mandated in the recent federal budget.

Plans to reduce window hours at area post offices are currently being developed by the Postal Service but have not been finalized. The new window service hours will go into effect Feb. 14.

Eliminating mailbox pickups on Sunday, the day fewest letters are mailed, would mean a one-day delivery delay for mail deposited in mailboxes Sunday.

Recreation department after-school sports

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct an after school sports and low-organized game program at the Deer Hill School gym.

The program consisting of low-organized games and team sports, will be conducted by recreation department staff members, offering a structured and supervised environment for children who wish to participate.

Registrations will be accepted via telephone by calling the recreation office at 383-6791. There will be an $8 per person fee, with a 50 percent family discount offered for second and subsequent children for the six-week program. Classes will be registered every six weeks from now until May. During the winter months the activities will be held primarily in the Deer Hill School gym and during the spring activities will be held outside whenever weather conditions permit. Because of the gym size, classes will be limited in size and the program will be registered on a first-call, first enrolled basis. Checks, payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class for fee payment.

Gunstock Ski Trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department is accepting telephone registrations for the Gunstock ski trip to be held Feb. 28. The cost for this trip will be $37 per person. To register, you may call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. However, it is payment in full that will reserve your space.

The bus will leave from Town Hall at 5:30 a.m., returning at about 7:30 p.m., that evening, the recreation office will be open at the time of departure and arrival. Two recreation department chaperones will accompany the trip. It remains a good idea to bring extra gloves and socks.

Also, you may bring snacks for the bus ride, but it is a good idea to bring some money for a hot lunch. Rentals and lessons are available at the ski area. Should you wish to rent or take a lesson, please indicate this when you call.

Fees for the trip are slightly more money than prior trips this year, because the trip falls on a peak weekend and lift rates are slightly higher during this period.

Downtown traffic congestion stirs selectmen

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Downtown traffic congestion stirred up selectmen last week as they discussed ways to eliminate the headaches of driving in Cohasset Village.

Selectman James Gallagher suggested that Brook Street which divides Main and Elm streets, be converted to one-way. Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle quickly added, "this problem has been brought up before at least 10 or 12 times," with no obvious solution.

But it was Selectman Burt Pratt who suggested that Brook Street traffic problems "are only one part of a very large problem." He then suggested that an entire study of the Village traffic patterns be initiated.

An alternative, he said, would be to insert an article in the warrant requiring parking spaces for all "7-11's and other stores in the Village and along Main Street. I don't see how we can allow any more buildings to be built in the Village we're allowing all kinds of stuff in the Village."

But planning board Chairman Robert Sturdy, who attended last week's meeting, noted that if stores had to meet certain requirements for parking, it would convert the entire village into a nonconforming district. "So then they can't update or renovate. Everything will be non-conforming, so you can do nothing without a special permit from the zoning board of appeals. The area then becomes blighted," he explained. "We have a fragile downtown area. You really don't want to put a death knoll there.

"But in the meantime, it is strangling itself," Selectman Pratt noted, adding, "Why should the town pay to relieve the congestions for all these merchants?"

Sturdy suggested that traffic regulations could be enforced, prohibiting deliveries by trucks during the most congested hours of the day.

He estimated that a traffic study by an engineer could cost the town about $5,000. Selectman Pratt suggested that the planning board consider hiring a traffic engineer to complete the study.

In the meantime, Selectman Laugelle stated, the town's safety officer could also investigate the problem.

Trash to energy plan to be approved

After much debate, selectmen are prepared to sign a 15-year contract with SEMASS, the trash-to-energy solid-waste disposal firm in Rochester.

Before they consented to the contract, selectman and Town Counsel Richard Henderson wanted assurances that the town will be given credit for recycling its waste. Although a SEMASS official verbally confirmed this to Atty. Henderson, town counsel wanted the clause included in the written contract.

If the town exceeds its annual tonnage allowance as stated in the contract, SEMASS will issue a fine for the excess amount.

The contract will allow Cohasset to dump 4,600 tons of solid waste into the plant's additional facility for a basic tipping fee of $49.50, beginning in 1991.

Selectmen have a difficult time estimating the annual tonnage amount, noting that one member of the disposal area study committee has determined a yearly average of 4,100 tons per year. Atty. Henderson received information from SEMASS stating an estimate of 5,100, although officials initially told him to estimate one ton per resident for the total yearly amount.

Selectmen questioned whether they should employ an engineer to study how much waste is currently deposited at the landfill. It is a predicament, they agreed, because SEMASS will issue a premium for over-depositing, and will fine the town if there is less waste deposited than the amount stated in the annual contract.

They noted that if town meeting approves a mandatory recycling effort, as proposed in the annual town meeting, there will be less waste than originally estimated. Selectman Clifford Mitman suggested they take an average between the high and low tonnage estimates and include a 4,600-ton figure in the contract.

Atty. Henderson said he was not comfortable having selectmen sign a contract without the recycling clause included. "If I can be allowed to add that clause," he said, "and we can get credit for recycling, and then I can get the contract back to you to sign in the next day or so (Friday, Feb. 12 or the following week). If we don't have this back in four to five days, we're really in trouble."

SEMASS originally wanted the contract signed by Jan. 31, 1988, but granted the town a brief reprieve. He suggested that if the town is allowed credit for recycling waste materials, then the annual tonnage figure could be dropped even lower than the 4,600 amount.

Round I goes to preservers of the Curtis will

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

Round one in the controversial disposal of the Curtis Estate has apparently been won by those seeking to preserve the original intent of the late Judge George E. Curtis' will.

At a meeting of the Curtis Estate Action Committee at town hall Feb. 13, Co-chairperson Joseph McElroy told the committee and concerned citizens that Frank Westgate, a Plymouth developer, had withdrawn his option to purchase the 55-acre estate on which he had proposed to build cluster condominiums.

The will, which was executed in 1931-32, bequeathed the property including all buildings to be held in trust for use as a shelter for "feeble, deformed and invalid women without means," to be known as "The Curtis Home."

Why the terms of the 57-year-old will were never carried out is unclear. Committee members speculate the reason may be that trustees felt the income from the estate was insufficient for the operating expenses of a shelter.

But, members quickly pointed out that, however true this may have been in the 1930s, when returns were low relative to the sum of the annuities to the numerous beneficiaries then living, it is not true today.

The present value of the Cohasset property is estimated to be about $1.7 million while the securities stand at about $2 million.

Murry Campbell said contrary to popular belief, the will did not restrict the use of the estate to protestant women. "It was only Curtis' preference and not binding in the will."

The mansion, which was rented for many years, is now vacant and deteriorating, and committee members feel that if a decision by the trustees is not soon forthcoming, the building will fall into total disrepair.

In an effort to resolve the issue of the execution of the will as written, committee members, town officials and attorneys met in Boston at attorney and trustee James DeGiacomo's office to discuss the committee's proposed usage for the estate.

Present at the meeting was McElroy, co-chairpersons Maria Plante and Stephen Bobo along with committee attorney Noel Collins. Representing the trustees were attorneys DeGiacomo, Lynn DeGiacomo and Judith Wyman. Representing the State Attorney General's Office Division of Public Charities, was Gwen O'Sullivan and Selectman Clifford Mitman and town counsel Richard Henderson representing Cohasset.

The committee proposed the Curtis home, known as the mansion, be used as a residence for six to eight retarded citizens. They also proposed taking the larger of the two remaining estate homes and renovating it into a duplex for affordable housing.

A service st legend is ready

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It was a frigid, rainy day as a nor'easter stormed along the coast. A bedraggled customer, soaked as he took the few steps from his car to the garage confessed, "My wife cried when he told her yesterday."

Fran Mitchell looked up from his desk in the front office of the familiar Gulf Station garage. He nodded his head.

"I can't believe it either," the station owner said. "But a lot of my customers . . . I call them friends . . . cried when I told them I'm selling the place."

The news has spread quickly in this small, closeknit town. Fran Mitchell, the man who built this service station 42 years ago alongside his father, Pete, is getting out of the business.

"With these hands," Mitchell explained, proudly displaying the calloused palms of a hard-working laborer, "I built this place from the ground up." Black and white photos, prominently

Chamber members honored

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce honored two of its members last week.

Osborne F. Ingram and Richard Straley were the recipients of the Forrest E. King Memorial Award, the first time the honor has been shared by two members during the same year.

The award is given by the local Chamber of Commerce to the member whose business ethics, management, employee and public relations and civic responsibility are judged to be of the highest standard. It is named in honor of Forrest King, the late owner of King Jewelers at Cushing Plaza, charter member of the Chamber.

Ingram is an officer at Cohasset Savings Bank and currently serves as chairman. He has been active on several town committees, and is noted as a hard-working volunteer for many community causes.

Straley, along with his wife, Sue, owns Cards 'n Shards on Main Street in Cohasset Village. He currently serves as president of the Cohasset Chamber, and was instrumental in planning a gala premiere South Shore showing of Witches of Eastwick last summer.

Historic Minot Ledge Light

Minot Ledge Light, a beacon to ships and sailors for more than one hundred years, has been named to the National Register of Historic Places.

The Cohasset Historical Commission was notified last week about the news.

According to Historical Society Curator David Wadsworth, the lighthouse was among 50 researched and nominated by the Massachusetts Historical Society. Placement in the national register will assure that Minot Ledge Light will be preserved under the standards of the federal government.

Election update

As of Tuesday, competition in the April 9 town election will feature races for the planning board, sewer commission, health board, and trustees for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Only Rocco Laugelle has taken out papers for the one selectman seat and Barbara Bliss and Russell Reidy face no competition on the two school committee seats. Michael Patrolia is the lone candidate for assessor.

There are three seats on the board of library trustees. Elizabeth Eaton, Agnes McCann, Sigrid Carey and Catharine Sturtevant have taken out papers.

Opposing candidates for the health board are Michael H. Sullivan and Hugh Joseph Morgan.

Incumbent Robert Sturdy faces competition from J. Stephen Bjorklund and incumbent R. Gary Vanderweil will face Lot Bates for the planning board seat.

Richard Barrows is the lone candidate for the five-year term on the recreation commission and James R. Sheerin is the lone candidate for the water commission.

The last day to register is March 11 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. and the last day to file nomination papers is Feb. 25. All papers must be returned by Feb. 29.

Mapping needs for town boards discussed. . .

In other action last week, selectmen listened to a proposal by the planning board to begin a comprehensive study of the mapping needs of town boards and committees.

Planning Board Chairman Robert Sturdy told selectmen that various boards now work with outdated and inaccurate town maps. In discussions with members of these commissions, it was suggested the town investigate developing a computerized data base with accurate and current town maps included. He estimated it would cost about $150,000 for the new process.

Sturdy said the maps used by different town departments and boards do not conform to each other - they show varying property lines, utilities, floodplains areas, etc., he stated. "It's very important to have accurate maps that show where a property begins and ends," Sturdy added.

He suggested that selectmen form a committee including members from different town boards. The members could solicit from each town board and agency their town mapping needs. That information will be compiled and presented to selectmen along with a cost for preparing a computerized data base.

Selectman Burt Pratt suggested they solicit the assistance of state engineers who may be willing to work on the project.

"We're going to need a committee to get this thing together to convince the town we need $150,000 or whatever it costs for this project," Selectman Rocco Laugelle stated. Selectmen suggested the committee include representatives from the planning board, the board of assessors, the board of health, conservation commission and selectmen. Merle Brown, chairman of the conservation commission, Selectman Burt Pratt, and Sturdy volunteered to serve on the new study committee.

In other action last week, selectmen appointed two permanent firefighter/EMT's to the fire department. William Sestito, 21, a temporary Cohasset firefighter, was appointed along with Francis Mahoney, 25, of Hull. Mahoney is a Cohasset call firefighter.

Selectman Mitman noted it was a tough decision based on the five strong candidates who applied for the positions.

Three new members were named to the town's Massachusetts Housing Partnership Committee. They are: Israel Sanchez, Peter Logan and Robert Dennis.

Selectmen reviewed 49 articles for the annual town meeting. They intend to discuss several proposals sponsored by Fire Chief Daniel Brock, before allowing them into the warrant. There are also seven articles to be included in the special town meeting, which takes place the same day as the annual.

exhibited throughout the small garage office, visually depict the process that began with a forested lot and ended with the familiar white-shingled service station.

Gulf gas pumps stand proudly at attention - just a few feet from the constant traffic of Rte. 3A. They will be gone next month.

The Cohasset native, well known by his friends in this town and his neighbors in Scituate, is selling the property to two young men who hope to establish a marine sales and repair business at 805 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. Before any new signs are installed however, approval for the new business must be given by the local zoning board and conservation commission. Those decisions should be final by March.

While Mitchell is discussing his future, rain-swept travelers take refuge inside the small, but dry service station. "Just wanted to use your phone," one acquuaintance mutters as he reaches for the receiver near Mitchell's desk. The owner looks up only to laugh and to continue his conversation.

His grown children, Paul, Brian and Judith do not want the business. Mitchell admitted it was once a seven-day, 18-hour operation. "Now I don't work Sundays and I just work half-days - from seven to seven," he stated. A young employee who will return to college fulltime when the shop closes, laughed along with his boss.

He is 62 years old now, but he clearly remembers building this station after his return from the South Pacific in World War II. "Nothing was here except open land." he said. "We bought five acres for $100 an acre.

My father had been in the repair business for as long as I could remember, and I learned my craft from him."

Mitchell carefully unfolded a yellowed newspaper account relating how Pete Mitchell of Hingham had finished first in the Marshfield Fair annual car race.

He gazed again at the faded photograph showing his father proudly at the wheel of his automobile. "It's just time to quit now," he repeated, as he folded the newspaper clipping and slipped it back into the envelope.

"This business has become very complicated," he explained. "I'm tired of doing all this paperwork, keeping track of Massachusetts taxes for the state and not getting anything in return except the extra bookkeeping. "

His oldest son, Paul, is a "motorcycle expert," employed by Honda. Brian, who works at the garage, "has had offers for the same work but for three times the money I was paying him," his father stated. And his admittedly patien and "almost perfect" wife of 40 years, Ruth, plans to enjoy this time together.

They are already planning a number of cross-country trips in the new motor home Mitchell just purchased. He excitedly flipped through the pages of a brochure which detailed in lush color photos the vehicle that will soon arrive at his Brewster Road home.

When asked what he will miss most about his familiar setting along Rte. 3A, Mitchell responded without unnecessary thought. "The public," he said. " And because of them I wouldn't call this hard work. If you like what you're doing, it's not hard. I like what I have been doing. I like working with people and meeting the public. I think you could drive through this town and ask anyone how they feel about Fran Mitchell. The only ones who'll tell you he's a son of a - - - - -, probably owe me money."

Mitchell, who has been active in town politics in the past, said he may consider reviving his participation, but not until he tires of traveling. He has too many friends now who would like some time to spend with this man who serves as deacon and moderator of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Mitchell is also a past master of the Konohasset Lodge, AF and AM. Ruth and he are past Worthy Matron and Patron of the Order of the Eastern Star in Scituate. And Mitchell is a current member of the Aleppo Shrine in Boston.

He will retire with memories of gasoline selling at 18 cents a gallon, and the days when you could count the number of cars that traveled Rte. 3A to the Cape. It is now a business of bookkeeping, hazardous materials disposal regulations and computer tune-ups.

"It's a lot different than I ever imagined it would be," he admitted. "But I'll still miss this place."

Next Dramatic Club play

"Brass Button Avenue" will be an exciting historical departure from the usual productions of the Cohasset Dramatic Club. In May, the Club will present, in cooperation with St. Stephen's Parish, a musical comedy review using as a theme, the rich theatrical background of Cohasset.

Try outs will be held on Sunday, March 6 from 2 to 5 p.m. and Monday, March 7 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Walton Rogers Hall at St. Stephen's, 16 Highland Ave. in Cohasset.

Actors., singers and dancers are needed for the production which is scheduled for May 13, 14 and 20, 21.

The title, "Brass Button Avenue" comes from a name given to the Margin Street and Howard Gleason Road section of town. Townsfolk called the area "Actors Row" and also "Brass Button Avenue" because so many actors lived there who were sailing enthusiasts along with a few sea captains.

Cohasset's theatrical past included serving as a base of operations during the summer for the Hanlon brothers' huge productions of "Fantasia" and "Superba." Cast and crew would come to Cohasset to build sets and rehearse for the following season's productions.

The South Shore Players, a professional summer stock company, occupied the Town Hall stage for many summers. Top names in the theater appeared in plays including Humphrey Bogart, before he went on to the big time.

He was only in a supporting role in Cohasset in the 1930's. 1951 saw the summer theater relocate to a big tent on the former horse show grounds on Sohier Street and become The South Shore Music Circus.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club, has given the community a chance to see and participate in good amateur productions since 1921, and so goes the story of theater in Cohasset.

"Brass Button Avenue" will use this historical background simply as a thread to sew together a cohesive production of musical numbers and comedy skits. Production duties will be shared by the Dramatic club and St. Stephen's Parish. The directors are Denise Ripley and Ellen Kelly.

Everyone interested is encouraged to come to the try outs. Singers and actors and dancers should come prepared with a skit or song (duet, solo or group effort) There will be an accompanist present. There will be music and scene material on hand for those who have not prepared anything.

Solid Waste Symposium

The League of Women Voters of Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset announce their joint sponsorship of a Solid Waste Symposium and Fair to be held Saturday, March 26 at Weymouth North High School, 1051 Commercial Street, E. Weymouth from noon to 5 p.m.

One of the most critical issues facing local government is safe disposal of waste. This fair is designed to provide the opportunity for local governmental representatives, private industry and interested citizens to explore all the options available in waste disposal technologies.

There will be ample opportunity to present questions and seek information from experts and vendors who will be participating.

This fair will focus on: recycling, separation and processing, current and emerging technologies, composting and incineration.

Some of the activities planned for this fair include: speakers, vendors/exhibitors, videos and newspaper and tire recycling pick-up.

To assist your people in covering this fair, please contact one of the following: Hingham LWV — Jerry Elsden, Hingham Journal, or Cohasset LWV — Madeline Olney, 383-1492.

The Senior Report. . .

By Kathy Bryanton
Council on Aging director

Long Term Care Insurance will be the topic of discussion on Thursday, Feb. 25 at 1 p.m. at the Cohasset Council on Aging Senior Center welcomes Maureen Barton and Kathy Glenzel, Health Policy Analysts from the Executive Office of Elder Affairs.

Mrs. Glenzel's presentation will focus on what Long Term Care Insurance is and what the state is doing to insure its availability for people, what policies are currently available, and what can be expected in the future with regard to protections for long term care needs.

She will briefly review nursing home levels of care, and how long term care insurance is different from Medicare and other "medigap" insurance coverages.

The speakers come to us from EOEA, the State office responsible for services to elders in Massachusetts. They will bring with them information comparing long term care policies that are currently available and a checklist for people to use them when considering the purchase of long term care insurance.

"There's not a lot of information out there," said Mrs. Glenzel in a brief interview, "but on Thursday, Feb. 25 we will share the most current information on policies available anywhere in the state."

The lecture and discussion will be held at 1 p.m. at the senior center and everyone is welcome to come. Call the Council on Aging at 383-9112 for more information.

This program is part of the Shine Consortium for this area.

1988 SILVER-HAIRED LEGISLATURE

A statewide election of the Massachusetts Silver Haired Legislature will be held Wednesday, April 20, with cooperation and assistance from South Shore Elder Services, senior centers and Councils on Aging.

Senior citizens eligible for a two-year term as representative or senator must be Massachusetts registered voters, 60 years old or older, and reside in the district that they seek to represent. Present incumbents and former members of the Silver-Haired Legislature may seek re-election.

The Silver-Haired Legislature (SHL) was adopted in Massachusetts in 1980 to provide an educational and advocacy training program for the elderly.

The legislature is known as a grassroot, non-partisan organization dedicated to the development and promotion of legislation, particularly that affecting the elderly.

Patterned after the State Legislature, its membership consists of 40 senators and 160 representatives drawn from the same voter districts as the General Court. It has the distinction of being the only advocacy group whose members are elected by their peers.

Candidates must file nomination papers carrying the signatures of 25 registered Massachusetts voters, 60 years old or older who reside in the district of the candidate.

Nomination papers must be filed with the Silver-Haired Legislature by March 7. Campaigning by can-

□ In case you are wondering what the jet set is doing for their vacation, I can let you in on two ladies' plans. Mrs. Dorothy Bates is taking the train to Florida where she will meet Gert Young. From there the two are taking a cruise to the Bahamas. What's so different about that you ask? Mrs. Bates is 79, Mrs. Young is 85! You can be sure that those two will have the best time of anyone on the Cruise ship. . . watch out Loveboat, there may be a new series in the offering!

□ Speaking of trips, it was something to hear all the complaints about delayed flights because of the weather. If you are reading this you are in the same boat I am. . .not feeling too sorry for anyone that got to warm weather an hour or two late while we are shoveling, freezing and wet!

□ Fran Walton is looking grand and feeling back to normal. Sure is good to see her around town again.

□ Danny Pompeo was honored last week, he received a nice plaque for breaking the scoring record in Cohasset High team hockey. If you haven't seen Dan and his teammates in action, plan to watch them in state high school competition, you are in for a real treat. Watch the paper for the time and date of the game, then go and cheer them on.

□ Brandon Nicholas Waitkus was born Jan. 17. He joins his brother Jared and his proud parents are Dana and Kym Waitkus of Carver.

Grandparents are William and Diane Figueiredo of Cohasset and Warren and Barbara Waitkus of Marshfield.

□ Jack Smith of Cohasset is the new administrative president of the South Shore Toastmasters Club.

The members of the South Shore Toastmasters Club held the first of its bi-weekly meetings Feb. 2 at the Scituate Library.

Smith was toastmaster for the evening and he introduced the two speakers for the event, Bob Miller of Weymouth who delivered his ninth speech titled, "Attributes of Leadership." and Guy Lochiatto of Hanover gave his tenth speech on, "The Making of a President." Lochiatto is the new president of the club.

The next meeting will be held Tues. Feb. 16 at the Scituate Library at 7:15 p.m.

□ Cohasset High certainly has made a name for itself in the Art World! In the news this week are Alexandra Redfield and Megan Terry. Both were chosen to participate in the Boston University Saturday art studio classes for talented high school students. They were part of a group of students that came from four states to apply; their portfolios must be wonderful.

□ Make plans to attend a spaghetti dinner dance this weekend, Saturday to be exact. The place is the George H. Mealey Post, the time is 6:30 p.m. and the caterer is the Women's Auxilliary. The $8 per person fee is to benefit the Veteran's Scholarship Fund, a most worthy cause indeed. Call 383-9657 for more details, and don't put it off as the date for the dinner is Feb. 20.

□ Happy belated birthday to Charlie Stover. . . we don't know which one it is, we didn't ask!

□ Bryan Edwards made the news again this week, literally! Hope everyone saw him on the 6 p.m. news with Bob Lobel and Alice Cook. . .even Lizz Walker was impressed with Bryan, how could she help it! Here's hoping that Bryan makes his goal, to break the state record for scoring, it would make his super career evenmore memorable than ever! We are all cheering for you Bryan!

□ We want to wish every success to David LaVange as he heads back for heart surgery soon. You'll be as good as new in no time David, just follow "orders".

□ Had the pleasure of being in Noel Ripley's Clock Shop last week, and it sure was fascinating! How he can do such fine work on so many clocks is incredible! He sure did a great job on ours!

□ This is vacation week, and whether you are home from the week or just got back from somewhere, you should have a lot of news! Let us in on it, it is fun to read about the adventures of others.

For Cohasset residents 60 and older, elections will be held at the Senior Center, 3 North Main St., April 20. For more information, call the Council on Aging, at 383-9112.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRATION

Put a big red circle around March 17. That is the day that the COA and 60 Plus Club will be putting on their annual spring green extravaganza (wearin'-of-the-green).

This year's corned beef and cabbage dinner will be prepared by Jessica's of Scituate, and entertainment will be provided by Paul Wiggins with his guitar. Dinner will be served at noon. Call Mary Donoven for tickets, cost is $5.50, with reservations by March 11.

SENIOR AIDE NEEDED

There is an immediate need and opening for a senior aide secretary to the Cohasset Council on Aging Director. Hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., five days per week totalling twenty (20) hours per week.

Senior aide requirements: 55 years or older — low income and benefits include: quarterly health insurance payments of $43.75 paid, three weeks vacation per year, sick leave, one day off for your special birthday and a rate of $4.10 per hour.

If you or anyone you know is interested in this position, please contact the Council on Aging Office, Kathy Bryanton at 383-9112 as soon as possible.

NEW ENGLAND FLOWER SHOW

On Tuesday, March 8, we will travel to Boston from the Town Hall at 9:30 a.m. Cost of the ticket and transportation this year will be $9.50. Food is available at the Flower Show. Must make returns by Feb. 19, so please purchase your tickets now. This trip is being sponsored by the Council on Aging and the Cohasset Community Garden Club. A good day trip!

MYSTERY A PHONE CALL AWAY

Where is that adventuresome spirit? Dust it off folks, and call the Council office to schedule your seat on the first of its kind COA Consortium Van Mystery Trip, Thursday, March 3.

Lucky day-trippers will travel off to an unknown destination for lunch and an afternoon of enjoyment. The cost for this mystery trip will be $4.00 for admission, and lunch on your own expense.

Call us now and join the brave-at-heart who have already signed up! You will be home before dark! Call 383-9112.

TAX ASSISTANCE PLANNED

As in the past, the Cohasset Council on Aging will host the volunteer counselors tax assistance program. Volunteers trained by the (IRS) Internal Revenue Service will be available from Feb. 1 through April 15, 1988. Any person using or needing this service can bring with them copies of their previous year's federal and state tax returns and any forms for the current tax year that they feel they will need. Call 383-9112, or call Bety Van Slyck at 383-1561, Mildred Harrington 383-0216.

CROSS COUNTRY SKIING

What three things can skiers look forward to this winter? Good snow — good company — and a good leader! If you are interested in cross country skiing —gliding through snow covered forests — cruising along on smooth, well-prepared tracks that coax you across the lovely countryside. It's time for one of the best things you can do for your body and spirit. Call us and have your name added to the growing list of interested people ready to join the great outdoors. COA — 383-9112. Instruction will be available to anyone interested.

Obituary

Richard J. Walsh

A funeral Mass was celebrated Feb. 15 in St. Anthony's Church for Richard J. Walsh, who died at home Feb. 10. Burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Mr. Walsh was a retired branch credit officer with the first National Bank of Boston. He was named assistant manager of the credit department in 1949 and loan officer in 1950. He retired from the bank in 1965.

He was awarded the Bronze Medal of the Reconnaissance Francais from Baron Charles de Pampelonne, the consul-general of France, during the Boston observance of Bastille Day. He was also cited by the French government in 1959 for his work between the American and French forces that liberated France during World War II.

He joined the Army in 1945, and also received the American Campaign Medal and the World War II Victory Medal.

He was a graduate of Boston College High School and Burditt College.

Husband of the late Elizabeth (Cadigan) Walsh, he leaves two sisters, Isabelle Foley of Wilmington and Eleanor Hassan of Norwalk, Conn.; a nephew, Lawrence Foley of Reading; a niece, Mary Cuoco of Reading, and several grandnieces and grandnephews.

An interesting case

There was an interesting case resolved two weeks ago in superior court. It involved the town against two local residents who wanted to build a home on property they own along Pleasant Beach.

The board initially denied them a special permit to construct a four-bedroom home along the waterfront property, but they challenged that finding in court. There was a trial, and the judge ruled in favor of the residents. If the zoning board does not appeal the judge's decision, a building permit will be issued and construction may begin as early as spring.

It is an interesting case on several fronts. This couple desired to live along the ocean, along land they owned and paid taxes on. But the zoning board denied the request, stating the coast along Pleasant Beach "changes shape, elevation and contour annually due to wave action."

The zoning board, comprised of volunteer members of this community, obviously looked hard and long into this issue and resolved that construction would have a deliterious effect upon Cohasset's coastline and any home constructed there. They still feel they were correct in prohibiting the proposed construction.

But this couple was equally confident that they should be legally allowed to build their home on this land. And all it took was a lot of their time, their money and their tenacity.

Where most people would have stopped and reconsidered their options and quit right there, this couple decided to fight the local system. And because they were willing to give up the time, spend their money, and hire a knowledgeable attorney, they finally won their case.

In his decision, Judge David Kopelman accused the zoning board of being "unreasonable, arbitrary, and capricious" and used several legal precedents to back-up his statements on this case. In every instance he took issue with the zoning board's July, 1984 decision not to issue a special permit.

But what does this mean for the rest of this town. What about those people who want to build a garage onto their home in the floodplain, or would like to add a playroom on their house which sits in a non conforming lot?

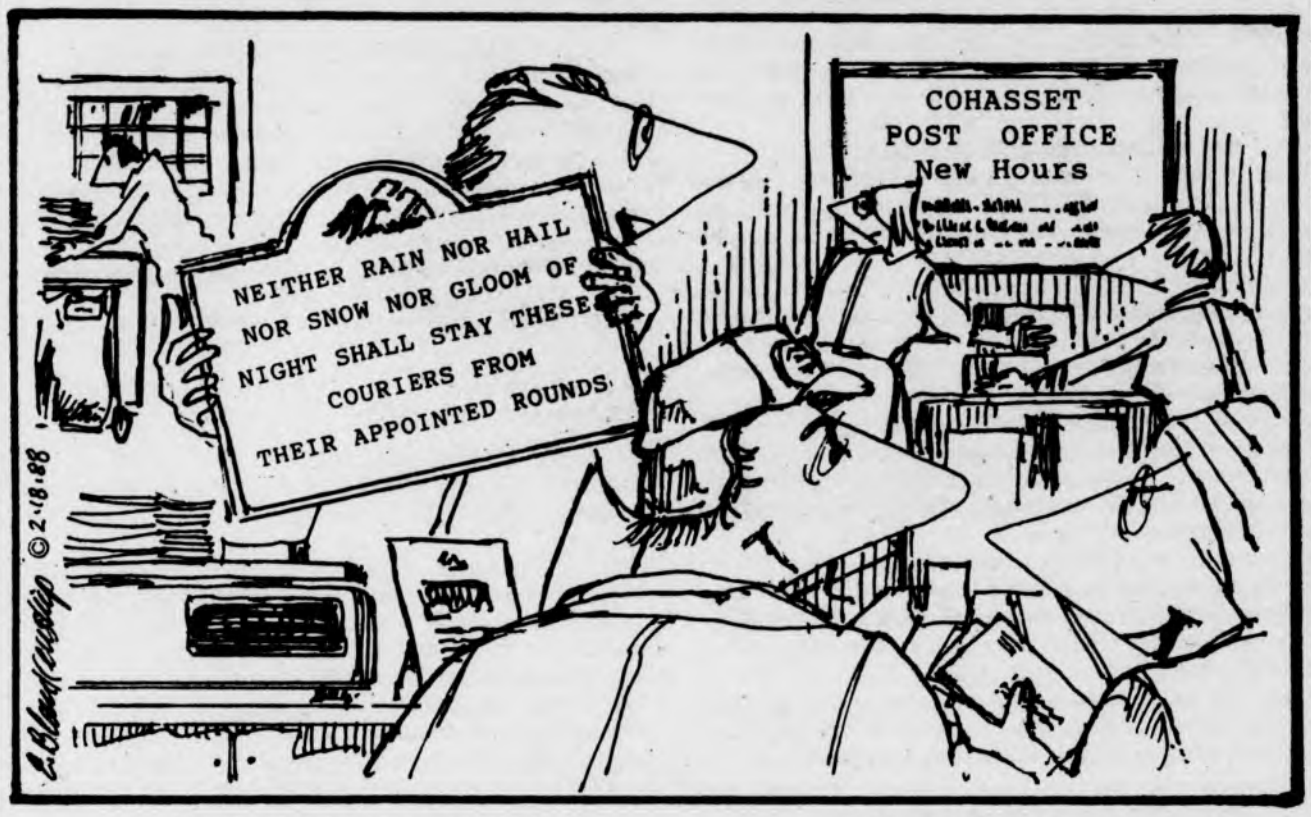
It says that you must be extremely cognizant of our zoning bylaws and know where they apply and where they do not. It says that unless you are supremely confident you are correct, don't bother pursuing an appeal. And it says that unless you have the money to hire a good attorney, there is little you can do.

And that is the sad part about this story. A judge has ruled in one case and thus one couple who lived through six years of battling the town have found the answer for which they were searching.

But what about the rest of this town that can't afford the attorney fees, and really doesn't understand the technicalities that make this particular case winnable? It is the old double standard once again.

We're happy for one couple, but feel great remorse for the majority of residents who would not put themselves through such an ordeal, despite the outcome.

NEWS ITEM — Post office cut backs on window hours and mail pickup goes into effect. Postal service must cut its budget by $1.2 B in conformance with federal 'Omnibus Budget Reconciliation' over next two years. South Shore mail service faces midday, midweek shutdowns, Saturday curtailment, no Sunday mailbox pickups



"...Where do you suppose that Omnibus Budget Reconciliation crowd wants to stick this...?"

Mrs. Langamaid says thanks for caring

Letters

To the Editor:

The recent presentation of a piano to the Cohasset High School music department in memory of Jack was made possible by the actions of many people, whom I would like to publicly thank and acknowledge.

Shortly after Jack's death last July, JoAnne Chittick asked me if I would agree to the creation of a John F. Langmaid III Memorial Fund.

She has spoken with a number of our friends who felt they would like to establish a fund, connected with the school system, so that Jack's interest in and contributions to public education in Cohasset might be remembered.

I felt this was a wonderful idea and asked JoAnne to carry on.

Because of Jack's lifelong love of music, we felt a gift with some connection to music would be very suitable. Colleen Foley, the new instrumental music teacher at Cohasset High School, became part of a small committee to explore the possibilities.

As the word spread about the Memorial Fund, contributions were made and accumulated to around $3,500 by Christmas time.

With this resource, Ms. Foley requested that we consider the purchase of a new piano for the band room. Jack particularly loved jazz piano, and I felt very comfortable in telling Mr. Hart and Ms. Foley to proceed to see what they could buy with the available funds.

A new Young Chang (not Steinway) piano was available at a very good price from Steinert in Boston. It was delivered around the end of January. We have ordered a small brass plate for it which states: "In memory of Jack Langmaid, given by his friends."

Some of the money remaining in the fund will pay for a two day workshop by master trumpeter Walter Chestnut. This will be an exciting enrichment opportunity for all students, especially those interested in playing, listening to, and/or composing music.

I thank Colleen Foley for arranging this visit by Mr. Chestnut. The fund will remain open and hopefully will have sufficient resources to provide some special event or item for the music department in years to come.

Thank you to everyone who has been involved in organizing and contributing to the memorial fund. It's a way of sharing the happy memories about Jack, and honoring his commitment and example to the community. We are proud and grateful that so many people have wanted to be involved.

Toxic waste is threatening everyone

By Ron Goodwin
Special to the Mariner

Feb. 13, at the Sheraton Tara Hotel in Nashua, New Hampshire members of the Concerned Citizens of Cohasset participated in a "Toxic Prevention '88 Conference."

This citizens response to the toxics crisis was sponsored by Northeast People Organized to Win Environmental Rights (P.O.W.E.R.). Over 1500 people attended representing many organizations concerned with toxic hazards.

All the candidates for president were invited to participate in a forum moderated by Dr. Ken Geiser of Tufts University.

Senator Paul Simon attended and cited his positive environmental voting record. On toxic prevention issues, his record is marred only by occasional absences.

Simon is leading the battle in congress for the Warner Amendment to get military victims just compensation for nuclear radiation exposure.

Congressman Richard Gephardt promised to support a new incinerator construction moratorium. Congressman Gephardt has been strong on some toxics issues and weak on others. His voting record on environmental issues has been favorable in recent years. He co-sponsored Superfund in 1980 and 1986.

Commentary

Jesse Jackson was delayed and did not arrive in time to participate. No other candidates attended the forum.

The afternoon was filled with many workshops on many related subjects; recycling, incineration, dangers in the workplace, Superfund, source reduction to name a few.

Federal regulators from Environmental Protection Agency, Department of Energy and The Department of Occupational Safety and Health were requested to attend but no one attended.

It was clear to the people who attended the conference that toxic hazards are threatening all Americans. The Concerned Citizens of Cohasset are not an organized group. We are concerned citizens. As National Wildlife Federation President Jay D. Hair states, "Clearly, these problems are taking a toll on our quality of life, but that doesn't mean the situation is irreversible. It means we can no longer sit back and wait for 'the other person' to do something. To affect change, each of us must be 'the other person.'"

Round I of the Curtis Estate heard in court. . .

McElroy said the committee considered razing the remaining house and barn; replacing them with either a home or units for the elderly.

The committee also proposed, because the majority of the land has been deemed unsuitable for building due to its topography which contains ledge and has been found not to be condusive to percolation, and its concerns about watershed issues, that the land be designated a Conservation Trust with the committee exploring funding to pay the trust for the land.

McElroy said the proposal— which included open spaces with picnic tables, walking trails and Jungle Gyms—would be an asset to the town.

McElroy informed those present the possibility may exist that, should the property be developed as the committee proposes, a non-profit organization might have to be formed to administer the estate funds and properties.

A Cy Pres filed by the trustees in Probate Court Dec. 9, 1987, claims that wetlands restrictions make the real estate unsuitable for operation of a home. It is not explained, however, why it would be suitable for use by a developer.

The document, which is a vehicle whereby a will can be broken, also states that any proceeds from the sale plus other funds be placed in trust to be used for "charitable purposes."

The question was raised as to when the trustees would finally begin executing the terms of the will and disburse the proceeds as Curtis wished.

Campbell said "In the 57 years since Curtis died, as far as we know, not one nickle has gone to charity." He asked McElroy if the trustees had given any time frame in which the distribution of money was to begin noting that the Cy Pres called for distribution to certain charities.

McElroy said no exact time had been specified, because the execution of will " is temporarily suspended pending review of the comments being received on the Cy Pres and the overall appropriate execution of the will."

According to McElroy, the committee asked trustees if they would consider withdrawing the Cy Pres as written and the answer was "no." They asked if trustees would consider taking the property from the market; again the answer was "no." The committee asked trustees if they would consider funding a feasibility study to evaluate a program for charitable purposes and again the answer was "no."

Mitman said the trustees reassured the committee they would let it know when the land was in the process of being sold and that it could not be sold without the permission of the state Attorney General's Office.

In answer to Campbell's question of how the committee felt the meeting went, McElroy said, "I think it's fair to say we came out of the meeting with a feeling that we should explore a couple of avenues," adding, "we have a lot of work to do."

McElroy said the committee intends to look at the merits of the use of the property, as it was outlined to the trustees, at no cost or at a token cost.

"Because we don't want to preclude any opportunities or options," said McElroy, "we will certainly explore the possibility of whether it's feasible to pay the trust monies for the purchase of the property for the intended uses we described, thus increasing the liquidity of the trust."

McElroy wondered whether the committee could receive any help from the state in the purchase of the property.

John Munsey, chairman of the Cohasset Housing Authority, informed the committee that the state did not buy land, but will make money available to help build and maintain housing for the elderly, retarded and also affordable housing.

He said the state has recently appropriated $5 million for purchase of open space and some of the money might be available for the conservation segment of the committee's proposals.

Muncey said the housing authority has received its grants of $589,000 to build a residence for eight mentally retarded citizens and $1.4 million for 12 affordable housing units.

Whether any of these funds would be used in conjunction with the Curtis Estate was not made clear.

Although McElroy said the trustees did not "give a flat "no" to our proposals," the committee feels it is imperative that strong and concerted action be taken to put an indefinate hold on these proceedings before approval is granted to depart from the intent of the will and before the land is irrevocably sold and no longer available for the purpose stated in Curtis' will.

McElroy said the committee has been circulating petitions for signatures of Massachusetts' residents to uphold the intent of Curtis' "'Last Will and Testament' and that the 'Curtis Home' for the needy be maintained and put in its proper use as stated in the Will."

The committee has more than 900 signatures to date and more coming in every day, he said.

The consensus of the committee is that it is absolutely essential to work closely with selectmen and any appropriate boards and committees.

"We will continue to solicit political and public support for what we deem to be the appropriate usage of the Curtis Estate," McElroy said.

In a post meeting clarification to the Mariner, Curtis Estate Action Committee members re-emphasized their desire to see charitable distributions made promptly to needy groups.

Committee members indicated that a modified Cy Pres might make that possible, while feasibility studies are accomplished on how to best use the Cohasset property for the needy.

ConCom acts on housing unit proposals

By Pat Masterson
Mariner staff

A wood frame and a single housing unit were approved, while an office development and a living room/deck/pool addition were put on hold by the conservation commission.

During Tuesday's public hearings, the commission ruled on the four building areas and discussd other construction projects.

The commission approved a request presented by Richard Grinell, contractor, to construct a 1½ story wood-frame rear addition and a dormer on an existing roof of the home of Paul and Margaret Cotter of 50 Jerusalem Road.

Grinell informed the commission that the addition will be built within 100 feet of a nearby buffer zone and construction will not require dredging or altering the area.

After a lengthy discussion, the commission also approved a single house between two ponds on Beachwood Street. Norm Levin, architect/designer, presented plans to the commission, which included provisions for the 100-year storm expected to dump some seven inches of rain in a 24-hour period.

The construction for the house will include a four-inch dip in the road for water run-off.

Robert Maki, engineering consultant for the commission, said the construction would not disturb any present structure but residents of abutting Locust Road were concerned that the construction would direct more water into their cellars when it drained parallel to their home.

The residents are at a 45-foot elevation, while most of the work will occur at 42 feet, said Merle Brown, commission chairman. He informed the residents that they could appeal to the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering but that one appeal was turned down.

The projected construction plans will also include pipes from the driveway directed below the level of drainage.

A living room/deck/pool addition presented by Jon Lucas, on behalf of neighbor James Sandell, of 24 Stevens Lane, was deferred until an engineering plan was submitted.

The proposed addition calls for the entire structure to be on stilts, but John Bryant, commission member, was concerned that the addition of an above-ground, aluminum pool would be too close to the surface of a nearby pond.

Lucas said there would be no filling or grading during construction and the entire structure would be five feet above existing land.

"It is not a wetland by definition, but there's high, flowing water near the proposed site," said Bryant.

The commission advised Sandell to submit an engineering study, which will include the possible effects of the 100-year storm.

A proposed development of office buildings, on Crocker Lane, will be discussed at an open hearing March 16. The planning board wants plans for all proposed buildings of the plan, including soil conservation wetland drainage plans, for roofs and parking areas.

Budget Business

In other commission business, Brown reported that the advisory board indicated that they will accept the commission's $12,000 budget minus proposed overtime funds to be shared with the sewer commission for their secretary. Also, the advisory board said that all departments housed at the 43 Elm Street location, including the board of health, must cut down on costs for paper and copying.

Brown asked the commission to consider drafting bylaws in the future. He said the commission is limited in their ability to make decisions without bylaws.

The commission will investigate the possibility of implementing a reserve fund account for the planning board and the commission. The reserve fund, similar to the one in Hanover, would allow the commission to take funds out and put them back on a revolving basis rather than having an established amount budgeted at the beginning of the fiscal year.

Brown will be one of a seven-member committee appointed by selectmen to determine the most efficient way to restructure all town assessment and topography maps, which show elevation above two feet in the town.

The committee will look at combining map information into one document in the form of overlays or computer print-outs.

School news

Whispers and Shadows, high school student literary and art magazine, is made possible by grants from the Student Government, the Art Boosters, and the Arts lottery.

The 1988 magazine will be published this spring. The following are excerpts from the 1987 Whispers and Shadows.

My Shell

My shell is tough —
How strong it has become
After being cracked by emotions,
Abandoned by fear.
Its shape is lost in endless twirls.

Joe Lagrotteria

The Button

The button.
Press it, and
Trees spring from the ground,
Branchless, glearming,
Break their fiery roots and
Head towards the sky.

The trees
Traveling, arrow like, across
The rippling mirror.
Descend, descend.
Land and break into
Glowing, gleaming destruction.

The people
Agony blossoms like
A flower across their backs.
Pain, death.
Fall and lay still
As the trees once were.

Michael Cisneros

Summer Scene

Digging in the gritty sand
with his K-Mart plastic shovel,
The plump child, scorched by sun,
glanced up.
(hundred of oiled bodies slithered around like eels cancer rotting middle-aged bodies)
The beach is an escape into a younger life.

Osgood School
Special China display

An expression of deep gratitude to DeeDee Nicynski and others for their creation of our very special China Dragon prominently featured in the Osgood School's celebration of China Day.

Principal John Creamer also expressed appreciation to the artist of the month mothers who worked within the classrooms in the preparation of Chinese art work that contributed to the atmosphere of our school

Junior High Dance

A Junior High Dance, sponsored by the seventh grade, will be held Friday, Feb. 26 from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the high school's upper gym. Grades 7, 8, and 9 are invited to attend this fundraising event. A disc jockey will play your favorite songs. Tickets are $4 per person.

Artist of the Month

The parent volunteers in the Artist of the Month program did a project dealing with Chinese symbols in order to coordinate with the excitement of learning about China that is occurring throughout Osgood.

Children made Chinese banners by drawing symbols on special "rice" paper and then decorating with long bright strips of tissue. While the program was taking place, children took turns drawing their symbols on a piece of fabric designated for their class which will be used to decorate the body of a huge dragon that has been made by DeeDee Nicynski, Janet Amiri and Alix White Bigley for the Dragon Parage Friday, Feb. 5.

The school would like to thank the following volunteers for their help this month: Connie Afshar, Cheryl Bugley, Sue Cameron, Betsy Connoly, Karen Devine, Retta Dwyer, Martha Equi, Kathy Gray, Debbie Hanian, Lee Jenkins, Linda Keller, Janet Lamp, Patty McCarthy, Marianne McLaughlin, DeeDee Nicynski, Olga Nohe, Donna O'Donnel, Betty O'Sullivan, Susan Pile, Moria Stansell, Priscilla Sullivan, Kathy Walsh, Ronnie Wach and Gail Whitehouse.

ANNOUNCING OUR 7th EDITION

Where local residents look first ...

Book more local business!

Did you know that 90% of all consumer needs are met within a 3 to 5 mile radius of home? And that 85% of all telephone shopping is done within the local exchange? It's true! Local business can be big business! If you know how to attract it.

How do you do it? By making sure that local consumers find you when they're looking for the type of products or services you sell. And you do that by advertising those products and services where local consumers look first. Manning's Little Phone Book.

Advertising in Manning's Little Phone Book is targeted advertising. Targeted advertising is cost-effective advertising. Advertising that works! Advertising you should know about.

To find out what advertising in The Little Phone Book can mean to your business, call your Manning representative today. Remember, to book more local business, make sure you're in the local book. Manning's Little Phone Book.

Why local consumers look in the Little Phone Book first.

- ☐ IT'S ALWAYS HANDY. It usually sits on top of the big directories, or right next to the phone.
- ☐ IT SAVES TIME. Tells buyers where to find what they're looking for — quickly, conveniently, close to home.
- ☐ IT'S EASY TO USE. Compact and lightweight. Fewer pages to search through. Easy to hold in one hand while dialing the phone with the other.
- ☐ IT'S COMPLETE. Every local business and residence is listed.
- ☐ IT'S HELPFUL. Pack with thoughtful extras like money-saving coupons, restaurant guides, listing of professional services, and a handy fold-out street map.

High school sports

An apology

The Mariner wishes to apologize to the community and Cohasset High School for the statement that appeared in the Feb. 11 high school sports report regarding the boys' basketball team.

We realize that each member of every team is an asset and contributes to the great success of the Cohasset High School sports program.

We are sorry for the insensitivity of this statement and express our sincere regret. Ed.

CHS winter roundup

GIRLS BASKETBALL

There's a girls basketball team at Cohasset High School and they're beginning to horn in on some of the attention the boys team has grown accustomed to.

For years now the girls basketball team, under Head Coach Bill Fallon, has been right up there among the most consistently successful high school sports organizations in this part of the state, but, because of the comparable good fortune the much heralded boys team has enjoyed over the same period of time, they have flourished in virtual obscurity.

In fact, they are, quite likely, the best kept secret in Cohasset.

This past week, in which they recorded marks in the win column for both of their contests, the female Skippers wrapped up the '87-'88 campaign with an exceptional 17-1 record (15-1 in league play), which brings their incredible tally over the past five seasons to 88-22.

And, in conjunction to their 80 percent rate of success, they've also put together seven successive winning seasons, been in the Eastern Mass Tourney five years running, and have now won their league championship in three of the last four chances to do so.

Obviously, it is not difficult to see that there has got to be some unique element, or elements, which enabled the girls to prosper with such consistency, but, as is so often the case pin-pointing it is quite another matter.

As a matter of fact, even Coach Billy Fallon, himself, does not seem quite clear on this relationship between cause and effect.

"Well, I guess a lot of it has to do with hard work," says the head coach, now in his eighth season. "We're not loaded with talent, nor have we been in the past. There are good, solid players on this team but no real superstars.

If I had to pick one thing, though, I'd probably have to say that the good defense the teams always seem to be able to play is the key."

This year's squard is lead by a trio of talented seniors, Liz O'Leary, Cindy Spooner, and Marge Murphy, who have turned what was supposed to be a recovery year, losing four of their starters from last season's team, into a campaign where the sky is the limit.

Another championship season

This is one great girls' basketball team which will enter the state playoff picture once again.
(Alan Chapman photo)

O'Leary (10 pt., 8 steals per game) has stepped into the starting line-up this season, as the point guard, and has provided her team with everything that possibly could have been asked of her and them some.

More than anything else, however, what she gives to the team in the area of take-aways, combined with her natural athleticism plus her scrapper's attitude, is by far the most important.

Five-foot-nine Cindy Spooner (11.5 p.p.g., 12 r.p.g.)

Cohasset High School winter sports roundup. . .

plays the pivot position for Bill Fallon, who confides that it is her superb inside game, especially over the last few weeks of the season, which has solidified this team. And, actually, the fact that she is there at all is something of a lucky stroke, as, just prior to the start of the season, she underwent delicate knee surgery.

And, finally, last but not least, is 5'8" Marge Murphy (12.5 p.p.g.), the team's leading point getter and, in the eyes of just about everyone who's seen the Skippers play, their best player, and perhaps even, in the consideration of her coach and many of her teammates, the best player in the league.

Fallon said, "Marge does it all for us; she's a leader, a shooter, a scorer, etc., she just does so much for the team."

The starting line-up is rounded out by a fourth senior, Debby Hartley, whose best attributes, according to her coach, are her intelligence on the court and full realization of what her capabilities and limitations are, and a junior, Kristen Ellinger, who Fallon calls "our best man-to-man defensive player."

However, with the all-out pressing defense the Skippers frequently deploy, and which has been called an absolutely essential part of their game-plan, naturally, five players, even in peak conditions, are not nearly enough to carry the load.

Fortunately, though, they have this area covered as well, as Fallon feels he can go eight or nine deep into his bench without giving up a whole lot.

At the reserve guard positions junior Sara Bishop and senior Heather St. Onge usually fit the bill, while, up front, juniors Nancy Reilly and Heather MacDonald generally spell relief.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Monday, at home, the boys survived an all-out Pirate defense (designed specifically to stop the unstoppable Bryan Edwards) without ever really having to kick into a higher gear, 78-60.

Entering the game the Hull bunch were hungry, to say the least, for a win, which would ensure them of finishing with a winning percent of 60 percent and thus qualifying them for post-season play.

And, by the final result, we are again reminded, although not so painfully, of the incredible disparity which exists in the South Shore League.

The Pirates did, however, in all fairness, do a remarkable job on Edwards, holding him to a season-low 21 points.

Although, also let the record show that Bryan, who was having an off night from the field anyway, was quite content to dish off to teammates like Smith(18 points) for easy hoops.

However, there was no such luck for a visiting team on Wednesday in the Skippers final regular season game, as Bryan Edwards got back on his state record scoring pace, knocking down 47 and in leading his team over the century mark for the fifth time this season. The Skippers simply pasted the Green Wave 105-74.

Also turning in a big performance was Smith, who logged a career high 24 points, which brought his not too shabby season average at 16.4 points.

For the Skippers this was their incredible 50th win in a row in their small league division.

This week Eddie Minelli and his boys play in the Hall of Fame Classic, a Brockton's Massasoit Community College, Wednesday night. However, after that the Skippers have two weeks off in which they will have nothing to do but prepare for the Division Three Eastern Mass. Tourney.

GIRLS GYMNASTICS

The annual South Shore League gymnastics meet was held Tuesday night, at Scituate High School, and, unlike many other years, there were few major surprises.

As was expected by just about everyone, Hanover's Dayna Curran dominated the field, capturing top-honors in all four events and breezing to a victory in the over-all competition with a remarkable score of 33.75.

And the Duxbury team, who wrapped up their first ever SSL crown last week, with a perfect 10-0 record, took the team competition. Cohasset, however, was extremely well represented as well.

Leading the way for head coach Ruth Ann Sargent's squad was Liz Buckley who, with one of her best all-around performances of the year (21.2), capturing fifth place.

HOCKEY

Dennis Walsh's hockey team started this week of play in third place and this is exactly where they ended it.

Wednesday, Feb. 10, on Skipper ice, all hopes of not only a first place finish, but just about all thoughts of second place as well, were lost when Cohasset dropped to 12-3 in league play by losing their second game in as many chances to second place Duxbury, (13-2), 7-2.

Duxbury jumped out to a 2-0 lead nine minutes in, while Cohasset, who had not yet recorded their first shot on net, seemed unable to do anything when the puck was in their possession. And, actually, it was only through some tip-top net minding by senior goalie Peter Sandblom that the home team managed to keep the game as tight as they did.

As a matter of fact, it was directly following one of the Cohasset goalies many big stops that the Skippers, on a tremendous end-to-end, score by senior defenseman Craig Mulcahey, finally managed to get on the board.

This goal at last appeared to ignite the Cohasset team, as, over the course of the next several minutes, they barraged Green Dragon goalie, Marty Hauber, with a stream of potential game tiers.

Hauber proved equal to everything thrown at him during the stretch, which appearently ended on a Cohasset penalty. However, while killing the penalty, another scoring opportunity presented itself for sophomore wing, Brian Pompeo, and he capitalized on it by skating his wing on a 2-on 3 break and then whistling a wrist shot from the slot past the Duxbury goalie.

But, as we already know from that point on the door was shut tight on the Skippers.

Fortunately,however, the Cohasset team did not allow their disappointment to become a factor in the regular season finale Saturday at the Hobomock Arena in Pembroke, as the Skippers bounced back, trouncing a hapless Scituate team (0-15-1), 9-0.

Leading the way for the boys, who were understandably looking to head into post-season play on a high note, was, as it has been in the majority of the wins this season, the first line.

It was the league's two top-scorers, Dan Pompeo (4 goals and three assists) and Tom Maguire (3 goals and two assists), respectively, who paced the Skippers, although the third member of the elite group, Brian Pompeo (Dan's younger brother and fourth leading scorer in the league) helped the cause as well, logging a couple of assists and playing good hard-nose, aggressive hockey.

WRESTLING

The wrestling team, this week, closed out what has been a solid '87-'88 campaign, unfortunately, on a bit of a sour note.

With a pair of losses, to Whitman-Hanson Thursday and to Plymouth-Carver Saturday, the boys lowered both their league record, to 5-2, thus kicking them down into third in the SSL standings, and their overall record, now 9-10.

Thursday, at Whitman-Hanson High School, Cohasset locked horns with the Panthers (6-1), in order to determine which of them was the second best team in the South Shore League.

Cohasset, when they had wrestlers to put on the mat, which, as the three forfeits (18 points) they suffered indicates, was hardly often enough, did fine, winning five of the ten matches they were able to field participants for.

However, the home team capitalized on a number of things, inlcuding the fact that their opponents did not log a single pin, to win easily, 45-15.

Those winning matches for the Skippers were Doug Bennet (125) 5-2, Peter Buckley (135) 6-0, Glen Froio (152) 16-6, Paul Froio (160) 10-2, and Chris Froio (171) 9-5.

Saturday morning, at home, in the week's non-league match, against Plymouth-Carver (10-4), the Skippers again gave away the 18 points by way of forfeit.

However, this time it did alter the outcome significantly as it was the full roster of the Blue Eagles which spelled the difference, 35-31.

Those winning matches for the Skippers were John Rhodes (112), Bennet (125), Buckley (135), Jim Donahue (145), G. Froio (152), P. Froio (160), C. Froio (171).

Pilgrim fire quelled

An overheated cable to an insulation blanket inside the Pilgrim nuclear power plant led to the declaration of an unusual event last week.

The fire brigade was called to the scene of the smoking cable at 7:35 p.m. Feb. 11. As of 8:05 p.m., the event was concluded.

"The insulating blanket istself didn't burn, just the rubber insulation on the cable burned," said Ralph Bird, senior vice presiden at Edison, on Friday. He said the cable was about 10 to 15 feet in length.

It took a few minutes for the workers to extinguish the fire as the blanket and cable were located in what was designated a "potentially contaminated" area.

"So they had to put on anti-contamination clothing before entering the area. That took a few minutes," Bird said.

DUPLITRON INCORPORATED
Locally Owned And Operated By Richard Hassler

Facsimile telecommunications is the newest in worldwide communications. Sending hardcopy facsimilies to an office across town or across the world is possible with this new advance. DUPLITRON INC. of 89 York Avenue, Randolph, phone 986-2800 is our choice for a firm which is capable of assisting their customers, providing service for products they sell, and above all, making the products affordable.

In the age of the small business, establish yourself with the capabilities large businesses have to offer. It is important for the local business owner to be part of the communications network. The advantages a Fax machine has to offer can give that local business a national effect.

DUPLITRON INC. also features copiers, typewriters and same day service at your convenience. So, allow the people at DUPLITRON INC. to provide you with the latest in facsimile systems. Their dealership provides all the products associated with the facsimile machine and the ability to inform you.

The Publishers of this 1988 Richardson Report are happy to announce DUPLITRON INC.as the leader in facsimile communications equipment.

DAVE EGAN AUTO LEASE CO.
Locally Owned And Operated By Dave Egan

Economists tell us that we should buy things that appreciate in value and lease those that depreciate. This is why the trend towards auto leasing is becoming so popular. When you need a new car, call the experts at DAVE EGAN AUTO LEASE CO. Convenienly located at 38 Utility Road in Scituate, phone 545-2353, this outstanding leasing organization has more to offer with better service, cars, both imports and domestic, and savings for your commitment.

When you call this outstanding firm for a lease, you'll be assured of the automobile best suited for your home or business. With a fine selection of late model cars available, this is one leasing facility that has just what you want! DAVE EGAN AUTO LEASE CO., features a commitment to personalized service after leasing your car. It is this customer oriented policy that separates this firm from others and why those who have done business here speak highly of the quality.

We, the writers of this 1988 Richardson Report suggest to our readers that if you want to lease a quality car coupled with a service agreement that can't be beat, contact DAVE EGAN AUTO LEASE CO.

E. L. MARGETTS & SONS, INC.
Family Owned And Operated Since 1912

Building a home is a difficult business. There are many decisions to be made and you want to get the absolute most for your money in today's tough, competitive market. One way to be sure of getting the proper sanitation equipment is to contact the professionals at E.L. Cohasset worship

Second Congregational Church

Minister: Gary A. Ritts, Secretary: Muriel Wheelwright, Office phone 383-0345, Parsonage phone: 383-1422. Office hours: Monday through Friday, 9:00 - noon.

Church School: Many of the children were busy last Sunday making truly wonderful Valentine cards for shut-ins. . .and the preK/Kindergarten class created a lovely bulletin board.

Offering envelopes: If you would like, but have not yet received offering envelopes for 1988, please contact Debbie Haase (383-1904) to place your order.

The Flower Committee would appreciate the donation of some "pretty vases" to the church for use on Sunday Mornings.

An Oriental rug would add a nice tone to the minister's office. The board of trustees are looking for the donation of same. Please contact Dot Parmenter (383-9277) or Hubert Vanderlugt (383-6030).

A youth group meeting for ninth to 11th graders will be held every Thursday night from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

High school seniors are set to go on a ski trip to Waterville Valley, New Hampshire the weekend of March 11 - 13. Call Susi or Ralph Coley (383-6160) for details.

Thank you notes have come in from both Rosie's Place and Pine Street Inn (Boston centers for the homeless), expressing the deep gratitude for our donations collected during the Christmas season. Over $800 was sent to each mission.

Experience a Marriage Encounter Weekend. March 18 - 20, 1988. For more information, contact David and Ann Smith, 545-5982; 10 Eisenhower Lane, Scituate MA 02066.

THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88P0280E1

Estate of MERCIE V. NICHOLS late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK.

NOTICE

TO THE MASSACHUSETTS ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that BOSTON SAFE DEPOSIT AND TRUST COMPANY of BOSTON in the County of SUFFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on March 23, 1988.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the ninth day of February, one thousand nine hundred and eightyeight.

Operators receive license

Six reactor operators and two senior reactor operators at the Pilgrim nuclear power plant received their licenses from the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission last week.

The eight new operating personnel bring to 22 the number of licensed reactor operators and to 26 the number of senior reactor operators at the station.

As a condition of their licenses, the new operators must complete five major control manipulations in the control room after Pilgrim restarts and they must spend one month on watch under supervision while the plant is operating at more than 20 percent power.

The NRC operator licensing examinations taken in December 1987, lasted three days and consisted of a six-hour written section followed by six hours of oral and performance examinations in the plant and in the control room simulator at the

Dwindling numbers may force combined sports

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Faced with the possible elimination of some high school sports teams next year, Cohasset may have to join forces with longtime rivals.

School committee member Christopher Ford noted the high school hockey team which is losing players next year, may have to look to Hull for help. "We're getting together with them about sewers, why not hockey?" he inquired at the committee meeting Monday night.

Although the audience laughed, there was a measure of seriousness in the discussion.

Athletic Director Clark Chatterton explained to the committee that varsity sports, such as hockey and cross country, are in danger of being eliminated because of declining enrollment. Another problem looms because of opposition from large regional schools in the South Shore League, forcing Cohasset to assume the role of David fighting Goliath.

The discussion was brought up as Chatterton presented his proposed athletic budget for next year. He explained that a total of 509 students, some of whom participate in more than one sport, are involved in high school athletic programs.

But there were only 19 students involved in the hockey program this season, he said. "I see serious problems for the future," Chatterton added. Four senior hockey players were awarded scholarships this year to colleges, and according to the athletic director there are three sophomore and junior players who look promising for next year's squad.

Another problem, he said, is the addition of larger schools into the South Shore League, including Randolph, Dennis-Yarmouth and Carver.

Second committee repeats efforts to improve town's playing fields

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

The Cohasset High School track team may be able to hold its track meets on home territory once again if the newly-formed Milliken-Lillard Field Study Committee is able to carry out its plans.

According to committee member Joseph Connolly, the high school has not been able to hold a home track meet since last spring.

In a Tuesday night telephone interview with the Mariner, CHS Athletic Director Clark Chatterton said the team had been unable to use the track for home meets because, "When it rains the water sits on the track and part of the playing field."

He said the school had to re-schedule all meets last year to away games and that the football, baseball and softball teams could only practice at Lillard Field and, if it was dry, they would play at Milliken.

"We have the most deplorable field conditions of any school in the state, and I've been to most of them," said Chatterton. "Any improvement would be beneficial."

Some committee members felt the school committee should spend some of its money to upgrade its own fields.

Wayne Sawchuck, who was elected chairman of the committee, said both Lillard and Deer Hill fields are in a state of disrepair. He said Lillard is sunken in the middle and needs to be re-crowned and Deer Hill is worse.

"There has been no maintenance or upkeep," Sawchuck said.

Committee member Donald Staszko said the school committee receives the lion's share of the tax dollars and there is no reason why Cohasset's youth should suffer.

Proposals discussed by the committee may allievate many of these problems.

Sawchuck suggested the board concentrate on immediate short term improvements in case a more substantial project was approved by selectmen. He cautioned the board not to "move to fast" because of the cost factor.

He suggested the board reserve space for an article to be placed in the town warrant, with a dollar amount to be determined later.

The board voted to ask selectmen to be placed on their Feb. 22 agenda to ask for reservation of the article.

The committee also discussed ways to expand the existing Milliken Field and to utilize it to its maximum.

Peter Laugelle, tree and park superintendent, told the committee there was land in back of Milliken Field which, although town land, belonged to the Water Department. If the use of this land could be obtained, Milliken Field could provide an excellent track, two football-soccer fields, both a baseball and softball diamond and a tennis court, all with proper drainage.

"We must maximize town land," said Sawchuck. "The town needs more fields."

The proposal will be asked for a period of two to three years because the Capital Outlay Committee requests that everything be done in phases, "a little at a time."

Committee looks for interim solution to waste woes

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner Staff

How to save space at the Cedar St. Landfill was the subject of lengthy discussion at the Feb. 22 selectmen's meeting.

Disposal Area Study Committee member Jeff Power told the committee that he had talked with SEMASS representative Jackie Warren and was told the facility could not start accepting Cohasset's solid waste before January 1991 or even 1992.

He said this posed the problem of what to do with the waste over the next two or three years.

He said the landfill is rapidly reaching its maximum and asked asked if anyone actually knew how long its life was projected to be.

Board members said they had heard anywhere from two years to eight years, but no one knows for sure.

Dr. Joseph Godizk, health agent, has stated that, although the inflow has increased, the landfill still has three-to-five years left.

Power said he was not only concerned about the two-to-three year wait for the SEMASS expansion, but that space be left for untransferrable waste like matresses and chairs with springs.

Another concern which was expressed was that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering - (DEQE) might close the facility. Some board members were of the opinion that "We might as well fill it while we can if it's going to be shut down."

Power said that although the transfer station could be ready to go on line by fall, SEMASS would be two-to three years.

"Do we want to sacrifice 20 or 30 years of landfill life for the sake of two years?" he asked.

Power proposed an interim agreement with Penobscot Recovery , a Maine plant which shreds and burns trash and uses the steam for electricity.

"This is sort of an insurance policy," he said.

He said the three most important things which must

Former supervisor to sue officials

The former supervisor of the Cohasset wastewater treatment plant has charged that sewer commissioners wrongfully fired him in 1987.

A notice was sent last week by Atty. Frank McGee, representing former supervisor Manuel Salvador, informing the commissioners of Salvador's intent to sue for $2.5 million in damages.

Named in the lawsuit were commissioners Charles DeSantis, Gary Vanderweil, Ted Guild and secretary Patricia A. Walsh.

Salvador, a state-certified supervisor of the sewer treatment plant for 16 years, was suspended by the commissioners in December, 1986. At that time, the commissioners said Salvador left the plant unsupervised during his annual December vacation, and refused to return despite requests made by the commissioners.

Immediately following his suspension, Salvador suffered a heart attack. He remained on suspension with full pay for several weeks. The commission voted in January, 1987 to hire a full-time private consulting firm to manage the wastewater plant, and eliminated the position of plant supervisor. A public hearing on the suspension has never been held.

In the February, 1988 letter to the sewer commissioners, Atty. McGee stated that Salvador intends to commence litigation to recover money damages in the amount of $2.5 million "arising out of what Mr. Salvador believes to be his unlawful discharge from employment."

Atty. McGee was not available for comment this week. The sewer commission has been represented in this matter by labor counsel Robert Garrett.

Cohasset's week . . .

Sewer pact near goal

The Cohasset-Hull Intermunicipal Sewer agreement appears to be flowing smoothly towards its ultimate goal of providing the two towns with a modern, up-to-date sewerage facillity.

Dr. Joseph Godzik, Cohasset health agent said the Board of Health voted, at a joint meeting of the board and Sewer Commission Feb. 17, to accept sludge from the Hull sewerage treatment plant, to the Cohasset landfill, contingent on the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering's (DEQE) approval and Hull's agreement to a dumping schedule and an operational plan to be established by the CBH.

"Part of the operational plan would involve testing the sludge to make sure it was acceptable for landfilling," Godzik said.

Rather than a fee structure, the two boards discussed Hull taking more septage from Cohasset in return for the sludge dumping.

Godzik said Cohasset can presently deposit between 1,000 to 2,000 gallons of septage per day into the Hull system, but that figure might increase with the sludge agreement.

He said one figure which was "tossed around" was 8,000 gallons per day, in the future if the sludge is accepted, but added that no concrete figure had been confirmed.

He said another reason the figure might increase was if DEQE refused Cohasset's proposal of accepting the sludge as landfilling.

"Something else might be worked out," Godzik said.

He said Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis, said that Hingham was also trying to get rid of some of its septage into the Hull system.

Godzik said the whole concept was contingent upon the intermunicipal agreement and review and approval by the Board of Health.

Committee candidate

Frederick R. Koed of 92 Pleasant Street, is a candidate for the open seat Norfolk & Plymouth Senate District on the Massachusetts Democratic State Committee at the Democratic Presidential Primary Tuesday, March 8.

Koed currently serves on Cohasset's Democratic Town Committee and has recently been appointed by Governor Dukakis to the Town's Housing Authority.

Koed believes that the Norfolk & Plymouth Senate District, comprised of the coastal towns from Weymouth to Duxbury is unique and deserves districtwide representation.

He is married to Lisa Herstad, formerly of Hingham. They have two children.

No test surprises

The results of this year's state standardized Basic Skills testing were no surprise to Cohasset school administrators.

Supt. Stephen Hart told the school committee Monday night the result of the tests given in grades 3, 6 and 9 "were pretty much in the range of what we expected."

In all categories in all three grades, Cohasset students earned higher test scores than the state average.

"I think the students did well - just what you'd expect them to," Supt. Hart stated, explaining, "This is a basic skills test - not a test designed to discriminate groups of students. It is just some measure of basic literacy in our students."

When school committee member Barbara Bliss asked how meaningful the results were, Supt. Hart answered, "not really." Bliss wondered how much the extensive paperwork used for the tests and results cost state taxpayers.

"How many other communities score 99 percent?" she questioned. "This could be a real boondoggle for the testing companies."

Committee member Diana Kornet noted that in a few years, these standardized tests may be eliminated, "but this has been a necessary swing of the pendulum backward. In the 70's we were so oriented to special education programs. Then we went the other way and some of our students may have graduated without basic skills. This is just a swing of the pendulum back."

Committee member Nancy Sandell added, "I hope parents know how to interpret this."

In the third grade, 99 percent of Cohasset students passed the reading test; 99 percent passed the math test; and 93 passed the writing test. That is compared to state averages of 93 percent; 93 percent and 91 percent.

In the sixth grade, 96 percent of Cohasset students passed the reading; 96 percent passed the mathematics; and 98 percent passed the writing test. The state averages were: 86 percent; 91 percent, and 89 percent.

In the ninth grade, 96 percent of the students passed the reading test; 99 percent passed the mathematics, and 99 percent passed the writing test. That is compared to a 84 percent statewide average in reading; 86 percent in mathematics, and 87 percent in writing.

Gjesteby at conference

Martha Gjesteby secretary of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council, recently attended the Washington policy meeting of the National Association of Regional Councils, held Feb. 8 to 10.

Highlights of the meeting included a discussion of election year issues and 1988 politics with speakers Scott Foster, Committee for Economic Development, Washington, D.C.; Peter Hart, Democratic pollster, Washington, D.C. and Lou Cannon, senior White House correspondent for the Washington Post.

There were also general sessions on a national housing policy with Senate and House staff discussing their roles on legislation and policy; Transportation 2020—the future of transportation service on our interstate highway systems, to be completed by 1991; and new solid and hazardous waste policies with Washington EPA administrators.

Gjesteby also is a member of the MAPC legislation policy Committee on Human and Economic Services legislation which met at the conference.

Over 800 policy and staff directors were present from all over the country, making it one of the largest conferences.

The annual meeting will be held in Hartford, May 21 to 24.

Art center sponsors imaginative workshops

A series of six-hour Saturday workshops have been developed by Penny Redfield, education director for the Center at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

The workshops are designed to let the participants and their imaginations and talents go off in different directions. During the month of March, the Center will offer Silk Painting with Joan Hausrath March 12; Life Mask Making with Syma March 19, and Drawing on Dreams with Roy Pardi March 26. All workshops will meet from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and require advanced registration.

Experimenting with new art forms gives one a chance to discover that art can be created in many different ways. Each of the Saturday workshops will give participants an intense six-hours of training in a specific area.

Hausrath's silk painting course will experiment with several processes that produce beautiful color and pattern effects on silk which can then be used for garments or decorative panels. The techniques include shimmery washes, bold and/or subtle resists and spontaneous brushwork. During the course of the workshop participants will complete the painting of a silk scarf.

Using plaster gauze bandages, participants in Syma's Life Mask Making will create masks on each other. After drying the masks, they may be decorated with color, feathers, glitter and personal treasures. Syma will incorporate into the workshop a slide show depicting the history of masks and mask making. Syma's extensive work with clay in relationship to other mediums, brick and pottery has brought her local and regional recognition among sculptors.

Roy Pardi's Drawing on Dreams will concentrate on developing methods and approaches for extracting dream content as a source for the visual arts. The emphasis of this workshop is working with dream content through drawing, in concert with a series of exercises that serve to intensify dream material. In preparation for this workshop, participants should select a dream and make a one-page written account and sketches of the significant imagery. He asks his participants to bring to class this account along with a large drawing pad, drawing materials and a blanket.

The Saturday workshops have been created to stimulate the participants imagination and to experiment with new art forms. Additional workshops are planned for April and June.

For registration and further information please call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council for the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Sunday-at-the-Center begins March 13

The South Shore Art Center will continue its popular Sunday-at-the-Center series during the month of March. Joyce Cohen, a partner with Aptekar Arts Management, will address "Developing a Collector's Eye for Works of Emerging Artists" March 6 at the center, 119 Ripley Road.

Artist Annie Silverman will present a lecture-demonstration of papermaking March 13; and March 20, Brookline psychotherapist Alan Cohen will delve into the 'Dilemmas for the Artist."

The Sunday lectures are from 3-5 p.m. followed by an informal reception at the center. Advanced registration is required for the series and for each individual program.

This series has been developed through grants awarded to the Center by the Joseph Drown Foundation, the Harold Brooks Foundation and the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council as administered by Duxbury, Braintree and Weymouth Councils.

Joyce Cohen will work with participants on the processes inherent in developing a "collector's eye" for the works of promising contemporary artists.

Using a slide survey depicting the history of papermaking, Annie Silverman will trace the processes of making paper. She will include a demonstration of the actual sheet forming techniques for papermaking and use slides to show the actual workings of contemporary papermills.

Drawing on his experience as a psychotherapist and artist consultant, Alan Cohen will explore for his audience various psychological dilemmas and decision points faced by makers of art, which can impact on the transition from private to public view. He will discuss the usefulness of clarifying one's priorities as an artist, as a means to preparing for the tasks of promoting work for exhibit and/or sales. Cohen has taken his work as a clinical psychotherapist and as an artist to develop a program of professional support and technical information for artists who wish to expand their public audience.

Each of the Sunday-at-the-Center programs has been designed to delve into current specific issues or art forms facing artists and art appreciators of today. The ideas discussed will intrique the mind to explore the issues further in an attempt to find answer to some unresolved questions whether it be in collecting art for one's own private collection or for the artist in taking his or her work out to the public or for developing a deeper appreciation for different art forms.

For further information regarding this series or to register please call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The programs of the Center are funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Decrease in players may force alternatives

One solution may be to field only a junior varsity hockey team next year against some of the "major-major schools" he said.

Although opponents laugh at the size of Cohasset's student population, for the last few years Cohasset has had the most successful sports teams in the state.

Another solution to Cohasset's dilemma may be to combine with another small school, although that would be a difficult task, he added. "Towns such as Avon and Holbrook are considering combining both academically and athletically into a district," he explained. "It's very hard, but I can see a lot of programs with Hull and Cohasset together. It's difficult though, because each town is set in its way."

School committee Chairman Joseph Nedrow noted, "but given the choice between none or combine . . . "

Looking toward the future, Chatterton said it may make sense to combine athletic teams with another small school system. "We just can't get together with Hull. It's a long, involved process."

Supt. Stephen Hart reiterated Chatterton's fears, noting that firm guidelines would have to be established prior to any regional program. "we need to think about the practical aspects," he said. "What happens to the Cohasset student when there are three Hull students on a team and they are starting against only two Cohasset kids. There needs to be guidelines."

He also explained that the problem exists in cross country as well as in hockey. By combining schools, Cohasset will be able to continue to offer a diversified number of programs for all students.

Chatterton stated, "I would like to see hockey continue. If we don't have the numbers next year, we'll drop to a junior varsity program. I never want to eliminate it." By dropping to the junior varsity level, the program will require less ice time and coaching staff, he said.

Next year, Chatterton predicted, there will be 13 players. "We've already skated two or three junior varsity games this year," he stated, adding that seniors are allowed to play the junior varsity level.

At its Monday night meeting, the school committee completed its review of the proposed 1988-1989 school budget.

The public hearing on the entire proposed budget will be held at 8 p.m. March 21 at the high school.

The committee concluded its preliminary review with a discussion of the proposed $2,609,952 high school budget. Most of the departments within the school are level-funded next year, with the exception of teacher and personnel step raise increases.

One of the largest increases in the proposed high school budget is the maintenance account, which jumped by about $8,000 because of necessary boiler repairs at the school. More than $18,000 has been spent from this year's budget on a boiler that leaked oil.

Various department heads from the school's Living Arts program talked to the committee about their proposed budgets for next year.

The prolific use of computers in the classroom was discussed by a number of teachers, including Colleen Foley, head of the instrumental music program. Students in the electronic music class and many others, she said, are welcome to compose music and harmonies on the computers. Foley requested $1,000 in the capital outlay account to purchase a computer for this purpose.

Throughout the budget discussion Monday night, teachers were asked by members of the advisory committee subcommittee about the enrollment figures in the classes.

Art teacher Colleen Lucas explained there are many more students requesting photography than the school is able to accomodate. About 150 students take the nine available art courses at the school, she said. Principal Mary Ellen Gallagher estimated that more than 170 students participate in the various music classes.

And, as Supt. Hart explained, all the "Living Arts" teachers are "very flexible" in arranging their schedules to meet students' needs.

The business education budget is level-funded next year. The largest expenditure is a $1,200 request for a security system for the school's computer room. School committee chairman Nedrow asked the administration to discuss the matter with the Cohasset police department, adding, "we may be able to bypass this. I perceive it as part of their job."

The industrial arts department budget was reduced, according to Principal Gallagher, including a request for a $6,700 surface planer. The only increases in the budget, she said, were caused by a hike in the price of building materials. In order to further reduce the budget, students building more expensive items are required to purchase the materials themselves.

There are 16 students in each of the 16 sections of industrial arts at the junior high, and two sections in the upper grades.

There is a slight increase in the home economics department, according to department chairman Joan Wool. There is a need to repair a portion of the school's original kitchen areas. Eighty-eight students participate in the four periods of home economics, with a total of 160 each year. Patricia Wunschel instructs an additional 60 students in the program.

Computers are being used by students in that department to document nutritional information, according to Wool.

And William Kite, chairman of the English department, presented a budget of $291,238 for next year. That is a decrease from this year's appropriation, although he is requesting two additional computers for the department. Students are using various word processing programs on the computer, and printing a variety of items, including the school newspaper and for creative writing purposes.

Sam Erbe, chairman of the science department, regretfully acknowledged the reduction in the number of labs which accompany the physics classes. "I don't see a solution to the problem," he told the committee. "There's a scheduling problem, but unless we lengthen the school day, we can't get in the same materials, or in the same depth. It's a very serious situation. We are dealing with 43 to 46 minutes. We have 26 in a class, and it's so difficult when we have a lab."

Erbe said he selects the experiments for the laboratory work, and supplements them with classwork. He has requested a special overhead screen so all the students can watch the experiments he is reviewing while working on a computer in the front of the classroom.

Supt. Hart noted that lab work still accompanies the general science classes. And, he noted, the physics, chemistry and biology labs will be renovated and enlarged so there will be more space.

be done were to keep space at the landfill for unacceptable waste, keep space for dumping during SEMASS downtimes and if SEMASS doesn't expand, we would have about six years to find alternatives.

However, board members pointed out that a DEQE representative had stated the permit states that SEMASS must take our waste, but added if they were down what recourse did they have.

Board of Health member Sharon Becker said she was not sure if the town should rush into an agreement with Maine.

She said the landfill had much larger problems one being the leachate problem whereby dump runoff is seeping into surrounding water.

Becker said however, the problem would be well on its way to being solved at next Monday's health board meeting. She said the board would be deciding on which of the three accepted design consultants would recieve the contract to study and resolve the problem.

She said that recycling maybe the answer to saving space. Becker reminded the board there were articles in the town warrant asking for mandatory recycling and equiptment which would save space by compacting and chopping up waste and other material.

Power told the board that the Maine plant spokesman said they must have an answer by the end of February.

Board members suggested a meeting be scheduled for Feb. 25 with the health board, advisory committee, DASC and selectmen to discuss the possibility of the interim agreement with the Maine facility.

Selectman Clifford Mittman asked Power, "If we say we supported it, but had to go to town meeting wouldn't that satisfy them?"

Power thought it would.

The board agreed to have Town Counsel Richard Henderson look at the Penobscot contract.

said Sawchuck. Nearly $500,000 will be requested to be used over a period of two to three years.

Committee members felt that by doing a lot of the preliminary work; cutting trees, brush, clearing and filling themselves, with the help of the Tree and Park Department, they can save money.

Members of the Milliken-Lillard Field Study Committee are: Herbert Crehen, Stephen Endris, C. Christopher Ford, J. Russell Reidy, Donald Staszko, Connolly and Sawchuck.

Ex-officio members are: Laugelle, James Gallagher, selectmen liaison and John Worley, recreation director.

The next meeting of the Milliken-Lillard Field Study Committee will be Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m. in the conference room at the new Stop and Shop on Route 3A

Glastonbury auction

The fifth Annual Auction to benefit Glastonbury Abbey will be held Saturday, March 26, at the Hingham Armory.

The sale will feature a variety of furniture, antiques, brick a brac, gourmet dining items.

The doors open for the afternoon auction and preview at 1 p.m. with the auctioneer raising his gavel for the evening auction at 7 p.m.

Catalogs are available at no charge by calling 749-2155. Refreshments and snacks will be available throughout the day. Admission is free.

Boating course

Men, women and children, 12 and over, are invited to attend the 11-lesson United States Power Squadron Boating Course to be conducted by Old Colony Power Squadron.

Old Colony is now in its 38th year of teaching this course. Various lecturers are used so that each section of the course will benefit from the efforts of an instructor particularly well versed in his assigned area.

Along with the lectures, individual attention will be available to the students from table proctors who will assist them with chart work and in other areas which benefit from this personal touch. Homework will be assigned weekly and reviewed at the next lesson.

The course is designed to benefit power boaters and sailors alike.

A certificate of completion will be awarded to all who pass the final examination at the end of the course. Classes will run from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Tuesday evenings, starting Feb. 23 at Rockland High School. Occasions when the school is closed or inclement weather prevails may require an occasional one-week hiatus.

All teaching is done by members of the squadron on a volunteer basis, so no charge is made for instruction. A nominal fee for the materials required (book, plotter, chart) is the only cost of this course.

The members of the Old Colony Power Squadron look forward to greeting you on Feb. 23 and welcoming you aboard. Come see us!!

Adoption meeting

The South Shore Open Door Society, a support group for those in any stages of adoption, or those considering adoption, will present an adoption information evening, Tuesday, March 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Hingham Community Center, Hingham Square.

If you have been thinking about adoption, this is a great opportunity to come and hear a panel of parents and agencies speak on all aspects of domestic and foreign adoption.

If you are already in the process of adoption and have not connected with the South Shore chapter of the O.D.S., here is your chance to meet with others who have adopted.

Refreshments will be served and panelists will gladly answer questions! Contact Lisa Pack-Miller if you need any additional information at 740-1849.

Roadrace applications available

Plans are underway for the twelfth annual Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea.

The event, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, will be held Sunday, March 27 at 1 p.m. Over 800 runners are anticipated for this annual ritual of spring.

Check in will be at the Cohasset Community Center Saturday, March 26 and the day of the race. However, all entrants must pre-register by March 22.

The timing results will be compiled by Spitler Roadrace Results. There will be medals and prizes for the ten classes as well as other prizes and refreshments for entrants. Each official entrant will receive a tee shirt with the race logo.

The race is sanctioned by the NEAC as a 10K roadrace, and travels along the seaside roads of the town. The registration fee is $7, and all proceeds go to the many local charitable causes of the Cohasset Rotary Club. The race is under the direction of Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons.

Applications are available by writing P.O. Box 36, Cohasset, 02025, and at many local merchants including Cohasset Liquors, Good Sports, and Harbor Liquors.

Selectmen review articles

Selectmen reviewed a number of articles for the annual town meeting.

The first article which brought questions from the board was whether requiring the installation of sprinkler systems in lodging boarding houses was appropriate.

Brock said the state passed the bill in 1986 with local options. The article was accepted.

Article 34, to install sprinkler systems in all new residential homes, elicited heated comments from the board.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle questioned the validity of the article because a similar one was passed in 1986, then found to be unconstitutional by the State Attorney General's Office (AG).

Brock assured the chair that this one would pose no problem as he had already checked with the AG's office.

Laugelle was concerned about the cost of such a system.

Brock said it would only add about $2,000 to the construction cost.

Selectman James Gallagher said he was afraid that with children in the home, the system might be set off accidently causing damage to the home, and thought smoke detectors to be more applicable.

Brock disagreed.

"Fifty percent of all people who die in fires are infants, small children and the elderly," he said, "and smoke detectors wouldn't help them."

The article will be on the warrant.

Article 35 deals with firemen safety.

Brock is asking for $40,000 to refurbish the 100 foot aerial ladder which is presently unsafe due to rust and structural unsoundness. The funds will also provide for upgrading other equipment such as Scott Airpacks and other fire safety equipment.

Article 36, to raise $15,000 for Cohasset's share of purchasing a new ambulance to replace the present five-town ambulance, brought nothing but praise from board members.

Laugelle said the ambulance was the best investment the town had ever made.

Cohasset High School sports . . .

By Mike Spellman

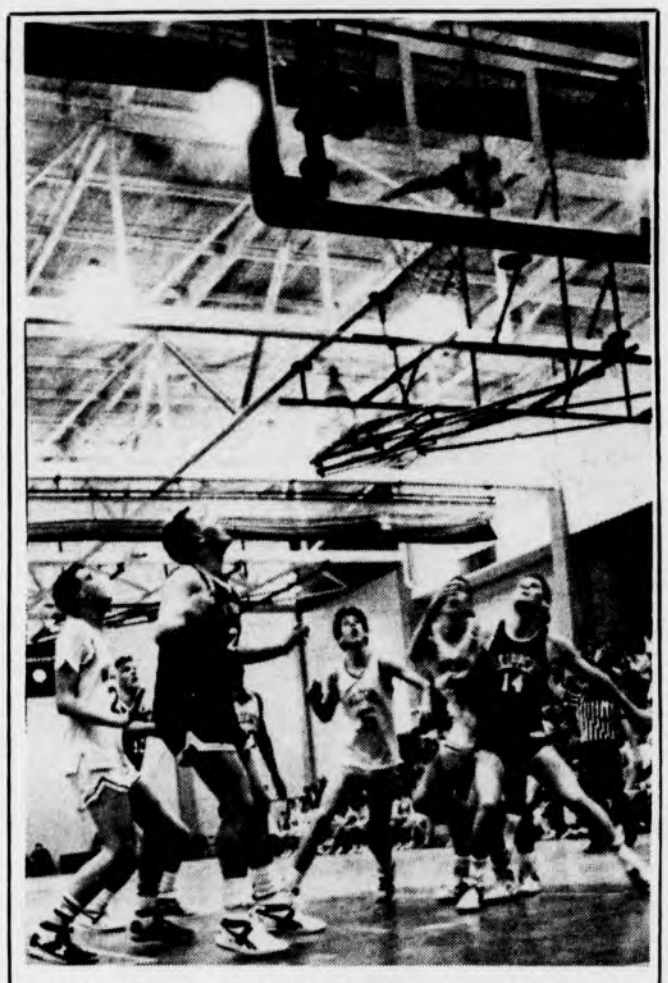
When is post-season play getting underway?

Currently, both the boys and the girls teams are playing their best basketball of the year. The pistons are pumping smoothly in all cylinders, and they're ready to go. Why even domination is becoming tiresome.



Skipper teammates (in the dark uniforms) scramble under the basket against Weymouth South during Massasoit tourney action.

This past week the two Cohasset High teams officially wrapped up their regular seasons; the boys finishing up at 18-2 and the girls at 19-1, each with a pair of solid victories, which added to their already extensive list of season's honors the championships in the Hall of Fame Classic, held annually at Massasoit Community College in Brockton.

Needless to say, Ed Minelli and Bill Fallon are anxiously awaiting the opportunity to capitalize on the steam their teams have built. Unfortunately, the opportunity is not yet set for them. Consequently, the two Cohasset basketball coaches could have their work cut out for them in trying to keep their hungry dogs at bay, because the play-offs are still at least a week away.

BOYS

For the boys this week there was not only the chance to pad their record and potentially boost their seeding, but also an opportunity to avenge last season's disappointing loss to Weymouth South in the Classic's Championship match last Thursday.

The previous evening South had qualified for the rematch with a hardy 73-48 drubbing of Whitman-Hanson, while Cohasset, behind solid efforts from seniors Bryan Edwards (30-points, including four 3-pointers) and Mike Smith (24-points), advanced with a reasonable hard-fought 68-58 victory over Hingham, of the Old Colony League.

The Division One Harbormen (7-11) kept the interest level up for the majority of the contest, surprising the top-rated Division Three Skippers by remaining consistently within striking distance for most of three quarters. However, to start the fourth, Edwards took it upon himself to shut the door on Hingham's upset hopes. In a span of 20 seconds, he doubled his team's five point lead with an impressive tomahawk dunk and a 21-foot bomb from bonus territory.

And then, as most are no doubt aware, in the payback game, Minelli's troups accomplished their primary objective in style, as they absolutely whalloped the Wildcats, 75-48.

GIRLS

And, while the boys were paying back a debt, the girls were working on defending their Hall of Fame crown.

Wednesday, the Skippers moved past Division One Plymouth-Carver in a game that would best be described as odd. For three quarters the Cohasset team truly appeared to have the Blue Eagles' number, as they had next to no trouble keeping them at arm's length, and after a quick 4-0 spurt to kick off the final quarter, stretching the lead to 31-17, the matter seemed closed. However, from this point on the Skippers completely iced over, while P-C, in the last seven minutes, managed to come just one-point shy of equalling their offensive output of the first three quarters plus.

With just 1:26 remaining to be played the game's high-scorer, Stacey Ivan (20-points), netted her 13th and 14th points of the fourth on a 10-foot turnaround bank shot to cap off a 14-1 run, bringing the tally to 32-31, Skippers. Fortunately, though, the spell was broken in time, and some clutch free-throw shooting by Marge Murphy and Debbie Hartley turned out to be enough to preserve victory, 36-33.

And then, the following evening, in the title defense, the Skippers virtually confirmed a genuine penchant for cruelty on their part to an opponent, as they teased, tortured, and tormented league rivals Whitman-Hanson on their way to not only beating them, 55-43, but also bumping them from post-season qualification.

Cohasset took control early in the game, as they generally manage to do, jumping out to a quick advantage, which they held through the first two breaks, 14-5 and 28-20, respectively.

However, in the second half the Panthers, who naturally felt they had far more at stake than their opponents, clawed their way back, and, on a 3-pointer by guard Robin Hennelly early in the third, the margin was narrowed to one, 28-27. Fortunately, though, this was as close as the Skippers would permit it to get.

It was the play of the Tourney's M.V.P., Liz O'Leary (16-points and nine steals), and Cindy Spooner (12-points and 19 rebounds) which enabled Cohasset to build the lead back up to 10, 39-29, heading into the final eight minute period, in which the Panthers managed one final run just to have their collective hearts broken once more.

Bryan Edwards Watch: Bryan is now, after a combined output of 68-points this week, a mere 116 short of Catholic Memorial legend Tim Perry's state scoring record of 2, 481-points, as he and the rest of the Skippers prepare to head into post-season play. Needless to say, his chances of reaching the mark increase, from this point forward, with each step the team takes a closer to the state title. The maximum number of games left now are seven.

Cohasset High School Sports...

up their solid '87-'88 campaign this week with a strong fifth place overall showing, in a field of 16 teams, in the Eastern Mass. Tourney's Division Two South Sectionals, which was held at Middleboro High School on Friday and Saturday.

The top individual point getter for the Skippers was Doug Bennet, who took the number one spot in the 125-lb. category by winning a 6-4 decision over Foxboro's Dan Kelloway, which means that he alone, being the team's only top honors man, will represent Cohasset at the Eastern Mass. Finals over the weekend.

However, it was solid second place finishes from Peter Buckley, who was knocked off in the 135-lb. class' final on a 6-0 decision awarded to Middleboro's Darren Mann, and Glen Froio (152-lbs.), who was pinned by Whitman-Hanson's Dale Smith, the Tourney's "Outstanding Wrestler," as well as a couple of other top five placings, that helped Cohasset to tie up the fifth place spot.

Team results

Whitman-Hanson 192.5; Rockland 190; Foxboro 163.5; Dedham 158.5; Cohasset 155; Middleboro 144; Milton 79.5; Duxbury 78; Stoughton 44; Walpole 42.5; Norwell 38; North Attleboro 37; Scituate 29; Sharon 27; Holbrook 17; Hull 16.

103: Bob O'Connell (Ded) d. Ted McAuliffe (Fox), 7-0. 112: Sean Kimball (Rock) d. Jon Bergquist (Fox), 12-6. 119: Paul Scancella (Ded) d. Greg Psaros (Rock), pin; 125: Doug Bennett (Coh) d. Dan Kelloway (Fox), 6-4; 130: Greg Lennon (Midd) d. Matt Wassel (Walp), pin. 135: Darren Mann (Midd) d. Peter Buckley (Coh), 6-0; 140: LChuck Hasenfus (Ded) d. Nathan Patenaude (Dux), 9-3; 145: Kevin Broderick (WH) d. Mike Cochcrane, tech. fall; 152: Dale Smith (WH) d. Glen Froio (Coh), pin; 160: Tim O'Connor (Rock) d. Keith Meyer (NA), 10-3; 171: Scott Peavey (Fox) d. Sigmund Cranmore (Milt), 9-0 (OT); 189: Chris Hoffman (WH) d. Bill Coonihan (Ded), pin; Hvywt.: Lee Burrill (Fox) d. Kevin Boyle (Rock), 11-7.

UPCOMING EVENT

The state individual gymnastics championship, in which Hanover's Dayna Curran tops the favorites board, will be held on Saturday night, 7:00, in Algonquin.

The Division Two Eastern Mass. Wrestling Tournament begins Friday afternoon in Wayland, at 3 p.m., and continues all day Saturday. The only Cohasset representative being Doug Bennet in the 125-lb. weight group.

Eastern Mass. Tourney Hockey and Basketball seedings and matchings are expected to be released this Sunday. The announcements will be run in the Boston Globe.

Matt Maloney (dark uniform) kept a close watch over his opponent during last week's tourney at Massasoit.

□ David and Daniel Kierce of Cohasset, have been named to the dean's list at Nichols College for the fall semester.

Both made the list with Dean's Honors.

David Kierce, a junior majoring in marketing, and Daniel Kierce, a freshman majoring in accounting at Nichols, are graduates of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School and the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kierce of 189 S. Main St., Cohasset.

□ Eric Maki, the son of Bob and Clare Maki, who is a Freshman at Brown University has recently informed us that his acceptance essay to Brown was selected as one of the 100 best essays in the country by the Harvard Independent, Cambridge, MA.

His essay will be published in the Harvard Independent's "Best of College Essays" and is expected to appear in bookstores across the country in the summer.

□ Fred and Sally Wood have moved to Sarasota Florida, and are missed by all. They sure had good news recently, though! Their son, Capt. Mark H. Wood and his wife recently became parents of a baby girl! On January 7th, Sarah Angeline Wood was born in Ventura California where the Woods are making their home (they resided in Cape Canavaral previously). And, if you think the Woods are a happy lot, what about Connie and Larry Parker? Sarah Angeline Wood makes the fourth great-grandchild for their family! Congratulations to all of you.

□ Liz Muncey, Laura Redick and Michelle Migliaccio all had a wonderful February vacation skiing in Stowe, Vermont. Be sure to ask them all about it when you see them.

□ Speaking of skiing over Feb. vacation, Earle Bestick Jr. recently out did himself! Earle attended ski camp at Blue Hills and came home with a gold medal and a trophy at the week's end. He came in first in the slalom in his class, and won the trophy for high overall. Earle was also awarded a season pass for next year. Sure looks like a potential candidate for the CHS Ski Team, go get em Earle!

Jessica (l) and Rebecca Jenkins of Cohasset greet Coco the monkey and organ grinder Tony Lepo at the Charles Hotel to celebrate the 50th birthday of Curious George.

□ Theodore and Judith Ingemanson are busy folks these days, they had a baby daughter on January 31st, born at Goddard Memorial Hospital.

□ Mary Jeannette and Phil Murray have returned from their vacation in Florida, and sure had a wonderful time. One of the fun things that they did was go out to lunch, they were part of a group of 22, all from Cohasset!! Fred and Eleanor Grassie, Anne and Ernie Jacobson, Neil O'Brien, Pauline Keating, Gerard and Margaret Keating, Nancy and Tom Anderson, Ann and John Sadler, Mary and Joe Conroy, Marie and Joe Dolan, Audrey and John Devin, Marge and AJ Antoine and Phil and Mary Jeannette. . .will the Country Club at Marco Island ever be the same? The town of Cohasset certainly left its mark at that table! You'll also be happy to know that even though they are on vacation, Marie Dolan and Nancy Anderson are still taking their daily walks! And, inkeeping with her routine, Mary Jeannette still did her daily paperwork! Some things never seem to change.

□ Red Sox beware, Leo Fiori is on his way to Spring Training in early March. If things don't look up to snuff to Leo, he just might volunteer to coach or pitch or something. Actually, he might be a good choice for either job, what do you say Leo?

□ Here's hoping that our Ash tree can be saved! The tree is on Elm Street, and its root system is raising havoc with the walkway, stairs, and patio pavers. It is a beautiful tree, and they are trying to get a committee together to see if it can be saved. Knowing our tree and park superintendent, Peter Laugelle, he'll do everything that he can to save it.

□ From all reports, Helen Livingston is progressing nicely after her heart attack. If you would like to send her a card her address is Sarasota Memorial Hospital, Sarasota, Florida, 33581. We're sure she'd love to know that you are thinking of her.

□ The question "Around Town" is, "what will it be like without Fran Mitchell ready to help when it comes to our cars"? He really is an institution in Cohasset, it won't be the same when he isn't there with his ready grin to serve us all. He sure owes himself time off though, so we wish you well Fran.

□ Hats off to Richard Straley and Ozzie Ingram, the co-winners of the Forrest E. King Award. They are two active men who deserved to be recogninzed for their diligence.

□ Congratulations to Mary Beth McNamara, who has been named a finalist in the National Merit Scholarship Program. She is representing 1/2 of 1 percent of American High Schools who are selected as finalists! We are proud of her, as are her parents Mr. and Mrs. John McNamara of 45 Fairoaks Lane.

□ Liz O'Leary sure was one happy gal last week, she was awarded the trophy for MVP during the tournament that was held. All of the girls did an outstanding job, and we salute them.

□ Attention all of you artists, your time is here. Be sure that you enter the South Shore Art Center's All New England Juried Exhibit. Deliver your original masterpiece to the center on Feb. 26 or 27 from noon to 4 p.m. There are many categories to chose from, with an $8 entry fee per piece. Call the center at 383-9548 for more information.

Finally, don't forget to call with your news . . .its great reading and lots of fun for everyone to know what you and your family have been up to.

AARP meeting Feb. 25

The regular meeting of the South Shore Hingham Chapter #1139 of the AARP will be held Feb. 25 at 1:30 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A in Hingham.

After the business meeting, line dancing with Helen Colemeco. Refreshments will be served.

Anyone who is a member of the national American Association of Retired Persons is welcome to become a member of the chapter.

MESSAGE FROM THE DIRECTOR:

MARCH has been designated National Nutrition Month — this year's theme will be "Choose good nutrition for today and tomorrow."

Eating healthy foods should be of great concern to all of us! "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." So the saying goes. We've heard this expression hundreds of times; but it is true that what we eat can and does influence how we look and feel.

The United States Department of Agriculture has developed the following Dietary Guidelines for all Americans. Always remember to: (1) Eat a variety of foods. (2) Maintain Desirable Weight. Eat slowly, prepare small portions and avoid seconds. (3) Avoid too much fat, saturated fat, and cholesterol. (4) Eat foods with adequate starch and fiber. (5) Avoid too much sugar. (6) If you drink alcoholic beverages, do so in moderation. Remember, by eating the right foods and following a healthy diet, you can protect yourself from diet related diseases such as heart disease, high blood pressure, stroke, cancer, diabetes and osteoporis.

Please join us on March 31, at 11:30 a.m. at the Senior Center as the Cohasset Council on Aging welcomes Andrea Blumberg, MS RD., from Nutrition Education Services of So. Weymouth.

Blumberg topic of discussion will be Osteoporis: The Bone Thinner — Who gets it? How is it diagnosed? What are the treatments? What should we do for prevention.

The lecture and discussion is open to all women over forty and older and they should bring a light lunch. The dessert and tea will be provided by the Council. Call for more information at 383-9112.

TRIP TO BRAINTREE PLAZA

Council on Aging trip to the Braintree Plaza will be held Monday, March 7 at 9:30 a.m. Please call how to make reservations for this trip that is enjoyed by so many.

Editorial

Taking away our vote

There is a second study committee which recently embarked on its mission to seek repairs to the town's athletic fields. This committee, comprised of willing volunteers from the community, is trying to find the least expensive way to update and improve the horrible playing fields used by the schools and recreation departments of this town.

It will not be an easy task, as their predecessors on the Milliken Field Study Committee can attest. After more than a year of reviewing, talking to engineers and architects and making proposals before town meeting, the final option to construct the field was defeated by voters. The members, weary from their long hours of work that met with ultimate defeat, resigned from the committee.

Selectmen made appointments to a revised athletic field study committee a few weeks ago. The members include experienced contractors, engineers, a public relations professional, and members from various related town committees. They are eager to begin their task and to see this town construct a quality athletic field - the type of field our neighboring communities have maintained for years.

One need only look to Scituate to view a state-of-the-art football field and track surface. Hingham constructed a million-dollar athletic field complex that includes the highest-quality track, soccer, baseball and football fields. Because that community constructed their fields just a few years ago, the entire project was completed for far less money than it would cost today.

But Cohasset town meeting rejected the proposed renovations to Lillard field, complaining about the high price tag and the amount of unnecessary, superfluous work proposed.

That is the prerogative of town meeting. Voters felt that the renovations were too extensive; the price too expensive.

And now we are back to square one. Actually, after this week, we have been pushed further back than that. Selectmen denied the new committee permission to include an article in the town meeting warrant. The proposed article would request about $20,000 to hire an engineere to survey the town's athletic fields.

Since no one really is sure how much land belongs to the town, and where the athletic field begins and ends, committee members thought it would be prudent to have it professionally surveyed. But selectmen nixed that idea, saying they cannot allow residents to once again spend money on a project that has not even begun.

We understand their reluctance to get the town's tax dollars involved in something that may never be completed, but that is an issue for voters to decide for themselves. We believe the study committee has every right to make their request to town meeting, and to answer any questions voters might ask at that time.

By denying the committee access to the voters, they are stopping any progress hoped to be made on this project. It may be an appropriation that voters will soundingly defeat, but that is for the voters to decide. Perhaps this engineering survey is just what residents want, but selectmen have denied them the right to state their opinion.

Too critical

In a previous editorial of the Cohasset Mariner, we stated that with or without selectmen's assistance, the Curtis Estate Action Committee will continue the fight to preserve that property.

We hailed the citizens' efforts to maintain the property as it was intended by its original owner, George E. Curtis. But we chastized selectmen for their lack of involvement in this worthy project.

We were negligent in our haste to criticize selectmen. For several weeks they have, through the legal efforts of Town Counsel Richard Henderson, attempted to stop the sale of the land until all options had been reviewed. Atty. Henderson has been in close contact with the assistant state attorney general, and has kept selectmen informed of the complex legal proceedings currently before the court.

Although selectmen refused to appoint a Curtis Estate citizens' committee which would function under their jurisdiction, they and their attorney have remained active and aware of the events surrounding the Curtis Estate issue.

U.S. should approve nuclear treaty

Letters

To the Editor:

The recently signed Intermediate Nuclear Forces (INF) Treaty between the United States and the Soviet Union is a cautious but important first step in the global effort to reduce the threat of nuclear war.

The United States, and our Senators in particular, should move quickly to approve the treaty without adding crippling amendments.

While it would reduce the superpowers' nuclear arsenals by only three percent, the INF Treaty represents a significant step toward U.S.-Soviet cooperation and away from the competition and brinkmanship that has characterized the nuclear arms race for the last several years.

In addition, the precedent-setting on-site verification provisions contained in the treaty will help pave the way for an even more important agreement to reduce the superpowers' enormous strategic nuclear arsenals.

At the same time, support for the INF Treaty should be coupled with support for restraints on strategic weapons. Congress must not allow support for the INF Treaty to become a smokescreen behind which the arms race in strategic weapons continues to accelerate.

Without the existing constraints on offensive and defensive strategic weapons, the weapons included in the INF Treaty could be easily replaced by strategic weapons and the treaty's significant step forward replaced by a major step back.

The League of Women Voters urges quick Senate action in support of the INF Treaty.

Towns may appeal court decision

Five South Shore towns and a Hull citizen's group may appeal a federal court decision that excludes them from participating in siting a giant sewage outfall pipe in Massachusetts Bay.

Hull selectman John Silva, chairman of the South Shore Coalition, told fellow representatives of the 10-town organization that Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate and the group Save Our Beaches have grounds to appeal the court decision, but may not have the funds to pay for such action.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority is planning to dig a sewage outfall pipe the size of the Callahan tunnel five to six miles out into Massachusetts Bay from the Deer Island treatment plant.

Return census

Town Clerk Frances Marks reminds all residents to return their completed census forms to her office at the town hall by Thursday, Feb. 25.

If anyone has any questions about the form, please contact Marks at 383-2210. Most of the census forms mailed last month to residents have been completed and returned.

Historical Society celebrates 60th anniversary

By David Wadsworth
Senior Curator, Cohasset Historical Society

The Cohasset Historical Society celebrates its 60th anniversary this year.

Founded in 1928 as a successor to the town's original Committee On Town History (which itself wrote in 1898 the monumental "Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset and in 1909 the "Genealogies of the Families of Cohasset") the new Society stated its guiding principle in its original 1928 By-Laws: "to develop interest in the history of Cohasset and to preserve information, documents, relics and landmarks relating to the history of the town."

Today's Historical Society remains true to those founding guidelines. The early years of the Society saw utilization of the Town Hall and the Public Library for exhibit of its historical collections. That all changed in 1936 when local businessman William H. McGaw gave to the Society an early Cohasset dwelling, the 1810 house on Elm Street built by housewright David Nichols for Cohasset Sea Captain John Wilson.

Known for years as "The Historic House," and today called the Capt. John Wilson House, the old home became the first headquarters of the Society and its first museum. Subjects covered in the collections on display included early agriculture, industry, seafaring and home life. Artifacts, artworks and documents relating to Cohasset's past history continued to be collected, given by townspeople. The town's maritime era provided a fertile ground for historical material generously donated for preservation by descendants of seafaring families.

By the 1950's the Historic House bulged at its seams from increasing numbers of items contained in Society collections. Thus it was that one of the few remaining buildings of Cohasset's early maritime years became the second historical museum in the town. The building was Samuel Bates' late-18th century Ship Chandlery and Counting House, originally located on Border Street, near the Bates family's once extensive mercantile and fishing business.

In the latter 1800's, following the decline of the town's seafaring activities, the old chandlery had been owned by Clarence W. Barron, distinguished resident of Cohasset. It was Barron's granddaughter Mrs. William Cox and her husband who presented the unique old building to the Society. The mid-1950's saw the moving of the chandlery from the harbor's edge to Cohasset Center, to occupy a space adjacent to the Historic House. The chandlery soon became known as the Maritime Museum. Its first floor was to hold the large collection of artifacts, documents and artworks associated with the maritime era. Relics from the long "Age of Sail" abounded in Cohasset, from finely made ship models and carvings to gear and equipment used by 19th century mackerel schooner fleets. The second floor of the Maritime Museum held, as it does today, an extensive collection of general historical nature dating from the town's earlier days. There can be viewed a diversity of unique things, from handmade tools of housewrights and cordwainers to antique school desks, from stone implements of the local Indians to early apothecary's equipment to Civil War relics.

The Society's Capt. Wilson Historic House and Maritime Museum are summer museums, remaining much as they were before the introduction of modern central heating. In more recent years and beginning in the 1960's a diversification of Society interest saw the beginning of still another line of collecting as antique clothing and textiles began to be amassed in earnest. Beginning with a few large donated collections from Cohasset families the gown collection continued to grow through the next decades.

For some years a Gown Museum was maintained by the Society in the old "Independence" building, the former Fire and Police Station at Cohasset Center. Today much of the extensive collection of clothing and textiles represents an era in Cohasset's history now past; the latter 19th and early 20th century years. Many of the items date from the "summer colony" part of the town's history, when Bostonians of wealth and social prominence flocked to the town to partake of its zestful ocean breezes and its delightfully rural setting. Victorian stylishness abounds in the Society's gown collection, representing the finest tastes of both the town's local families and its visiting summer populace.

Today the Society has embarked on an organized project to identify and conserve its collection of textiles with the hope of making them available for study and display in the future.

The fifth decade of the Historical Society's presence saw another expansion of its activities; the purchase of a fine 1821 Georgian home on Summer Street today named for its builder and original occupant, the Caleb Lothrop House. The Lothrop House serves as headquarters and primary work area for the Society. Here one finds the library of local and area history, an extensive archive of old documents and early records, and the administrative office of the organization.

The Lothrop House is the nerve center for Society activities, while being furnished with representative 19th century furniture. Artworks relating to the town's history grace the walls of this early Cohasset shipowner and merchant's home.

Not far away another Society project is beginning; restoration of a mid-19th century "hand tub pumper" fire engine named "Konohassett," once owned by the town's Volunteer Veteran Firemen's Association.

The gown and textile project, the "Konohassett" restoration and another ongoing project to introduce modern museum and collections management procedures are representative of the Historical Society's desire to continue the growth and development begun sixty years ago.

Originally an organization of Cohasset people, the Society seeks to retain its close association with its community; it remains an identifiably Cohasset institution as it continues its primary purpose: to preserve and present the history of this unique New England seacoast town.

The Society currently is continuing its 1988 Membership drive, and will be presenting its annual spring dinner meeting soon. If you would like to become a member of Cohasset's Historical Society and are interested in its ongoing programs, or are interested in becoming a volunteer, please call the Lothrop House at 383-6930.

Boat sales and service facility proposed

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

Three businessmen from Westwood are seeking to start a new firm in Cohasset.

Francis Sullivan, Richard Welch and Edward McDonough appeared before the appeals board Feb. 11 seeking a special permit to change Mitchell's Repair Shop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway into a boat sales and service facility.

Answering the board's concerns that the existing structure would not be altered, Barbara Gard, an environmental engineer with CEES Associates, said there would be no alteration to the outside of the building.

"There are no plans to change the blueprints of the building, only the interior portions," said Gard.

She assured the board that the three large oil tanks, ranging from 4,000 to 6,000 gallons, would be removed under strict supervision and in accordance with state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering regulations.

Gard also reassured the board that the wetlands were flagged and there would be no change to the wetland area. She said the proposed plans were ready for presentation to the Conservation Commission including the plans for landscaping.

McDonough said the landscaping would include a greenbelt in front of the building, a circular drive and some shrubbery.

He told the board he also intended to install a chain link fence in the rear which would act as a buffer to the wetlands area and offer protection to boats which were stored outside and cover the rear lot with stonedust which, "is compatible with the existing wetland."

The board's concerns regarding the repair of engines outside where there was a danger of oil and gasoline leaking into the wetland area was allayed by McDonough.

He said all repairs would be done inside a service bay designated for that purpose.

The board voiced concern that painting the bottoms of boats might prove harmful to the wetlands.

Myrna Putziger, board chairman, said bottom paint is highly toxic and "I wouldn't want to see it done outside near the wetlands."

McDonough explained there would be very little bottom painting done, and if any was done it would be done inside.

He explained the type of boats he proposed to sell were trailer boats and would not be moored permanently at a marina.

"Only those boats which stay continually in the water need bottom paint," said McDonough.

Board member Barbara Powers said the Board of Health also had some concerns. She read a letter from Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent, in which he stated four points which the Board of Health would insist be adhered to.

The points which consisted of "all floor drains must be plugged;" "all repair work to be done inside;" "any waste oil storage be above ground and have adequate secondary containment as determined by the Board of Health;" "hand cleaners shall be used for grease, oil and solvent removal from hands and that no rinsing occur," was readily agreed to by the prospective businessmen.

The only opposition to the proposed business came from Daniel Ladrigan who resides in back of the proposed business.

"I like the idea. I think it's great," he said.

However, Ladrigan said he was against the project until he could devise some plans whereby he could be reassured any development would not contribute to an already serious problem of flooding.

He said his driveway floods to heights which makes it impassable and was concerned the proposed stonedust or other similar fill might cause more flooding.

McDonough reassured the resident the only change to the back of the proposed business was the chain link fence.

Putziger cautioned McDonough to be extremely careful that no water flow be re-directed.

The board took the matter under advisement.

Lots of competition in elections

The races are set, with many officials facing challenges in the April election.

There is opposition in the race for school committee, library trustee, health board, planning board, and sewer commission.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle will have no opposition in his candidacy for a fourth term of office. Assessor Michael Patrolia is the only candidate for a three-year term on that board. And Richard Barrow will have no opposition in his re-election bid for a five-year seat on the recreation commission.

School committee member Barbara W. Bliss will be challenged by John Russell Reidy of Fair Oaks Lane for a three-year term. Bliss has been on the committee for the past three years.

There are four candidates for three seats on the board of trustees for the Paul Pratt Library. The incumbents are Elizabeth F. Eaton and Agnes McCann. The challengers for the three-year position are Sigrid Carey and Katherine Sturtevant.

Michael Sullivan will be challenging Hugh Joseph Morgan for a three-year seat on the board of health. The incumbent, Dr. John Burns, is not seeking re-election to that board.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy will be facing a challenge from J. Stephen Bjorklund for a five-year term on that board.

And James R. Sheerin is the only candidate for a three-year term on the board of water commissioners. Incumbent Lot E. Bates is not seeking re-election.

Sewer commissioner R. Gary Vanderweil Jr. will have opposition from Lot W. Bates for a three-year seat on that board.

Candidates have until Thursday, Feb. 25 to take out nomination papers for the vacant offices. The papers must be returned to the town clerk's office by Feb. 29.

Dramatic Club tryouts

In May the Cohasset Dramatic Club will present, in cooperation with St. Stephen's Parish, a musical comedy review, "Brass Button Avenue."

Tryouts will be held Sunday, March 6 from 2 to 5 p.m. and Monday, March 7 from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in Walton Rogers Hall at St. Stephen's, 16 Highland Ave. Actors, singers and dancers are needed for the production which is scheduled for May 13, 14 and 20, 21.

The title, "Brass Button Avenue" comes from a name given to the Margin Street and Howard Gleason Road section of town. Townsfolk called the area "Actors Row" and also "Brass Button Avenue" because so many actors lived there who were sailing enthusiasts along with a few sea captains.

Cohasset's theatrical past included serving as a base of operations during the summer for the Hanlon brothers; huge production of "Fantasia" and "Superba". Cast and crew would come to Cohasset to build sets and rehearse for the following season's production.

"Brass Button Avenue" will use this historical background simply as a thread to sew together a cohesive production of musical numbers and comedy skits. Production duties will be shared by the Dramatic club and St. Stephen's parish. The director is Denise Ripley; Choreographer, Joel Conrad and musical director, Elizabeth Hodge.

Singers and actors and dancers should come prepared with a skit or song (duet, solo or group effort). There will be an accompanist present.

There will be music and scene material on hand for those who have not prepared anything. The directors will select the numbers and the cast they feel will work in best into the flexible framework. Original material will be welcome.

Financial planning for college

The Guidance Departments in the towns of Cohasset, Hingham, and Scituate, will be co-sponsoring a Financial Planning Seminar for parents of students currently in the elementary grades who will be paying for post secondary education in the 1990s.

The program is scheduled for Wednesday, March 23 at 7:30 p.m., in the Hingham High School Auditorium. All interested parents are encouraged to attend. More details will follow.

Alphabet fun

The children in Marie Price's class are going to have a terrific year developing thinking skills through the alphabet.

Each week the children will bring in objects that begin with the sound of the letter of the week.

They will then explain their object at sharing time.

Recently they worked on letter A. Emily Coyne made an angel out of aluminum foil.

Geralyn Miller made an ant alley by placing real ants and dirt in a baby bottle.

William Faulkner not only showed us an artichoke but gave us a gourmet's method of cooking it. First you heat some butter, pull off the pieces and dip in the butter. Add some salt.

The children whose first names begin with the letter of the week made a glitter letter and wore it proudly all week. Viewed around the Osgood School with their glittering As were: Adam Leahy, Alanna Murphy, Andrew McAuliffe, Andrei Skorupa Aryanna Afshar, and Ashley Kold.

All the children in Mrs. Price's classes brought in their eyes, eye lashes, eye brows, elbows and ears for E Week.

The children used their energy to clean up the environment.

All were watching and marking a level of water as it evaporated. Breaking open an uncooked egg was exciting as the children learned about the yoke and albumen.

Alanna Murphy brought in a paper mache egg plant. She told how to peel, bread and fry it.

The story of the Early Bird Gets the Worn was shared by Erica Dean.

Money from Portugal was shared by Melissa Pyfrom.

Jimmy Figueiredo wore his eyeglases all day.

Aryanna Afshar introduced us to Fifi LaFemme, the exercise dog.

Kara Johansen told Mrs. Price's class that as a former five year old she had lots of fun. Kara wore an F puzzle.

Children had to find the flashing watch, flip it open to find and fix the battery and figure out what you found.

Liam O'Donnell brought his funny furry frog.

G Week—Good Girls and Boys brought in great "G" sounds to Mrs. Price's Kindergarten.

Greetings were brought by Alanna Murphy to our principal Mr. Creamer. Alanna gave him a package of gum. Mr. Creamer had a great grin on his face when he found he took a piece that had a snapping trap on it.

J.B. Nohe let all the children play with his green glob.

William Faulkner and his special friend Curious George had a great day.

Emily Coyne's picture of her great grantmother was looked at by all the children then discussed all the fun they have with their grandparents.

Geralyn Miller wore her glittering G all week.

H Week—a happy time of sounds.

Jessie Zerendow brought in a shiny hook.

Jimmy Figueiredo let all his helping friends play with his huge helicopter.

Robin Cunningham placed a hive in our science tote. We felt like scientists examining it. We found a bee in one honie. We wished that we could have some honey.

A huge hockey helmet was shared by Melissa Pyfrom.

Writing contest results

For the past six weeks, sixth grade students at the Deer Hill School have been participating in a creative writing contest. They have been submitting their writing weekly to be judged by other sixth grade students and graded by a sixth grade English teacher, thereby earning points.

Salute to music

Cohasset High has been invited to participate in the Boston Symphony Orchestra's "Salute to Youth" in celebration of the 150th anniversary of music education in our public schools.

A day of special activities is being organized for Sunday, March 6, in conjunction with "Salute to Symphony Weekend," which is sponsored by Raytheon.

Starting at 1 p.m., renowned cellist Yo-Yo Ma, with conductors John Williams and Harry Ellis Dickson, will give a public performance at Boston's new John B. Hynes Convention Center with the Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra and the New England Conservatory Youth Philharmonic Orchestra.

Music students from schools across the state will be participating in "master classes" held that day by distinguished teachers and musicians who are past and present Symphony members. Those youths mastering brass, string, wind, and percussion instruments are invited to attend. Classes focus on repertoire, performance technique, audition procedures, and interpretation.

To top off the weekend, that evening a live television broadcast appropriately called "Salute to Symphony," highlighted by a BSO performance conducted by Seiji Ozawa, will take place from historic Symphony Hall.

There are 200 complimentary tickets to this event. These may be obtained on a first come, first-serve basis by contacting the Boston Symphony Association of Volunteers at 266-1348.

Art awards

The following Cohasset High School students were honored with gold keys at the 38th annual Boston Globe Scholastic art contest. Corey DeSantis, Kerri Miele and Jacob Powell. Alexandra Redfield won honorable mention at the contest.

The Magic Harp of Therabye

It was he who awoke to the loud barking dog. Bill was his name; old man Bill. He lived at the foot of the forest in an old wooden cabin.

"He's the luckiest man in town," the townspeople would say. For Bill had the most beautiful granddaughter anyone could ever have. Her name was Mary. Mary, who was 16, had long blonde hair like the color of the sun. She also had sparkling blue eyes.

Mary had a wonderful voice. When she sang, all the townspeople would come out of their houses to hear her wonderful voice. Mary was not a perfect girl, Bill thought. She would always go to Bill and say that she heard music, lovely music. Bill would just reply, "It's only your imagination."

One morning Mary came up to Bill and begged and pleaded for Bill to go find the music in the forest. Bill thought that was silly for he did not hear any music. But after awhile of begging and pleading from his granddaughter, Bill's frozen heart melted and he said "Yes, I guess so." And he set off that morning with his so-called guard dog, Bonzy. Bill could tell when he was deep in the forest. All the tall dark trees shadowed this part in the forest so the sun would not dry the grass of morning dew. So there Bill was, getting deeper and deeper, more and more lost in the forest. Just then Bill and his dog came to a beautiful running stream.

Bill's eyes looked across the stream. His eyes widened. There was a lovely golden harp. The beautiful harp was sitting on a patch of bright green grass.

"It's true," Bill thought. "It's really true! My granddaughter really did hear music!" Bill did not hesitate, he jumped over the stream, took the harp, and heaved it onto his back. With his dog following him, Bill tried to get home. The harp was so heavy the old man was bent over, his beard just barely touching the ground.

Bill managed to get home safely. Bonzy, too. When Mary saw the golden harp, she jumped for joy. She ran over to her grandfather and hugged him. Mary pulled an old wooden chair from their tiny table and sat down with the harp (which was bigger than she). And when her fingertips touched the fragile silver harp strings, such a sound of music filled the air of the cabin. Mary was so happy. Mary was special. She could hear the magic harp playing when everybody else couldn't. Only when her hands touched the harp strings people could hear, but when it played by itself, no one but Mary could hear it.

The Harp in the Enchanted Forest

I've always wondered about the tales which storytellers weave. I wonder how the genie got his powers, and I wonder where all of the other magical things come from in the stories. Out of all the stories that I've heard, the one that interested me most was the story of The Harp in the Enchanted Forest. I loved how you had to get past the magical beasts to get to the Harp of Three Wishes. So when my friend Jerry Richards went on a camping trip in the Enchanted Forest and came out a very wealthy man, I became curious. I wanted to know if there really was a harp.

I got my fairly small dog, named Bandid, whose wits made up for his size by far. We set off for the Enchanted Forest. When we entered, we were immediately swallowed up by towering trees and over-grown vegetation. It was like nightfall had come in one fast second because the trees covered the sun. I looked back at the ball of light behind me. I tried to swallow my adam's apple but couldn't. There was no reason to be nervous but I was.

Ohh! Umph! I had fallen in a pit which had been covered over by leaves. I stood up and looked around. Luckily, there was a vine hanging down the side of the pit. I pulled myself out and began to walk again.

Bandit began to whimper as if he was saying, "Why are we here? Why don't we go home?" I, too was beginning to wonder why I was there until Bandit stopped whining. I looked up and saw a beautiful stream, but beyond it something caught my eye. It was the Harp of Three Wishes! So it is true, I thought, it's really true.

I skipped across the stream, with the sun shining through the trees into my eyes. I just stood there, staring, wondering what to do.

Now, here I am, sitting in my first wish, a million dollar house in Hawaii. My second wish was to have one trillion dollars, and my third, that no one would be able to misuse the harp in the future.

The Tree

Once there was a tree,
It was a good old tree
The best tree there ever was.

The tree had a full life,
Then it got cut down.

Now the tree is a stump!
A useful stump for the ant.

Mrs. Ant climbs up the stump
And lays her eggs and waits,
For the spring to come.

The bear lumbers by
And scratches his claws on the bark to sharpen his claws
The weary traveler slowly
Sits down and rests for a while.

The tree had a very full full life.

Happiness of the Harp

James is a young boy who lives in Greenwich, England. His home life is less than perfect. He was originally from Venice, but his parents were killed in a train accident. His real parents owned an instrument tuning shop at the far end of town. In his father's spare time he would teach James how to play instruments. He could play the mandolin, the piano, and his most favorite of all, the harp. He would spend hours in his father's workshop playing instruments his father had tuned. His foster father is a traveling salesman. James thinks he's OK but he's never around. Even when he is, he spends all his time in his office trying to think up ways to present his products. The only things that his mother does are eat, sleep, yell, and smoke.

One afternoon after a fight with his mother, James went out into the vast array of trees when he came to a river. All of a sudden a bright flash caught his eye! There, over on the rocks, a beautiful silver harp! As astounded as he was he approached the wonderful instrument. He softly ran his fingers over the strings. A different but yet melodic sound came from the harp. James sat on a nearby rock pondering the situation how to haul the harp back to his house in safety. Suddenly he came up with an idea. He gathered some small vines and thin logs. With his fingers limber from playing the piano, he intricately wove the vines through the logs. Finally he could put the harp on the platform and drag it back. When he reached home he put the harp in the shed behind some barrels. He set himself down on a crate and said to himself, "Wow, this must be a dream. The only way to see if this is true is to come back tomorrow."

That night was very peaceful; no arguments, or fights, just friendly chat. That morning he ran out to the shed. Sure enough there was the harp, right where he had left it.

"So it's true," he thought, "it's really true."

James turned around and his dad was there in the doorway. His hands were on his hips, his shoulders out broad. He stood there like a sentinel.

"Where did you get that thing?" said his dad.

"Down at the east end of Jacob's Creek," replied James.

"We don't have near enough room to keep an instrument like that. I've got an order of wheat coming in next week and it's going to take up the whole shack," snapped his dad.

"No, wait. This harp means so much to me. It reminds me of the days back in Pappa's workshop. Didn't you notice how when it was in the presence of this household we were civil toward one another?"

"Nonsense. I'm going to take that thing back where it came from immediately."

Showing no sympathy for James' feelings he carried the harp back to the river and dropped it in the water.

That night there was a terrible fight. James was so unhappy he ran to his room in tears while his parents verbally slugged it out all through the night.

The next morning James returned to the place where he originally found the harp. There it was back on top of the same rock. At least he understood the power of the harp. He returned to the shed, went inside and started to play the harp. Just then his parents came out.

"I thought I got rid of that thing yesterday," said his dad.

"But I had to get it back. Did you see how it made peace in this home?"

"He has a point there, "interrupted his mother. "Let's just give it a chance; say three days. If we fight you may do with it as you wish," pointed out his mother.

The family was a happy one except for a few pointless quarrels that could be solved with a little common sense.

The harp was passed from generation to generation bringing people more close together; in other words, just doing its job.

Butterfly's Wings

A butterfly's wings,
Are very beautiful things.
The can be striped or spotted,
Or can have pretty patterns that are dotted.

The summer's over
And so is the day,
But I really can't wait until the month of May.
For that is when butterflys
are here,
And you know that summer is near.

I love to watch them flutter by,
Those beautiful wings of a butterfly!

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88E0015-P2

To Thomas F. Manning, Jr. of Cohasset in said County, Quincy Savings Bank of Quincy in said County; and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Margaret Elgin a/k/a Margaret Manning of Milton in the County of Norfolk representing that she hold as joint tenant an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: That certain parcel of land situated in Cohasset, bounded and described as follows:

EASTERLY by the Westerly line of a New Right of Way, as shown on plan hereinafter referred to, two hundred fifty seven and 75/100 (257.75) feet;

SOUTHERLY by lot D, as indicated on said plan, and by lot E7, as shown on said plan, two hundred ninety seven (297) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by the Southeasterly line of a Way, as shown on said plan, three hundred thirty eight and 02/100 (338.02) feet; and

NORTHERLY by a curved line on said Way, forty three and 89/100 (43.89) feet. Said parcel is shown as Lot E6 on a plan drawn by William S. Crocker, C.E. dated February 4, 1935, as approved by the Land Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 1924X, a copy of a portion of which is filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 13768, Book 69. The above described land is subject to the easement as set forth in Document No. 7705 so far as now in force and applicable.

setting forth that she desire that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than five hundred thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of March 1988, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twelfth day of February 1988.

Cohasset worship

Shabbat services

Shabbat services will be held at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., Hingham on Feb. 26 at 8 p.m. Rabbi Karol will speak on "Why JAP Jokes Aren't So Funny."

Day of Prayer

The annual World Day of Prayer, sponsored by Church Women United, will be held Friday, March 4, at St. Luke's Episcopal Church, Route 3A, Scituate.

Speaker at the 10 a.m. service will be Mrs. Paula Aymer, wife of the Rev. Birchfield Aymer, minister of the Marshfield United Methodist Church. A native of Granada, Mrs. Aymer is a graduate of the University of the West Indies and Northeastern University where she is professor of sociology. The Aymers have two children, Elise and Birchfield, Jr.

Preceding the service that was written by both Protestant and Catholic women from Brazil, there will be coffee and fellowship at 9:30 a.m. Babysitting will be available.

Ruth Hall of Scituate is president of the South Shore unit of Church Women United.

Other Scituate women assisting in planning the program are Barbara Swan of St. Luke's Church; Linda Wilde and Ann McSweeney of St. Frances X. Cabrini Church; Margaret Roswell of Marshfield United Methodist Church; Laura Houghton and Cynthia Lambert of First Trinitarian Congregational Church; Vera Green and Doreen Anderson of First Baptist Church; Kathleen Laidlaw of Union Mission Chapel and Brenda Zilinskas and Dora Reese of Christ Lutheran Church.

Christian women from 170 countries throughout the world will meet March 4 to celebrate this year's theme, "Open Doors." Several units of Church Women United are organized throughout the South Shore; members in the South Shore unit come from Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury. Everyone is welcome to the service.

Joys of Scripture study

The sermon subject Sunday, Feb. 28 at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Hingham, will be on the blessings that come from daily reading of the Scriptures.

Robert E. Chatfield of Norwell, former bishop of the congregation, will be the speaker. The sacrament meeting (a family worship hour) begins at 9 a.m. and is followed by discussion classes and Book of Mormon study until 12 noon. Visitors are welcome at the meetings.

Congregational Church services

The Beechwood Congregational Church invites everyone to worship Sunday mornings at 10:45 a.m.

The pastor is Stephen S.J. Hall. Child care is provided downstairs following the children's sermon.

All children in grades K-8 are welcome to attend Sunday School from 9:30-10:30 a.m. Last week the children took cards and cookies that they made to the Ripley Road Nursing Home. They visited with the guests at the home and sang songs. We thank everyone at the Ripley Road Nursing Home for allowing us this opportunity to share our time with them.

Thursday at 6:30 p.m. the Beechwood Social will be held. All friends and neighbors are welcome to attend. Bring a covered dish and the whole family. Mark Vendre from Hingham will perform magical illusions. This event is open to everyone. Come and have fun!

St. Mary's Parish events

There will be a meeting for parents and god-parents of Baptismal candidates in St. Mary of the Assumption Parish in Hull, Feb. 25 at 7:30 p.m., at St. Ann's Church Hall. Baptisms will be at 1 p.m., Sun., Feb. 28.

The Boston Archdiocese Conference for Separated, Widowed and/or Remarried will hold an all-day workshop Sat., March 26. For information cal 783-2451.

Obituary

Gertrude N. Onley

Funeral services were held Friday, Feb. 19 in Taunton for Gertrude N. (Brady) Olney, 81, who died Feb. 16 at the Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home. Burial was in West Dighton Cemetery.

Mrs. Olney, a former resident of Rehoboth, was a member of the Women's Guild of the West Dighton Church.

Wife of the late Merrill Olney, she leaves a son, Charles E. Olney of Cohasset; and two grandchildren, Christopher Olney and Margaret Olney, both of Cohasset.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, Inc., 70 E. Lake Drive, Chicago, Ill., 60601.

Tri-town sewer connection not dead yet

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Sewer Commission has vowed, "it's not over 'till it's over."

In reaction to Monday night's rejection by Hull town meeting to an intermunicipal agreement, Cohasset Sewer Commissioner Ted Guild stated, "it's very disappointing." But he quickly added that the proposal to pipe 300,000 gallons of sewage each day from Cohasset into the Hull treatment plant "is far from dead."

Cohasset, Hull and Hingham officials met Wednesday morning at the Boston offices of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE). The fact that DEQE insisted on keeping that appointment, despite the Hull defeat, was encouraging to Commissioner Guild. "All is not lost," he added.

Following that meeting, it was decided Hull will re-introduce the identical article at its April 11 annual town meeting. Prior to that meeting, Hull officials will hold additional public meetings, which Cohasset sewer commissioners will attend to answers questions.

Cohasset Sewer Commission Chairman Charles DeSantis said after Wednesday's meeting that with the "100 percent backing" of the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) and the continued efforts of the three towns, an intermunicipal agreement remains a possibility. "It will be very difficult to meet the June (design) deadline," said DeSantis, "but we have strong, 100 percent support from the state and I think that's going to help us meet the deadline."

If Hull's annual town meeting approves the intermunicipal agreement, up-front construction funds for the project must be appropriated by Cohasset. This will require a special Cohasset

Dump committee can't consider CHL an option

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

An alternative dump site that would cost the town "next to nothing" was never considered by the disposal area study committee.

Members of the study committee were directed years ago when they began searching for alternatives to the Cedar Street landfill, not to look to Cohasset Heights Ltd. for relief. According to members of the committee, they were warned by town officials and special counsel not to consider the commercial landfill off Rte. 3A as a possible solution to the town's trash woes.

Last week, the committee voted to recommend transporting the town's trash, beginning in the fall, to a Maine facility for more than $400,000 a year. This is an interim solution devised by the study committee until the second phase of the SEMASS facility is constructed and Cohasset can begin its participation. A starting date of 1991 was cited by SEMASS officials.

Town meeting will vote on that proposal at the April town meeting. If approved, the Maine proposal will begin as early as November, 1988.

For six years the town has been embroiled in a controversial lawsuit against the commercial landfill. Legal battles to regulate or shut down the privately-owned dump have cost the town more money than any other litigation in its history.

For many years, concerned residents have claimed CHL is a detriment to the town's

Salvador says job was secure

The former superintendent of the Cohasset sewer plant has filed a lawsuit against the current board of sewer commissioners, saying that for 16 years he was assured by his employers that his position was secure until retirement.

Manuel Salvador, the former superintendent of the Cohasset sewer treatment plant, filed a lawsuit against the sewer commissioners this week, seeking $2. 5 million in damages from the town. Salvador was superintendent until the commissioners suspended him in January, 1987 and later terminated the position. A private consulting firm, York Water Consultants, is currently managing the treatment plant.

Salvador requested a jury trial on all counts against the commission in a lawsuit filed by his attorney, Frank McGee, at Norfolk County Superior Court.

In the complaint filed this week, Salvador alleges his employment with the town was wrongfully terminated by the commissioners on June 30, 1987. He also notes that he was "not afforded a hearing prior to his termination, nor was he charged with acts of misconduct or malfeasance in office prior to termination."

Salvador, a state-certified supervisor of the sewer treatment plant for 16 years, was

Cost overruns

Selectman Burt Pratt was angered this week about an estimated change order from the town hall architect, who is now projecting $50,550 in excess construction costs.

"I know that $40,000 or so is for the sprinkler system," he said, referring to the additional costs incurred by placing a full sprinkler system in the town hall addition. "But I want to know what this other $10,000 is for.

"I want to make sure we don't get a change order on a serious mistake the architect has made," he added.

Selectmen decided to have study committee member Benjamin Blake review the change order and break it down for the board members. They also requested that the architect, Brett Donham, present an update of the project and estimate future costs. "I'd like to know where the rest of this money is going," Selectman Pratt emphasized.

Election set

The races are set, with many officials facing challenges in the April election.

There is opposition in the race for school committee, library trustee, health board, planning board, and sewer commission.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle will have no opposition in his candidacy for a fourth term of office. Assessor Michael Patrolia is the only candidate for a three-year term on that board. And Richard Barrow will have no opposition in his re-election bid for a five-year seat on the recreation commission.

School committee member Barbara W. Bliss will be challenged by John Russell Reidy of Fair Oaks Lane for a three-year term. Bliss has been on the committee for the past three years.

There are four candidates for three seats on the board of trustees for the Paul Pratt Library. The incumbents are Elizabeth F. Eaton and Agnes McCann. The challengers for the three-year position are Sigrid Carey and Katherine Sturtevant.

Michael Sullivan will be challenging Hugh Joseph Morgan for a three-year seat on the board of health. The incumbent, Dr. John Burns, is not seeking re-election to that board.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy will be facing a challenge from J. Stephen Bjorklund for a five-year term on that board.

And James R. Sheerin is the only candidate for a three-year term on the board of water commissioners. Incumbent Lot E. Bates is not seeking re-election.

Sewer commissioner R. Gary Vanderweil Jr. will have opposition from Lot W. Bates for a three-year seat on that board.

Curtis Estate strategy

Selectmen will attend a meeting of the Curtis Estate Action Committee this week to prepare a legal strategy against the private development of the land owned by the estate of the late George Curtis.

The strategy will map a course for the town to follow in its attempt to fight private development of the 55 - acre-parcel, and to propose use of the property for affordable housing by the town. Joseph McElroy, co-chairman of the action committee, told selectmen it is important for all involved town officials to remain cohesive in their support of this strategy.

The state will soon rule on whether to accept a legal document presented by the estate's board of trustees. If the state does not favor the Cy Pres document, the town may have an opportunity to gain the land for town purposes, but it needs specific alternatives for the land, McElroy said. The trustees hope to sell the land to a private developer. The town has been considering alternative land uses, such as affordable housing, and housing for the elderly and retarded.

McElroy said a document should be created from this meeting, which will then be forwarded to the state attorney general's office for review.

Street renamed

Selectmen voted to rename 151 A-F Beach Street "Mohawk Way." Resident Paul Barry requested the name change, noting that it is designated on the new town assessor's map as Mohawk Way.

Selectmen unanimously approved the name change, while noting that Mohawk Way will remain an unaccepted street.

Cohasset Savings cash dividend

Cohasset Savings Bank (NAASDAQ-CHTB) last week declared an initial quarterly cash dividend of 4 cents per share on 1,002,978 shares of common stock outstanding, payable April 1, 1988, to stockholders of record March 15, 1988.

Cohasset Savings, a 142-year-old community thrift institution, converted from mutual to stock form in May, 1987. The Bank recently reported net income of $583,000 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1987. Assets at that time were $59,225,000, and stockholders' equity at that date was $11,982,000.

Gift shop needs more crafts

Artists and craftspeople are invited to submit their work to the South Shore Art Center for consideration for the Center's gift shop.

Sheila Casey, who heads up the gift shop, is in the process of expanding and redoing the gift shop and is looking for artists and craftspeople who would like to sell their work through the shop. Interested artisans should contact Casey at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, 383-9548.

She is looking for smaller items such as unusual jewelry, hand painted silks, items in the "art to wear" category and blown glass. All works submitted will be juried into the gift shop.

Sewer agreement not dead

town meeting sometime in May, the chairman predicted.

Under the provisions of this agreement which has been negotiated by Cohasset, Hull and Hingham for the past five years, Cohasset would be allowed to pipe as much as 300,000 gallons of sewage and septic waste each day into the Hull treatment plant. In exchange, Cohasset would pay Hull $1.5 million, much of which would be used to upgrade the plant.

Special town meeting in Hull was the first test for the recently-completed settlement. Once that met with voter approval, the contract was scheduled for a vote at the Cohasset and the Hingham town meetings.

Hingham was also affected by the negative town meeting vote. That town had planned to transport 40,000 of sewage each day from the Bonnie Briar neighborhood into the Hull plant.

The special town meeting vote was necessary because the state has issued a June deadline for the design of the Cohasset-Hull tie-in. Without approval of the design, 90 percent state and federal funds will not be available by the Sept. 30 cut-off date.

Cohasset Sewer Commissioner Guild insisted the issue is "far from dead." After discussions with Hull Selectman Claudette Fitzsimmons following special town meeting, Guild predicted the proposal would be back on Hull's town meeting floor in April.

"I only gave this shot a 50-50 chance," he said this week. It's a highly complex matter, and this was the first time it was before the public. It has not been the keen subject in Hull that it has been in Cohasset.

"The vote Monday night gave me hope," Guild continued. "Town government in Hull is solidly in favor. There were some very convincing speakers at the meeting, and they are supported by a majority of the voters in Hull. I think the second time this is brought up, the public will be more receptive."

Commissioner Guild noted that many Hull town officials, including all five selectmen, the five sewer commissioners, and nine out of 11 finance committee members support the intermunicipal agreement.

"Basically," he explained, "the people who have studied this complex issue for a long time are heavily in favor of it. But those people unfamiliar with it, who do not understand the implications of this agreement, spoke against the proposal."

After talking with Hull selectmen following the special town meeting, Guild walked away convinced the issue will be brought before Hull voters again. "The sewer commission and selectmen both plan to bring this back again," he said. "I'm not surprised this failed the first time. There has not been that much discussion about this issue in Hull - not nearly as much as in Cohasset."

Guild, who was the only Cohasset official in attendance Monday night, related an example of Hull voters' unfamiliarity with the issue. "One woman spoke against the IMA, and she asked town meeting, 'did you know the pump station will be in Hull, too?' She held up a pamphlet that was being distributed, and right on the back it clearly showed the pump station in Cohasset," Guild noted.

The Cohasset official said the Wednesday morning meeting with DEQE was important. Local officials hoped to request an extension of the funding deadline. "It's not over 'till it's over," he added.

Vanderweil candidacy

Raimund G. "Gary" Vanderweil will run for re-election to the Board of Sewer Commissioners.

Vanderweil is an advocate of limited central sewering, combined with on site leaching fields for waste water disposal. His commitment to this approach reflects his concern for the protection of the town's character and fragile ecology.

Elected to the board in 1985, Vanderweil has been active in negotiations with the state and Hull, as well as in engineering issues such as contractor selection and equipment purchases.

He is a 1958 graduate of Cohasset High School, and has engineering degrees from Harvard and MIT.

Vanderweil is president of R.G. Vanderweil Engineers, Inc., a "Top 500" engineering firm.

Selectmen say pay exact cost for proper moorings

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

In order to eliminate future confusion and more disgruntled sailors, selectmen this week revised a harbor mooring regulation.

Boatowners will now pay the correct amount for the exact footage assigned to their mooring. They will not be allowed to alter the size of the boat tied to an assigned mooring without their names returned to the interminable mooring waiting list.

Selectmen approved the strict mooring code after complaints were issued following a change in boat size on a mooring held by Floyd Robbins. According to Harbormaster Steve Osborne, Robbins originally was assigned a mooring for a 29-foot boat by former Harbormaster Harry Ritter. A bowsprint was added to the boat in 1986, Ritter told the current harbormaster, creating a 39-foot vessel. Robbins remained on the same mooring for the past two seasons. He has requested a 41-foot mooring which has been granted by Harbormaster Osborne.

Many residents were angered that the boatowner was allowed to remain on the same mooring, although the boat size had increased. Robbins was paying for a 29-foot mooring despite the increase in the size of the vessel, Harbormaster Osborne explained.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson noted that similar situations are current matters of litigation between the town and other harbor mooring holders. "Past practice has been to prohibit that (change in boat size)," he stated. Atty. Henderson requested a meeting with the haorbormaster, noting that he must know the original size of the mooring for which Robbins had applied. Osborne said that information is not available.

"I can't understand that you accepted his application when he has had a 40-foot long boat for 100 years and he's paid for a 29-foot boat," Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said to the harbormaster.

Osborne explained that the boat was allowed to remain in the shorter mooring because of a previous billing error. After measuring the vessel in September, Osborne said the error would be corrected in the 1988 mooring commitment list.

Atty. Henderson inquired whether Robbins was given a 29-foot mooring and later added the bowsprint. "Then if he did that without permission, that's the end of the ballgame," he stated.

Selectman James Gallagher stated that if the owner has a mooring for a 29-foot boat, he should keep a 29-foot boat there. "It's not fair to increase or decrease without going through the mooring list again," he added. "It's not fair to those on the mooring list if Mr. Robbins increased the size of his boat, then it's a flagrant violation of the mooring regulations."

Osborne emphasized that he is asked on a daily basis to increase mooring sizes for larger boats in the harbor. "I view this (situation) as a mistake on someone else's part," he told selectmen.

Atty. Henderson cautioned selectmen not to be so concerned with possible lawsuits from residents, but "more importantly that you administer the harbor consistently, regardless of what has been done," he stated. "If this man applied for a 29-foot mooring and added a bowsprint, that is a violation."

Selectmen approved a change in regulations which stipulates that if a mooring holder wants to change the size of the boat on that specific mooring, his name will be placed back onto the waiting list. They also instructed Harbormaster Osborne to review the issue involving Robbins in view of the regulation they had just approved.

John Pfaffman, chairman of the harbor study committee, suggested that all changes in boat size on harbor moorings be reviewed. "We've got to recommend what size boat properly belongs to each mooring," he added.

In other action Monday night, selectmen signed another version of the housing agreement they plan to submit to the state executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD). A few changes in this draft agreement were made by selectmen, based on recent discussions Selectman Martha Gjesteby had with various state officials.

Atty. Henderson, who reviewed the proposed revisions, presented the document to selectmen. It was suggested that the sentence "Site selection may be subject to local authorization and funding," be stricken from the document. "It looks like an unncessary restriction, so it's best that it does not appear in the contract," town counsel advised.

A second correction will state that an inventory of available sites for housing be submitted to all town boards, rather than specifying selectmen, planning board and the housing authority. A third correction states that Bates Building will be converted into two specific housing units. Other changes approved by selectmen are simple grammatical corrections, according to Atty. Henderson.

Members of the planning board and housing authority must now review and sign this latest version before it is submitted to the state for final approval. Until the housing agreement is finalized and approved, the state has termed Cohasset unreasonably restrictive and all discretionary grants are being withheld from the town.

Town Counsel presented seven new articles that have been submitted into the warrant for the annual town meeting.

There is an additional request for an unspecified amount of money to be used toward the engineering of the town's athletic fields. That article has been proposed by the Milliken Field study committee.

The health board has requested an additional $50,000 for environmental attorney fees relating to the on-going litigation against Cohasset Heights Ltd. The advisory board suggested that the appropriation request be submitted into the warrant as a separate article. The health board is also requesting $50,000 for engineering services to reduce the leachate at the Cedar Street landfill.

There is an article to officially designate the park at the corner of Ripley Road and Depot Court as Constitution Park. An article proposed by Selectman Gallagher will prohibit hunting by firearms, air gun, pellet gun or bow and arrow in the upland areas of town.

An article to construct sidewalks along Forest Avenue will also include a provision to assess betterments to those residents whose property will be affected. Although selectmen doubted they would ever attach a betterment to those homes, town counsel said the provision merely reserves the right to make that decision.

Salvador thought job secure

suspended by the commissioners in December, 1986. At that time, the commissioners said Salvador left the plant unsupervised during his annual December vacation, and refused to return despite their requests.

In the lawsuit against the commissioners, Salvador stated his position was secure and, according to his employers, he would not be in a position to look for employment elsewhere. "Various members of the commission continuously stated over a long period of time that plaintiff (Salvador) was an essential employee and that his retirement would be secure at all times during the course of his employment. Plaintiff believed and relied upon the assertions of the defendants (commissioners)," the complaint stated.

Immediately following his suspension in December, 1986, Salvador suffered a heart attack. The commission voted to hire a private firm to manage the wastewater treatment plant and later in 1987, the superintendent's position was eliminated.

But the former employee noted in his Superior Court complaint that "at various times during the course of his employment, and prior to the time plaintiff was terminated by defendants, without cause or justification, the defendants, on a regular basis, repeatedly re-assured plaintiff that his position was secure with the commission, and that there would be an adequate retirement for the plaintiff."

Salvador stated in the charges against commissioners Charles DeSantis, Ted Guild, Gary Vanderweil and secretary Patricia Walsh that he had developed a reputation as an expert in the field of maintenance treatment, and formerly served as president and director of the Massachusetts Water Pollution Control Association.

"During the course of his employment with the defendants, plaintiff reviewed available maintenance waste water treatment systems, and installed new systems, which conferred substantial financial benefits upon the defendants (commissioners)," the lawsuit alleged.

Salvador also noted that during his employment, he worked many hours without compensation, and on many occasions, was assured by defendants that his position was secure "so long as plaintiff desired to remain with the Cohasset Sewer Commission."

According to the charges made by Salvador, annual town meeting voted April 4, 1987 to continue the position of treatment plant supervisor and to provide a salary for that position. "Notwithstanding the vote of town meeting, defendants unlawfully terminated plaintiff on June 30, 1987," according to the document filed this week in superior court.

Advisors warn town budgets in 'real danger'

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner staff

The Cohasset budget advisory board wielded a sharp knife at its meeting March 1.

One reason for the budget cutting was the fact that the town has very little ready cash.

"There is a real danger," said chairman Jane Goedecke.

"We have $1.6 million in request and only $393,000 in real cash," she said. "We could end up with a special meeting and no cash."

First to feel the blade was the planning board. Despite board chairman Bob Sturdy's explanation of why he needed a $5,000 item for legal fees, it was deleted from the budget.

Sturdy told the board he could not use Town Counsel Richard Henderson because, in order to do so, he must first go through Executive Secretary Don Andrew before he could even talk to Henderson.

"That situation scares any town official," said Sturdy. He said there was a chance of not being defended in court and it also placed the town in peril.

He told the board he could not quote figures because Henderson had never given him an accounting.

He also informed the board that the town should not treat deposits from engineering services and developers as income. He said the money should be placed into an escrow account set up solely for that purpose

Sturdy said that any lawsuit was at town expense and that it should not expect the defendent to pay for the suit.

"It is totally improper to treat a deposit as income," he said. "The money belongs to the depositor to be expended on his behalf."

Member Phil Smith asked Sturdy if hiring a town engineer would not be more cost effective than the large amounts which the town was presently expending for engineering services.

Sturdy replied that town engineers were "outdated."

He said they used to keep the town maps up-to-date, but even that is not feasible today. He said engineering firms use computers of a type which the town could not afford to operate.

Sturdy's request for $20,000 for engineering services was slashed to $10,000.

The town's zoning laws may also be in trouble.

While discussing the fact that, according to state law, the town cannot hire a zoning enforcement officer, Sturdy admonished the board that the town is in a position to be subject to a lawsuit which could result in declaring the entire zoning by-laws as illegal.

"There is discriminatory enforcement," he said. "All you have to do is to ride along Route 3A and they are quite visible."

He said either the town enforces all zoning by-laws or it places itself in real jeopardy.

A large chunk was also carved from the landfill budget, although it was reinstated in a fashion.

Despite the fact that the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) has ordered the town to alleviate the leachate problem at the landfill, the board removed the $68,000 necessary to accomplish it from the budget and placed it on the warrant along with the $50,000 for the transfer station construction, thereby placing the leachate problem and DEQE compliance in the hands of the voters.

The board also cut the request for $150,000 for cover material for the landfill to $100,000 hoping that because a contract is about to be signed which would immediately start hauling the trash to a facility in Maine, the Board of Health will not need the entire amount it requested.

Again, the requested increase from $95,000 to the $150,000 was due to a DEQE's order to rewrite the specifications for the cover material.

The Fire Department escaped unscathed.

Chief Daniel Brock received his entire budget request of $889,000.

Problems arose when the board questioned Brock about the $20,000 earmarked for call firemen's pay.

Brock informed the board that according to the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1976, and revised by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1986, it was his understanding that you could not pay a lump sum as the board and selectmen requested.

He said according to the Mass. Fire Chiefs Association and others that when an individual makes over $2.50 per hour, he is considered an employee and any pay must be treated as salary.

He said if he was to pay the way the board and selectmen requested him to do, he would be paying the call firemen $25 per hour and, in his opinion, be in violation of federal law.

"I will not break the law," said Brock.

He said he had told selectmen about the federal law, but they did not agree with him, but admitted they had not had town counsel research it.

Goedecke said the reason the board figured the high rate for call firemen was to make it attractive to be a call firemen. She noted there had been a drop in the number of call firemen. Brock said there had been, but since last March six or seven new men had signed up.

Animal Control came under the knife in the amount of $800, bringing its budget down to $8,321.

Veterans Services was line funded at $11,000 while Fair Housing came in with $120.

The Wire Department will cost voters $76,992 while Regional Schools will only cost $20,000 this year as opposed to $23,000 last year.

Harbor comes in at $33,800 with the Council on the Aging at $4,700.

Recreation won its $57,000.

Brush painting exhibit

Tuesday, March 1, marks the opening of an exhibit of Oriental Brush Painting by members of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Sumi-E Society of America in the Reading Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library in Cohasset.

The artists have studied with Ellee Avakian, president of the chapter, at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset. The exhibition, which is free, continues through March 31.

The group workshop meets weekly at the South Shore Art Center.

Recreation programs

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a unique fitness program to be taught by Sandy Wiggins. The class will focus on stretching and conditioning for students of all ages and levels of ability.

Classes will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:15 to 6 p.m. at the Town Hall auditorium, beginning Tuesday, March 1.

Each session will be eight weeks and the fee will be $18 for one night per week, or $32 for two nights per week. Checks should be made payable to "Town of Cohasset" and may be brought to the first class.

If traditional aerobic classes aren't for you, this class will provide toning and shaping without jarring those joints. Join us Tuesday evening, March 1, at the Town Hall Auditorium. Non-residents will be accepted.

Playground staff applications

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept applications for summer playground staff positions. Contact the recreation office at 383-6791, for details and forms.

Pay will be according to experience, which should include working with children in structured group settings. Employment will be for seven weeks, beginning Tuesday, July 5.

New class schedule

A new strengthening and stretching class for the busy person who wants to stay in shape without the jumping type of exercise associated with aerobics is being formed at the Cohasset Community Center.

This new program lets you stop in on your way to work, exercise, and continue on your way. This class will be held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7 to 8 a.m. You may sign up for one or both days. The program will register on a monthly basis and will be taught by Normandie Nigh. Call 383-0088 to register.

A new gymnastic program is starting Saturday, March 5 at the Community Center. This program will be taught by Ruthann. There are classes for both beginners and intermediates, boys and girls. Call 383-0088 for times and any other information, and to register.

Rare book review

The romance and often-unsuspected values in old and rare books or documents will be the featured topic at a dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historical Society, Wednesday, March 23 at the Unitarian Parish House in Cohasset. The meeting is open to the public.

"Treasures In Your Attic, Old and Rare Books" will be the subject of Kenneth Gloss, owner of the Brattle Book Shop, one of Boston's and America's oldest and best-known antiquarian book shops. Gloss will describe his experiences in dealing in old books, and will appraise volumes which audience members are encouraged to bring.

Gloss is the son of the late George Gloss who operated the world-famous book shop for almost 50 years until his death two years ago. He is a member of many regional historical and book organizations, and served on the advisory committee of the U.S.S. Constitution Museum whose archives and library he appraised. He also has appraised books and documents for all the leading local colleges and universities.

A wine and cheese reception at 6 p.m. will precede the dinner catered by Jessica at 6:30 p.m.

Reservations at $10 per person may be made by check mailed to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset MA 02025. Deadline for reservations is Saturday, March 19. Telephone reservations at 383-6930. Please note, all reservations must be paid in advance.

Salvador lawsuit . . .

Loss of employment caused Salvador to "lose financial and other benefits of the employment relationship," the lawsuit stated. Salvador also alleged that the position was terminated "on a desire to avoid paying the plaintiff salary and other financial benefits which had been contracted for, and to avoid complying with other terms and conditions of the plaintiff's employment."

The town, which has been previously represented by labor counsel Robert Garrett, has 20 days to respond to the charges filed by Salvador and Atty. McGee.

□ Karl Becker recently completed U.S. Coast Guard Boatswain's Mate (A) school at Reserve Training Center in Yorktown, Virginia. Next August Karl begins airline pilot training at Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University in Daytona Beach, while fulfilling weekend reserve duty at nearby Ponce de Leon Coast Guard Station.

□ The Rattenbury brothers have a family fued of sorts going on, even as we speak. They are both at college. John is at Rensselaer and Mark is at Wentworth Institute. The rivalry is over the grades. . . John has made the Dean's List every semester that he has been at Rensselear, and Mark is a 4.0 student at Wentworth. Now that's the kind of rivalry that's wonderful to report, keep it up guys.

□ Be sure to tune in our local cable station and catch the show that features our superindendent Steve Hart. You will be able to learn a lot of what is happening in our schools, as they cover quite a few subjects. We think that if Mr. Hart ever decides to pursue a new career, it should be in television, he sure does photograph and speak well!

□ If you want to see beautiful crafts for sale at a super price, head out to Rte. 3A and look at the Bound Brook Artisans! They have the most beautiful things we have seen in a long time, and its a shop that people from six to sixty will be enthralled with! It's amazing to see such talent collected under one roof, go take a peek.

□ I received a few calls last week telling me that there were about 20 seals in the harbor! It was dusk so it was too late to get any picutures, but usually when they arrive they stay for a while, so go down and see if you can spot them!

□ Our town won't be the same without the Marks family. They are now living in sunny Florida, the moving van left last week. The good news is that it will give many Cohassetites another place to visit!

□ A lot of basketball enthusiasts gathered in Norwell last Friday night to watch the Boy's Basketball All-Star game. We congratulate Mike Smith and Bryan Edwards on their being chosen to play on the team.

□ Sean P. Kelley certainly is a good student, he made the High Honor Roll at Boston College High School last term. Mark R. Dursin made the Honor Roll there. Both boys are seniors at B.C. High.

□ Martha Gjesteby is one busy lady! As you know, she is one of our hard-working selectmen, she is a member of the MAPC legislation policy committee on Human and Economic Services, and secretary of the Metropolitan Area Planning Council. Guess the old saying applies, "just ask a busy person". . .

□ If you can believe it, plans are underway for the 12th annual Cohasset Roadrace by the sea. This race is sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary Club, and last year there were over 800 runners! This year it will be held on Sunday, March 27th at 1:00 and applications are available by writing P.O.Box 36, Cohasset or going to Good Sport, Cohasset Liquors, and Harbor Liquors. Peter Logan and Roy Fitzsimmons are in charge of the race again this year, which is good news as they always do an outstanding job. Pay your $7 entry fee early, as they need to have you preregistered by March 22nd. And, while you are running, think of how your entry fee will be put to good work, the Rotary Club helps many charitable causes, as well as giving wonderful scholarships to deserving seniors.

□ If you are interested in lending your time in Jack Kemp's bid for the Presidency, we have just the person for you. Pat Buckley is the town coordinator for his campaign, call her at 383-0304.

□ Once again our CHS artists take the spotlight. Kerri Miele, Jacob Powell and Corey DeSantis were all honored with gold keys at the 38th annual Boston Globe Scholarship art contest. Alexandra Redfield won honorable mention. Continued success to you as you pursue your art dreams kids, glad you are making the most of your talents.

□ Speaking of artists, Danny Silvia is a grand cartoonist.

□ This is the week for CHS sports, as they head into the first rounds of the State Tournaments. Both the boys and girls basketball teams will play their first two games in the Sullivan gym, watch your paper for times and dates. Go and cheer for these hard-working athletes, they deserve it. Good luck to you all, and we all thank you for the time and efforts, it has already paid off.

□ Saint Anselm College Jazz Band member Michael Brown played with the legendary Dizzy Gillespie as part of the fourth annual New Hampshire/Saint Anselm College Jazz Festival held at the college's Dana Center Feb. 26.

Brown plays the drums in the Jazz Band, which opened for Gillespie.

Brown, a freshman philosophy major at the college is one of seven Saint Anselm students in the Jazz Band. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Brown, Jr. of 53 Aaron River Road.

□ Sumner and Martha Smith have recently completed an intense five day course at Teton Science School in Kelly, Wyoming. The course was a comprehensive examination of the ecology of winter environments. Much of the course consisted of field study. Participants spent a good deal of time in the backcountry on cross country skis. Some of the subjects studied included animal signs such as tracks and scat, snow study, and meteorology.

□ Two marks designed by Cohasset resident Bill Hannon have been chosen for inclusion in American Corporate Identtity/4 to be published by the Art Direction Book Company. Some of the clients included in ACI/4 are: Hertz Corporation, Apple Computers, Federal Express, Johnson and Johnson, and Olivetta USA.

Hannon's designs were for MP Video of Natick, a manufacturer of miniaturized television equipment used in opthalmic and urological surgery and for Polyfiltronics, of Surrey, Kent, (U.K.) a manufacturer of membrane filters used in medical and scientific research.

□ Cohasset resident Jack Conway has been reappointed to a fourth term on the Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association (AAA) of Massachusetts. Conway is chairman of the Jack Conway Real Estate Company, Northern Mortgage Company and Jack Conway Insurance Agencies.

□ Robert Sigsby, principal of Sigsby Communications, a Hanover based advertising and public relations agency, talked to the Cohasset Rotary Club Feb. 10 on "How to Promote Your Business."

Among the topics discussed were the development of the marketing message and the pros and cons of various promotional media such as advertising, brochures, PR and direct mail.

Sigsby launched Sigsby Communications in 1985 to assist small and medium sized companies in marketing and promoting their businesses and products. He has been involved with promotional work for more than 15 years, and is a co-founder and vice president of the South Shore Ad Club.

□ We have a leap year baby! Benjamin Seward Michaels Strong was born Feb. 29 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston to Rita and Lewis Strong, 51 Elm Court. Benjamin weighed in at 11 lbs. 6 oz. He has a sister Hillary and brother Jon (John).

That's the news for this week, give me a call with your newsworthy event.

A few problems

This town is facing a couple of perplexing, peculiar problems.

We learned this week that Hull isn't immediately interested in accepting our sewage. Although it appeared to be a great financial benefit to the neighboring town, the residents there were opposed to the thought of helping us out, no matter how much money we waved in front of their faces.

Hull and Cohasset have nurtured a precarious rivalry for years. Many in our neighboring towns have said we consider them a "poor stepchild" to our cultured tastes and activities. Of course that is not true, but perhaps it is bittersweet that we are forced to eat humble pie as we prepare to once again seek their help.

Cohasset sewer commissioners have bargained with Hull town officials for years, attempting to hammer out an agreement that will help our town's dire septic needs, while relieving Hull of the financial burden of supporting a needlessly-enormous treatment plant.

It appears to be a program that will help both sides, while perhaps mending a few necessary fences. We'd like to believe we are caring neighbors, not competitors.

We'll listen anxiously as Hull officials attempt once again to save this proposal and repeat their efforts before voters at their annual town meeting.

Our second dilemma is the problem of where residents of this town will deposit our trash. SEMASS appears a few years in the future, assuming the second stage of this trash-to-energy facility receives funding and is constructed.

An alternative which would mean transporting our trash to a Maine plant, will serve as an alternative until the SEMASS situation is clarified. This may cost the town nearly $500,000 a year, but it appears a guaranteed situation until we team up with SEMASS in 1991.

But along comes a local resident who proposes to take all our trash into his local landfill "for little or no cost." It sounds too good to be true, and perhaps it is. Many people won't listen to this alternative because the resident happens to be the owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd. He's the man with the headaches caused by six years of litigation against the town, a stack of legal and engineering bills, and an urge to get out of this endless web.

Cohasset Heights, he said, will remain in Cohasset until it dies a natural death. No matter how many tax dollars are spent trying to shut down the commercial landfill, it will continue, he vows. According to Barry, at no time has any state official reviewed the data and concluded that the landfill should be closed.

"They've tried to shut me down for six years," he said. "But they can't and I'm convinced we will never shut down."

In the spirit of ending this astronomically-expensive lawsuit by and against the town, Barry suggested he could accept the town's trash until SEMASS is prepared to go ahead. He will do it at a fraction of the cost charged by the Maine facility. That is possible since the round trip from Cedar Street to Crocker Lane is less than two miles, in comparison to more than 200 from Maine and back.

From what we have deciphered, this proposal by Barry is possible and practical. It may be time for the town to eat crow - to get up and put an end to the most expensive court lawsuit in the town's history.

Residents are correct in seeking to maintain a clean water supply. But no victories have been won, although our water has not been affected and the battle continues. Perhaps it's time to admit that the situation is not as bad as originally perceived, that Cohasset Heights is seeking to incorporate the highest advances of engineering technology into the business, and that town officials will still assume some control over the operation.

This is one alternative we will examine closer and continue to speak out about. It deserves everyone's attention. Even though there is litigation involved now, we could call an end to this expensive project, and begin to work together toward the same goal of preserving our environment and our lifestyle.

To the editor:

(The following letter was written to Gwen O'Sullivan Assistant Attorney General.)

I write to express my grave concern regarding comments in your December 11, 1987 letter to Joseph McElroy. Most disturbing is the statement, "The Department intends to assent to the trustees petition as amended." Obviously, when this letter was written the Attorney General was not aware of the trustees shameful neglect of the Curtis Estate buildings and property. Nor could the Attorney General been aware that in the 57 years since the death of the testator, George Edgar Curtis, not one attempt had been made by any group of trustees to create the "Curtis Home." With a visit to the property (and by viewing the enclosed newspaper photograph) you would confirm the former and with a review of the entire file in Plymouth Probate Court you would confirm the latter.

This apparent disdain for the expressed wishes of the testator by the past and present trustees by itself is sufficient grounds for their termination as executors. Their present attempt to sell the estate without a license from the probate court further demonstrates their unfitness. However, advising the court and the Attorney General that because the presence of ledge and wetlands "would not support a use as an institutional facility" while simultaneously executing a purchase and sales agreement with a developer who appeared before the Cohasset Planning Board with a proposal to construct 41 dwellings with an estimated retail value of 16 - 24 million dollars, is such reprehensible behavior that it warrants their mandatory immediate removal.

Your December 11th letter indicates four reasons for the Attorney General's intention to "assent." The following comments are in order:

Life interests for certain individuals: The complaint lists seven beneficiaries receiving income. A review of the will shows that no one individual receives more than $600 per annum. However, a review of the probate record by a Patriot Ledger reporter (see enclosed article) indicates that only approximately $1,000 in total payments was distributed to beneficiaries in 1986. The capital required to sustain this demand is insignificant when compared to the nearly $2,000,000 available to support the "Curtis Home." This sum of nearly $2,000,000 by itself is sufficient to support many charitable entities. When combined with supplemental funding from private and public sources it can sustain almost all imaginable charitable homes. For example, the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, Inc. has $600,000 in grants available for rehabilitation of building sites for a home for the retarded.

Buildings too small: Mr. Patrick Plante, the husband of the Vice President of the South Shore Retarded Citizens Association and an industrial arts instructor, inspected the buildings and found them ideal for a home for the retarded. Although the main building may have only three bedrooms, the large size of the building and the size of the other structures allows ample room for their purposes. This organization has grant and donation money available for the renovation of the buildings.

Wetland Classification: Obviously if the trustees believe that the property can support 41 residential dwellings, it can support a charitable home.

Use of funds most in accord with Mr. Curtis' intention: Mr. Curtis in the fifth clause of his will makes it his expressed wish to establish the "Curtis Home" to ". . . relieve distress and want." Mr. Curtis under no condition wished that the assets of the Cohasset Estate be sold for charitable purposes. The eighth clause of the will and seventh clause of the second codicil either prohibits such sale or requires a license from the Probate Court to do so. If Mr. Curtis wished the assets sold and distributed at the discretion of the trustees, he would have so stated in his will.

The Complaint for Cy Pres is a bold admission by the trustees that they choose not to serve the will of the testator. Rather, they prefer to see the land of the "Curtis Home" enrich private developers than ensure that the land and buildings become a "home and refuse, free of charge . . . . to relieve distress and want."

For the above reasons, I ask that the Attorney General under no condition assent to the Complaint for Cy Pres. I, also, believe that the Division of Public Charities should immediately exercise its solemn duty to protect the testator by removing the present trustees for neglect, mismanagement, apparent deceit, and for their refusal to comply with the expressed wishes of the testator. Further, that the Division of Public Charities act so that the intent of testator is upheld and that the public charities of the Commonwealth become the beneficiaries of the "Curtis Home" rather than private developers.

Sincerely yours,
Charles De Santis

Milliken engineering on warrant

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It appears that renovations to Milliken Field may be revived once again.

Selectmen reversed their previous decision and voted Monday night to allow a request for engineering studies of the athletic fields into the April town meeting warrant.

Last week, selectmen denied a proposal by Milliken-Lillard study committee to appropriate $20,000 for an engineering survey of the athletic fields.

But after a presentation by committee chairman Wayne Sawchuk Monday night, selectmen decided to allow the article into the annual town meeting warrant. Sawchuk told selectmen the $20,000 figure was a rough estimate, and he would be satisfied to eliminate the dollar amount from the article. By town meeting, he said, the committee should have a precise figure on the survey costs, Sawchuk explained.

Selectman James Gallagher, convinced by Sawchuk's presentation, supported a move to place the request into the town meeting warrant.

Sawchuk explained that through a misunderstanding, the committee was lead to believe the warrant was at the printers by Feb. 15. The athletic field study committee was formed only days prior to that time, he said, and hadn't had enough time to formulate cost estaimates to bring before town meeting. One member of the committee appeared at the selectmen's meeting last week and presented the engineering article request. Selectmen turned down that request, stating that until firm plans are presented, the matter should not come before town meeting voters.

"The consensus of everyone," Sawchuk told selectmen Monday night, "is that we need more fields and better fields. We have to improve what we have for maximum use."

From calculations made by the previous Milliken Field study committee, and an on-site inspection by the current committee members, they have estimated there are about four acres of water department property between the two fields. "We need the money to take drawings and the town's topography maps and see where the town can expand and improve," Sawchuck explained. "If you say no, we are locked into this without concrete ideas on what to do. If we do the engineering, we can have refined numbers to present to the town."

But Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle remained opposed to the engineering request. "It's going to be hard for townspeople to realize this. They were going for the money to build last time, and now it's $20,000 for a study," he stated. Selectman Laugelle was referring to the proposal to renovate Lillard Field, which was defeated by special town meeting in October.

Sawchuk answered, "we're getting something for this money. It (previous plans) may have been accepted better if we had spent less and got more." The committee chairman estimated that a reduced plan, including a less expensive track construction, will cost the town a maximum of $500,000. The previous athletic field proposal totaled about $1 million.

Sawchuk explained that he created the $20,000 engineering estimate. A local developer, Sawchuck told selectmen he would be satisfied if no figure was included in the article until the committee receives a definitive number and can present it to town meeting voters.

"We usually don't revote," Selectman Laugelle stated. "We felt this committee hasn't had enough time. I still feel you should have more time."

But Selectman Burt Pratt said the efforts of the second athletic field committee have been remarkable, and he supported their request to bring the matter before town meeting. "I hope the committee can come up with a figure less than the estimate," he added.

Selectmen noted that accepting the article into the warrant did not mean they supported the proposal. A vote on selectmen's support of the measure will come at a later date prior to town meeting.

The article will not only provide immediate improvements to the fields but engineering studies to refurbish and enlarge Milliken Field.

One reason the committee can give the town so much "bang for the buck," is that the Norfolk County Engineers spent four months surveying Milliken Field and the maps are on file at the town office.

One of the prime concerns is the water and mud problems plaguing Milliken Field.

"We must do drainage calculations before anything environment and a danger to the public drinking supply.

In an effort to halt further court costs for himself and Cohasset taxpayers, CHL owner Paul Barry last week made an offer to take the town's trash for the next 15 to 20 years "for nothing or next to nothing." In return, he requested the town halt all litigation against him, and allow the landfill to expand into the more than 30 unused acres he currently owns on Crocker Lane.

Despite his offer made last week before selectmen, and representatives of the health board, advisory committee, sewer commission and disposal area study committee, town officials turned him down.

Members of the disposal area study committee were told at the beginning of their search for landfill alternatives not to consider CHL an option. To some, including member Anson Whealler, it was a discouraging message.

Speaking for himself and not for the study committee, Whealler called the warning, "kind of absurd. For myself, this has been a continual source of frustration. When we are thinking about transporting our trash 200 miles out of Cohasset and we have an alternative available less than two miles round-trip, it's kind of absurd.

"I guess it's easy for me to say this. I get my drinking water from Hingham. I might feel differently if I got it from Lily Pond," he said.

"But we have never specifically discussed the possibility of using Cohasset Heights. Primarily I understand that was never an option open to us. I was frustrated by that fact," Whealler said. He has been a member of the disposal study committee for two years.

Jeffrey Power, another disposal study committee member, agreed the CHL option has actually been "a non-option." He added, "if we could have considered, we would have. But we have been directed not to consider it."

The board of health's special counsel, Michael Leon, could not be reached for comment.

CHL owner Barry realized his proposal would appear outlandish to some residents who have strongly opposed the existence of the commercial landfill. But he figured it was "about time someone took this situation by the horns and try to settle two problems at one time."

With the thousands of dollars the town has expended fighting Cohasset Heights, and the amount Barry has spent fending off those accusations, the CHL owner said he could have "constructed a new Milliken Field - something the town really could benefit from."

He continued, "Both the town's and Cohasset Heights' engineering firms, in my understanding, have said there is no harm to Lily Pond caused by this landfill - nor do they anticipate any future harm. I figure it's time to deal more with engineering results rather than the emotional, gut feelings that get involved."

Barry noted, "The town has spent more fighting Cohasset Heights than anything else. But in six years they haven't found the violations that would allow them to shut us down."

The landfill owner estimated that CHL could handle Cohasset's municipal trash for the next 10 to 20 years. "This is not a challenge," Barry emphasized. "But my question is, if they haven't done anything in the past six years to shut me down, why do they anticipate going on when all the engineers for the town, myself and DEQE feel this is a sound landfill?"

When asked if he was making this offer "out of the goodness of his heart" as a Cohasset resident, Barry stated, "No. I'm just trying to settle this on-going litigation in a way that will help me as a businessman and the town."

The particulars of the agreement could be hammered out, he promised. The transfer station would remain at the Cedar Street dump, compacted when full and transported to Crocker Lane. That is a two-mile round trip, he explained, in comparison with the 200-mile journey to Orrington, Maine.

The zoning board of appeals is also embroiled in battle against CHL, fighting the disposal of household trash in the commercial landfill.

Cohasset High advances to semi-finals

By Allison Butler
Special to the Mariner

Saturday, Feb. 27, Cohasset High School participated in the preliminary competition of the 57th annual Massachusetts High School Drama Festival, held at Hingham High School.

Cohasset High School presented "Fortress," a play written by Michael Scanlan. The entry was selected to advance to the semi-finals which will be held March 5. In addition, several students were recognized with individual awards.

Cohasset High School's presentation, directed by Ron Emmons, is about a youth's rather difficult childhood seen through the eyes of a close friend. Emmons said he selected "Fortress" simply because he "liked the script."

The play starred Michele Casolaro as Kim and Joe Mazza as Billy. Both actors received "All-Star Acting Awards" for their performances. The play also featured Erin Powell as Gladys, Billy's mother, and Scott Caristo as Herb, his father. The cast was also awarded a special award for their excellent ensemble consisting of sixteen people.

Working behind the scenes, was Mike Lelecas who managed lights, J. Gaston, the stage manager, and Janet Ditmar who supervised makeup. Costumes were organized by Colleen Lucas and Carolyn Contis.

Overall, Emmons thought the cast did an excellent job. "It was a little rushed. We'll have to pace it down," said Emmons, "but other than that, it was great!"

The Massachusetts High School Drama Festival takes place annually. Approximately 80 public and private high schools throughout the state present one-act plays or cuttings that are limited to 40 minutes. From the eighty plays, forty are selected to compete in the semi-finals which will select fifteen entries to participate in the State Festival scheduled to be held March 17, 18, & 19 at John Hancock Hall in Boston. The State Festival will determine the two plays that will represent the state in the New England Drama Festival.

The three plays joining Cohasset in the semi-final competitions will be the plays from Scituate, Norwell, and Notre Dame Academy.

Judging was done by an officially designated judge, Sherwood Collins, who was assisted by drama consultant, Jenny Robb.

The cast from the CHS production Fortress advances to the semi-finals of the state drama festival. They will perform again Saturday, March 6 at Hingham High.

else," said Sawchuk last week.

He said then the committee could look at getting conceptual designs for the new field layout which would include soccer, football and baseball fields, a useable track, tennis court, sanitary facilities and handicap access.

Member Joseph Connolly reminded the committee last week that the previous committee received a low bid of $795,000 last year to upgrade the two fields and that when the project was turned down by the town, the bidder was asked if he would hold the bid open.

"He said no," Connolly said. "One year from now the price would be $150,000 more."

Connolly said if it doesn't get the money this April, the committee and the town can expect the bids to be higher next year.

At its previous meeting, the committee had decided to ask the Water Department to use some land in back of Milliken Field for expansion of that facility.

Sawchuk told the committe he had written a letter asking to be on the agenda for the next meeting to discuss their request.

According to town maps, the existing field consists of 9.3 acres. The town-owned land the committee is requesting to use, lies north of the high school and would add 6.6 acres to the field enabling the necessary expansion.

Member Stephen Endris said the committee would be able to go before the 1989 town meeting with firm bids in hand for the Milliken improvements and expansion.

Sawchuk said the committee will also improve Lillard and make it useable.

"We will also install fencing so it won't be destroyed after it's fixed," he said.

Handicapped access is also planned for Lillard Field.

It was noted that all playing schedules start in March and Cohasset is the only town that cannot use its fields.

Members asked Ex Officio member Peter Laugelle, superintendent of Trees and Parks if he had any budget for fixing the fields.

He said he really doesn't have any budget at all.

"I only have $1,500 this year for fixing fences," he said. "Up to now, we just wait until something breaks, then we fixed it."

He said the fields have been left to run down.

He said the committee was going to build new fields, but that was nothing to do with maintenance.

Cohasset Soccer Booster Club President Larry Schultz said he will need the field ready in the very near future for youth soccer.

He noted that in some groups there are as many as 45-to-50 young people playing the game.

The committee announced the next meeting will be held Thursday, March 10 at 8 p.m. at Town Hall.

Student participation

In observance of this presidential election year, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray is encouraging students to participate in student government days at the state house.

Students are given a packet which includes pamphlets that describe Massachusetts state government. A physical description of the state house is given to provide them with a sense of history displayed throughout the beautiful building.

"Massachusetts Facts" relates interesting and important facts about the Commonwealth, and "There Ought to be a Law" and "Law Making in Massachusetts" describes both the formal and informal mechanisms of the legislative process.

Students learn the legislative process of the thousands of bills filed in Massachusetts; committee assignments of legislators and the many steps taken before the enactment of bills into law. They attend hearings and press conferences pertinent to Rep. Murray's 3rd Plymouth District.

One of the most important achievements is to know where to find and how to utilize the vast amount of resources and material the state departments have at their finger tips.

Rep. Murray hopes this day at the state house will stimulate interest in the workings and purposes of state government.

Rep. Murray has a continuing year-round youth program tied in with the high schools and students in college in her district which consists of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull. Her goal is to encourage the youth to get involved by participating in government.

All-Star girls

It was simply a case of being victimized by too much of the real thing for the South Shore League — small division All-Stars on Friday night at Norwell High School.

That is, too much of Kelly Reale, Rockland High's junior hoop phenomena, who led the large school All-Stars to a convincing 66-55 victory, snapping the half decade of dominance their small school rivals have had in the annual affair.

Reale, coached by her head mentor Madeline Lannin, tossed in a game-high 18-points, including eight during what turned out to be the game's pivotal stretch. In a third quarter run her team managed to break open the game and move their lead into double figures.

In the first half the two teams alternated hot runs. The small team assumed the early advantage, behind seven of Cohasset's Marge Murphy's team-high 12 points, but an 18-10 second quarter, capped off by Whitman-Hanson's Linda Davidson's buzzer beater, helped the large team to a 26-23 halftime edge.

The whole complexion of the game underwent a radical change after the intermission, as both coaches opted to go to a more wide open posture, both offensively and defensively. The change turned out to work in favor of the large schoolers, specifically Reale, who did the bulk of her damage in the transition game.

In the final quarter the small league squad managed to fight back to some degree, once getting the margin as low as four on successive hoops by Hull's two-time All-Star guard Kris Fairbanks (8-points). However, the second of two three-pointers by Hanover's Kim MacDonald (11-points) and a few more baskets by Reale made it easy for the large division club to roll on.

Music in the schools

The "Music in Our Schools Concert and Art Show" is fast becoming a favorite program for the Cohasset community.

March 9 at 7:30 p.m. in the high school auditorium, we will again present young people in grades kindergarten through 12, performing choral music, band and orchestral pieces.

This year we celebrate 150 years of music in Massachusetts schools - the longest run in the United States!

Through the efforts of Lowell Mason musician and educator (1792-1872) and Samuel A. Eliot, a former mayor of Boston and one time Boston School Committee chairman music instruction by an individual teacher was included in the curriculum of the Boston public schools in 1883.

This launched the movement of music in our schools across the entire country.

And now we all enjoy the explosion of new music which has happened in the last 25 years. We continue to love the music of the past, always expanding our musical knowledge.

"The brain is never more fully engaged than when it is creating or expressing music," a finding that Colleen Foley, the high school instrumental teacher, reports has come out of repeated research on the functions of the brain.

Foley believes that as with any knowledge, music expands a child's world, offers opportunities and makes available many avenues of growth not otherwise visible.

Music offers the opportunity to work together with others as a team, blending with the group, while still retaining self identity. There is no other experience like being in the middle of a performing group surrounded by sound blending with one's own contribution.

As if to illustrate this experience, we will hear "The Toy Symphony by Leopold Mozart, father of Ammadeus Mozart. This beautiful composition will be performed by all ages and with surprise soloists.

Cohasset Arts Boosters salutes the foresight and intelligence of those women and men, who understood the sgnificance of music in education 150 years ago. And we salute our teaching professionals today in both music and art in the Cohasset public schools: Bryan Marks Colleen Foley, Jack MacInnis, Suzanne Parker from the music department and Colleen Lucas and Jean O'Malley of the art department.

The young artists and their teachers invite you to join them for refreshments in the Art Room and for an art show of great depth and talent. Our students have won awards in the visual arts and many have participated in art shows and contests.

This will be the opening of Youth Art Month which will expand into a festival of art resources with a career focus.

Watch for a contuning schedule of events which are being planned for March 22 - March 24.

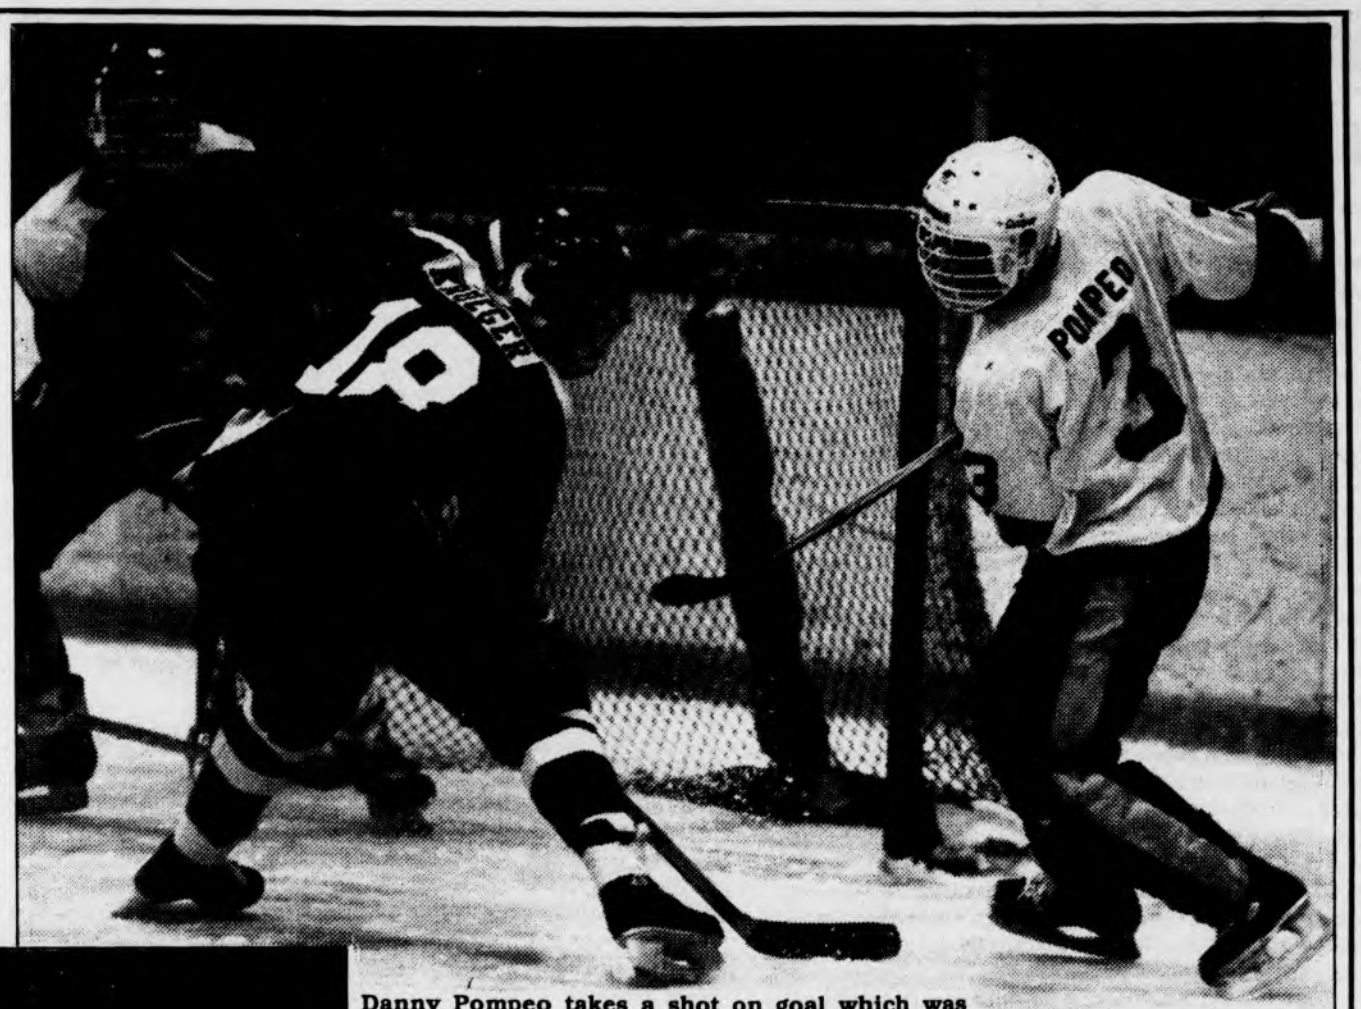
A (n)ice victory for Skippers

The only thing that could have stopped the Skippers Monday night in Bourne in their quarterfinals game, were the Skippers.

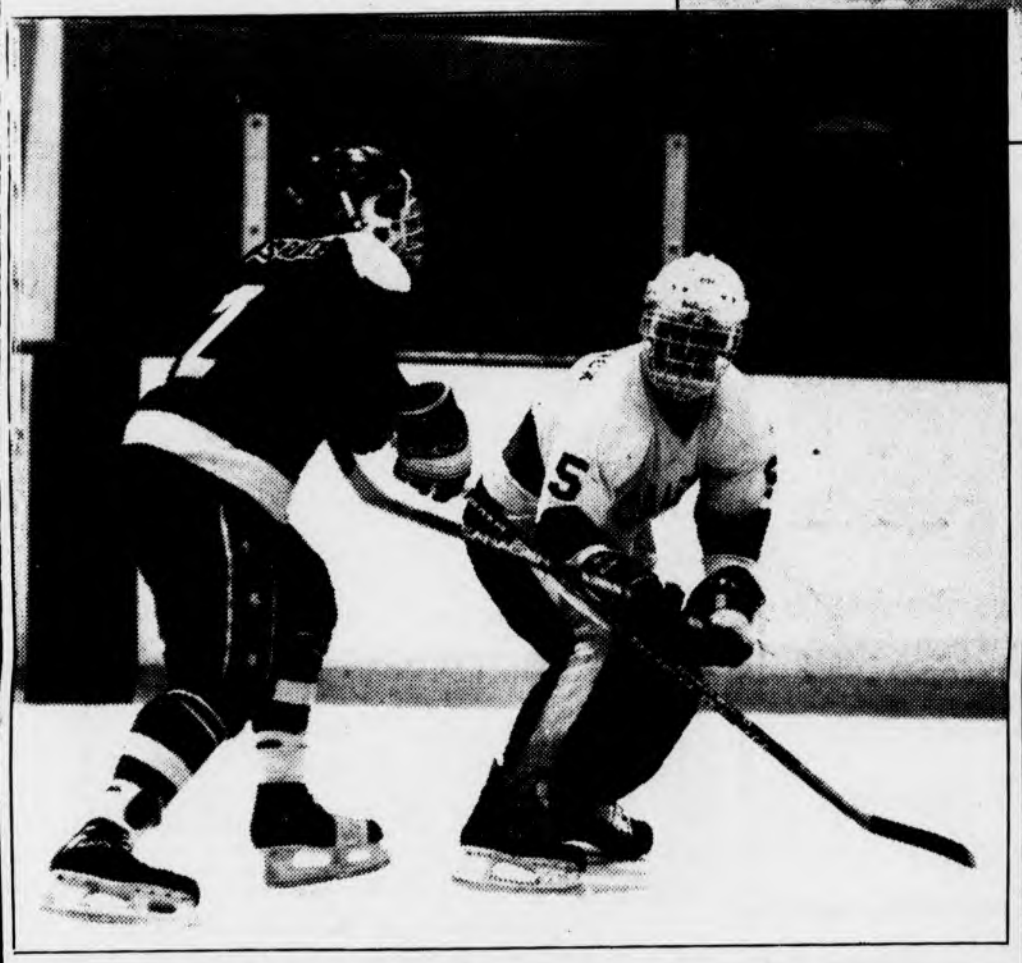
Basically, the Cohasset hockey squad seemed to do as it pleased, as they rolled over S.S.L. rivals Rockland, 11-4.

It was just one of those games in which, despite what the scoreboard read, doubt over the eventual outcome was practically nil. Even when the game was close, there was a degree of confidence among Cohasset partisans.

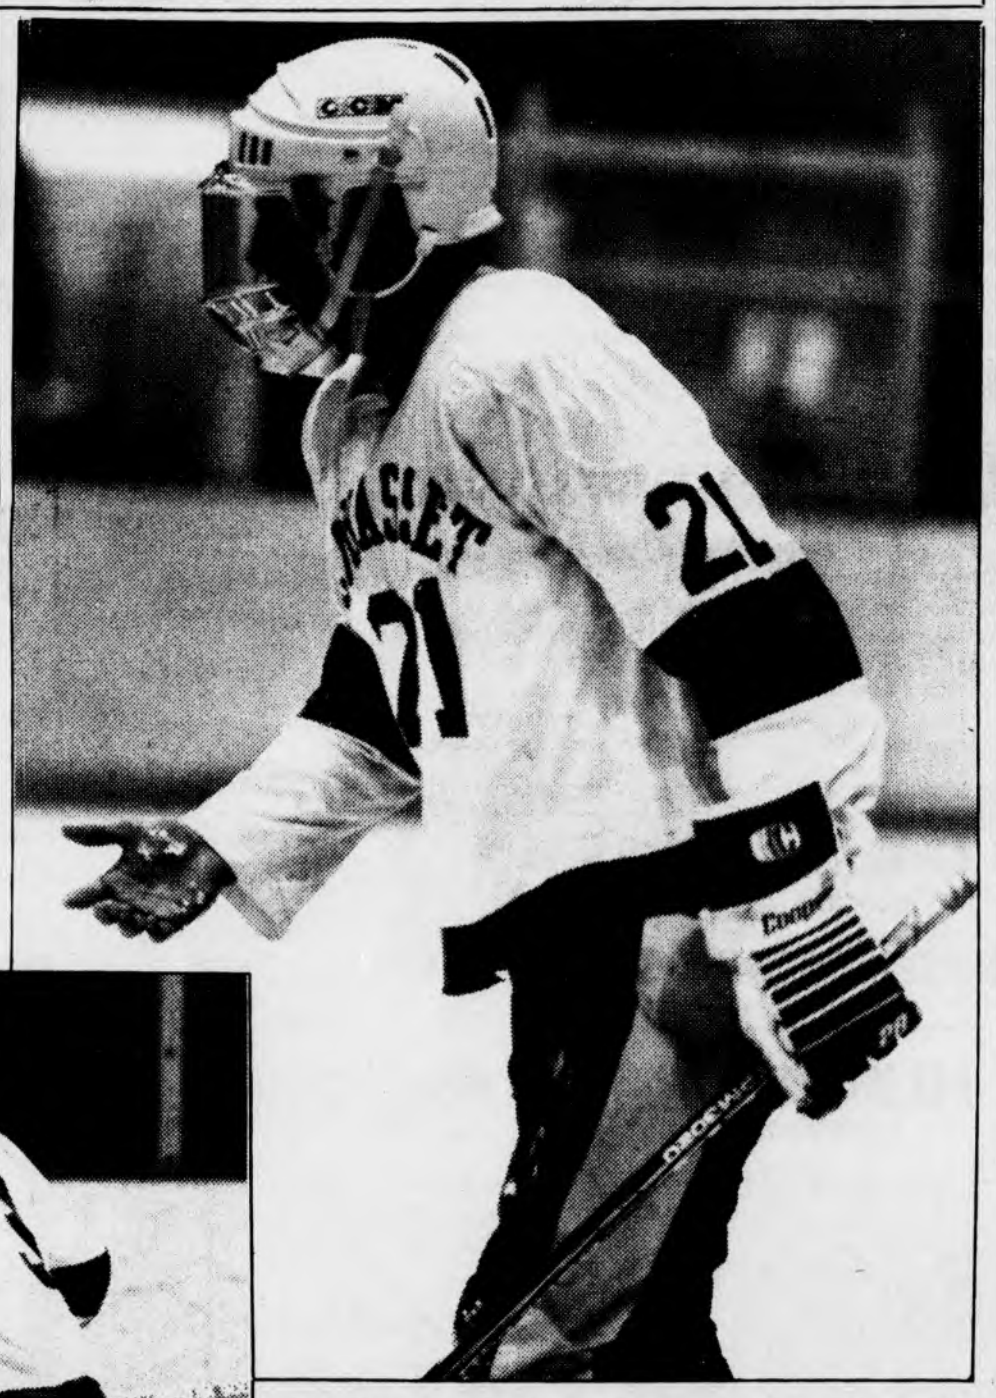
There was no reason it should have been otherwise. After all, the Bulldogs, who had been trounced twice in the regular season by the Skippers, had hardly proved worthy opponents in the past.

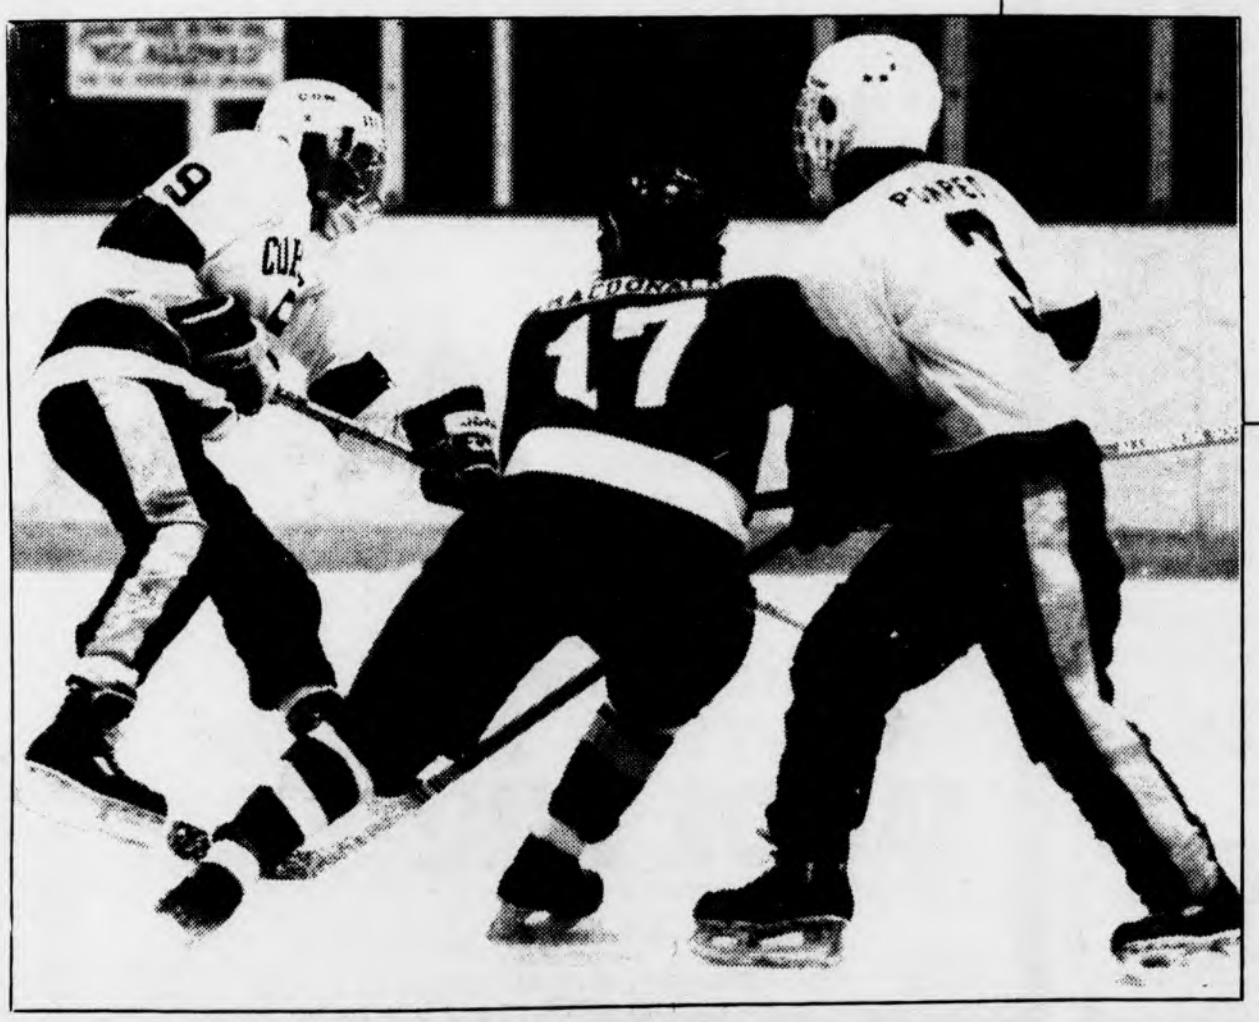


Danny Pompeo takes a shot on goal which was deflected by a Rockland opponent.



Todd Fitzpatrick was a big scorer for CHS in last week's regionals against Rockland.





Mike Anderson finds himself minus one glove during the CHS romp over Rockland.

With the win, Cohasset now advances to the semi-final round of the Division II South Sectionals of the Eastern Mass Tourney.

They are slated to meet Bishop Feehan, who have got a head of steam after their upset over second seeded Hanover, Thursday, at Walter Brown Arena (6:00 p.m.)

As is so often the case in the big games, the money players rose to the occasion. It was the South Shore League's most prolific scoring line which led the way to victory. Senior right wing Todd Fitzpatrick turned in an incredible five goal performance, while his center, senior Danny Pompeo, the leagues top scorer chipped in with four.

Craig Mulcahy takes a slap shot as he tries for a goal in the victory match last week.

All-Star extravaganza

By Mike Spellman
Mariner staff

Whether it is played at the professional, college or high school level, this is the event that even basketball haters have come to love. It makes one pause and consider: just what is it about an All-Star Game that makes it so appealing?

It's a chance for the elite to pool their talents. For many at the high school career, it is a final curtain call. And don't forget what a good barometer it is for measuring the true skills of an individual.

It's all of these things, but it's also more. First and foremost it is a show. In contemporary American society it has practically become the ultimate spectator's event. While it is true that sensational individual performances are the essence of the attraction, winning and losing takes a decided back seat.

The families, friends and fans who packed Norwell High School's gymnasium Friday night formed their own panels to see which could provide the loudest cheers. There was an incredible electricity in the air; and one may have easily been convinced that the outcome of the contest truly mattered. Naturally the cheers were sincere, but the overwhelming enticement was the exhibition itself.

It would be hard pressed to find anyone who would attest to being disappointed at the 105-103 double overtime large school (South Shore League's) team's victory.

For 39 minutes the game lived up to everything, and then some, its very title suggests. For 39 minutes there were the spurts and comebacks that would rarely be seen elsewhere, yet have come to be an expected element in all-star play. It all came down to a 19-footer by Duxbury's Scott McWilliams which fell, and a 23-foot jumper by Bryan Edwards of Cohasset, which clanged short, atop the rim and bounced out. When no one managed to control the rebound, time expired.

At halftime intermission, the large team was well in control at 51-32, thanks to a 33-13 second quarter fueled by Duxbury sophomore Bill Curley (22-points) and Rockland junior guard Dave McCarthy (a team-high 24-points). Few, if any, had thoughts of extended play, never mind a thrilling, down to the wire nailbiter.

However, to open the half, the small leaguers, on the strength of a Cohasset connection, put together a quick 11-4 run. Skippers' senior Mike Smith ignited the run with three strong moves inside the paint for hoops, while all-everything Edwards did his bit with two free throws and one of his game-high three three-pointers. Just like that they were within striking distance, especially in this type of wide open game.

Edwards (a game-high 37-points) and the troups continued to sneak back into it. With the inside damage done by Smith things opened up on the outside for Norwell's backcourt gunners Paul Flaherty and Bill Curtin (nine points), who responded by each knocking home a three-point bomb of their own. By the end of the quarter the advantage was all but erased, as the score stood at 68-63.

In the final eight minutes of regulation the capacity crowd really got into it, as the favorite small league team continued its surge. Twice inside the two minute mark they moved to within a single point, each time on three-pointers, the first by Abington's Jim Clarkson (nine-points) and the second by Edwards. However, both times the large division squad managed to kick it back up, thanks to some clutch free-throw shooting from McCarthy and Scituate's Chris Comrach (11-points).

With just 20 seconds remaining and the small schoolers trailing by four, Edwards was fouled on a drive and managed to convert on the two foul shots (the first one just barely sneaking over the front rim). Then he committed his sixth foul of the game on McCarthy, who had calmly canned four of his previous five attempts from the charity stripe. However, the junior missed the front end of the one-and-one, which Edwards snatched above the rim, managed to outrace the pack, and had only to pull a nifty half spin lay-in out of his bag of tricks to beat the lone defender. With a pair of 86's on the scoreboard, the first O-T period began.

The first overtime saw a similar scenario to that which capped off regulation play unfold, as the small school troups managed to put themselves in a four-point hole entering the final minute. But, again, with hoops by Jeremy Chennette (nine points) of Hull and Edwards, the tally was knotted up, 95-95, as time ticked off the clock once more.

The three minute ordeal proved to be a near perfect ending for the near perfect game. The score flip-flopped three, four times before McWilliams broke the 103-103 tie, with seven seconds remaining, when he took an inbounds pass and drilled his shot with both feet on the three-point line.

Sometimes, Less Is Best.

At Barstow, we just can't settle for anything less than the best . . . which is why we've decided to devote all our skill and energy to making dinner at Barstow an even more wonderful experience.

So, the bad news is that starting on February 28th, we won't be serving lunch. But the good news is that at dinner, our cuisine will be even more delectable and our service will be even more attentive.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88E0015-P2

To Thomas F. Manning, Jr. of Cohasset in said County, Quincy Savings Bank of Quincy in said County; and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Margaret Elgin a/k/a Margaret Manning of Milton in the County of Norfolk representing that she hold as joint tenant an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: That certain parcel of land situated in Cohasset, bounded and described as follows:

EASTERLY by the Westerly line of a New Right of Way, as shown on plan hereinafter referred to, two hundred fifty seven and 75/100 (257.75) feet;

SOUTHERLY by lot D, as indicated on said plan, and by lot E7, as shown on said plan, two hundred ninety seven (297) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY by the Southeasterly line of a Way, as shown on said plan, three hundred thirty eight and 02/100 (338.02) feet; and

NORTHERLY by a curved line on said Way, forty three and 89/100 (43.89) feet. Said parcel is shown as Lot E6 on a plan drawn by William S. Crocker, C.E. dated February 4, 1935, as approved by the Land Court, filed in the Land Registration Office as No. 1924X, a copy of a portion of which is filed in Norfolk Registry District with Certificate No. 13768, Book 69. The above described land is subject to the easement as set forth in Document No. 7705 so far as now in force and applicable.

setting forth that she desire that all of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than five hundred thousand dollars and praying that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of March 1988, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this twelfth day of February 1988.

Respect for Life: A group of women from our Parish recently visited the Mary-Martha Learning Center in Hingham. All were impressed by the lovely, bright, homey atmosphere of the facility and the dedication and caring attitude of its director and education person. The Center is already at full capacity and has a wide range of needs that our Respect Life Committee will try to meet in the coming months. This week we are asking if anyone has a sewing machine that could be donated to the Center. We have a volunteer to teach sewing classes but no sewing machine. Linens and crib sheets are needed in great numbers. If you can help with these items, please call Judy Fitzsimmons at 383-0567. Many thanks for the "Baby Shower" donations.

St. Mary's Parish services

Lenten spiritual program will be offered by St. Mary of the Assumption Parish in Hull at 3:30 p.m. Sundays during Lent at St. Ann's Church Hall, Lewis and Samoset Streets.

The program is based on the four steps of the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults (RCIA) and the focus is on Scripture, prayer and reflection.

Obituary

Conrad Ericsson

A memorial service will be held Saturday, March 5 at 2 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church for Conrad Ericsson, 76, who died Feb. 27 at South Shore Hospital. A private burial will be in Woodside Cemetery.

There will be no visiting hours.

Mr. Ericsson was a former member of the Cohasset Housing Authority, and was an honorary director of the Cohasset Historical Society.

He was a member of the Cohasset Council on Aging, the Cohasset Country Club and he was a volunteer for the Cohasset Consignment Shop of the Social Service League.

Mr. Ericsson was a retired salesman for the Chase Brass and Copper Co. in Waterbury, Conn.

An Army veteran of World War II, he was a sergeant in the State Guard.

Mr. Ericsson was born in Madbury, N.H., and attended Thompson Academy in Boston.

He leaves his wife, Lydia (Belham) Ericsson; a daughter, Nancy Knight of Cohasset; a brother, Earl Ericsson of Connecticut; two sisters, Ann Murphy of Nashua, N.H., and Hazel Damery of Concord, four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Memorial donations may be made to the Cohasset Historical Society, Summer Street.

Funeral arrangements were completed by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home of Norwell.

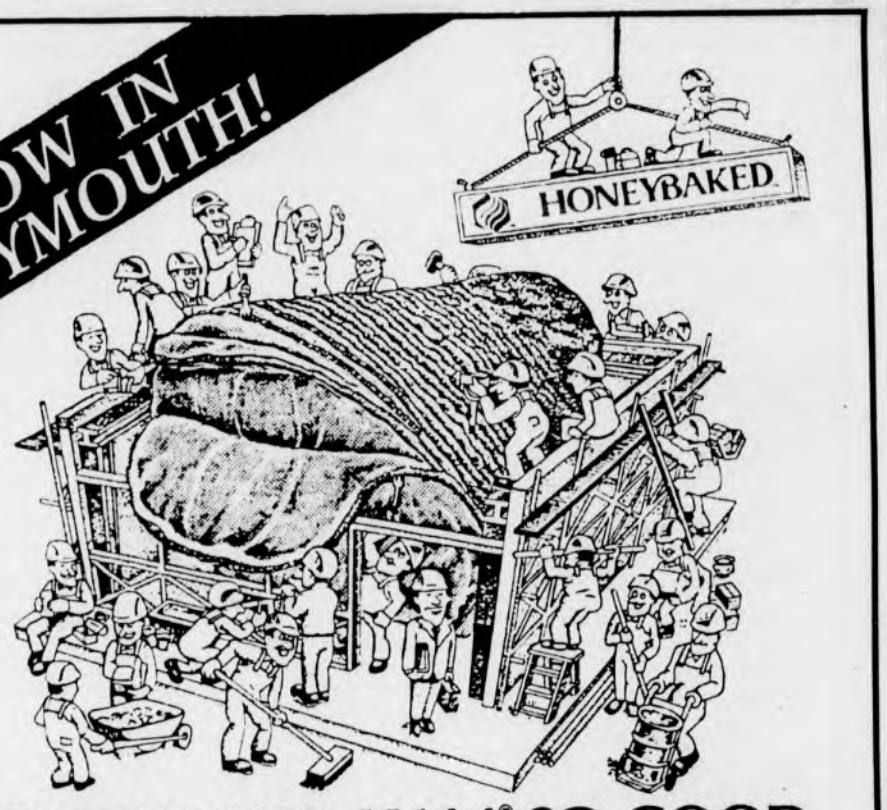
NOW IN WEYMOUTH!



HONEY BAKED HAM, SO GOOD WE BUILT A STORE AROUND IT.

For more than 25 years, Americans have enjoyed the unique flavor of Honey Baked Ham. Using our own family recipe, each ham is specially cured and slowly cooked in hickory smoke for up to 30 hours. Honey Baked Ham is spiral sliced... slices carved allowing the meat to remain on the bone. Each slice is just the right thickness to let you savor every bite. Then Honey Baked Ham is glazed with a secret blend of honey and spices that seals in the incredibly delicious flavor. Every ham is fully cooked, completely ready to serve.

Honey Baked Ham is sold only from Honey Baked Ham Stores. There are more than 100 HoneyBaked Stores across America, and we are proud to be in Weymouth. Call, or better yet, come by and taste the exquisite flavor of Honey Baked Ham.

Advisors seek reasons for budget upset

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The advisory committee will "strongly suggest" selectmen hire an independent auditor to review the town's proposed operating budget - figures that now appear to be $613,000 in the red.

The committee met Tuesday night to plan its fiscal strategy in the wake of an unexpected discovery last week which indicated the town will not be able to meet its FY 89 budget by more than $600,000.

But before plans for a complicated Prop. 2 1/2 override are finalized, the advisory committee wants to be assured warnings about this fiscal emergency are warranted.

Several members, including William Lean and Jill O'Donnell expressed skepticism about the budget imbalance. "I have a tremendous problem with these numbers," O'Donnell said, referring to an operating budget recap sheet presented to the committee last week by Town Accountant Mary Matthews that outlines the discrepancy.

"I would feel much better having someone come in (to audit the budget numbers and anticipated revenues)," O'Donnell added.

Matthews, who has had no previous municipal accounting experience, was recently hired by selectmen. She outlined her concerns to the advisory committee last week while Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, who had served as interim accountant, was away on vacation.

Chairman Jane Goedecke explained the advisory committee has no authority to hire anyone to review the numbers. "Then I suggest we send a letter to selectmen and say we feel strongly about this. I also think that if all the budgets we have gone through have to be cut

Our travels along the long road to the state finals

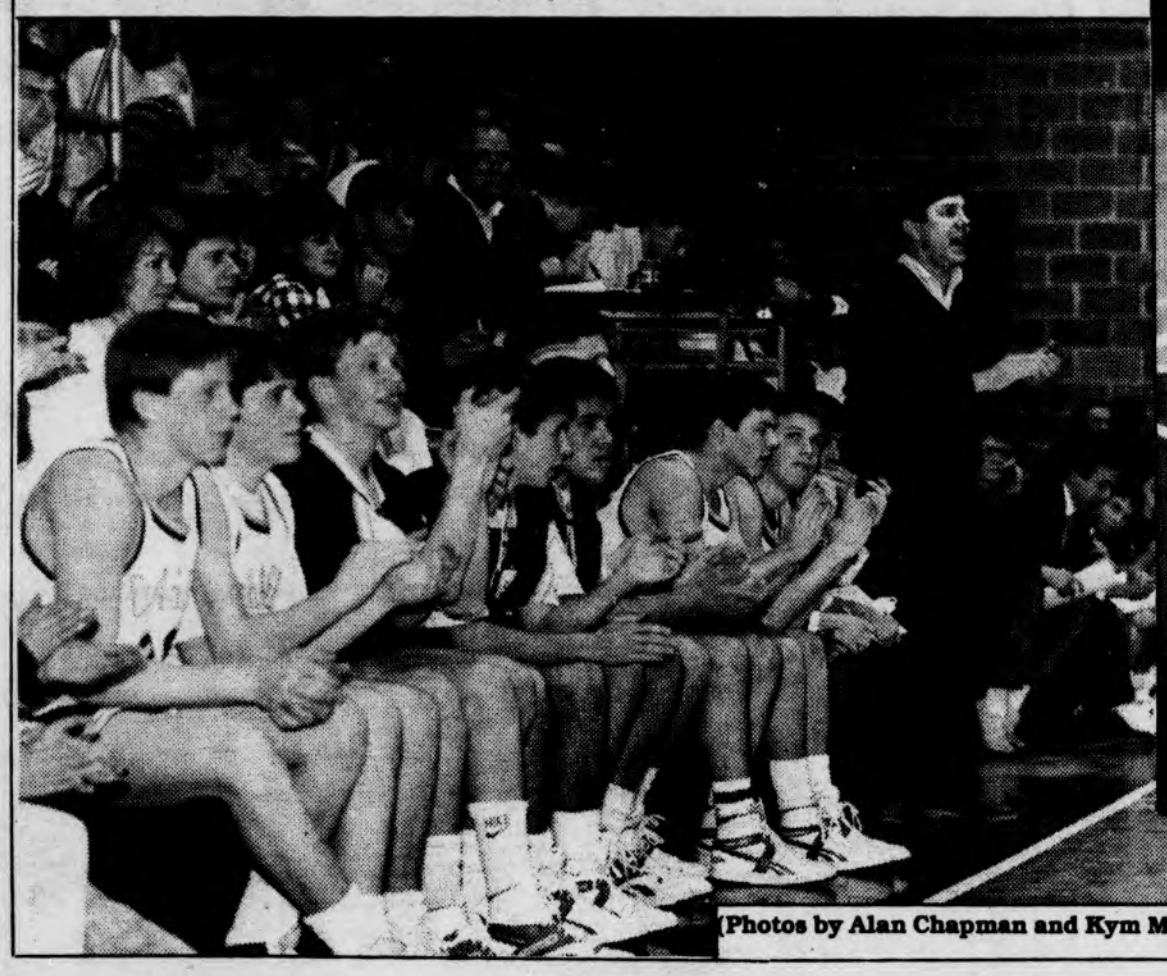
By Mike Spellman
Mariner correspondent

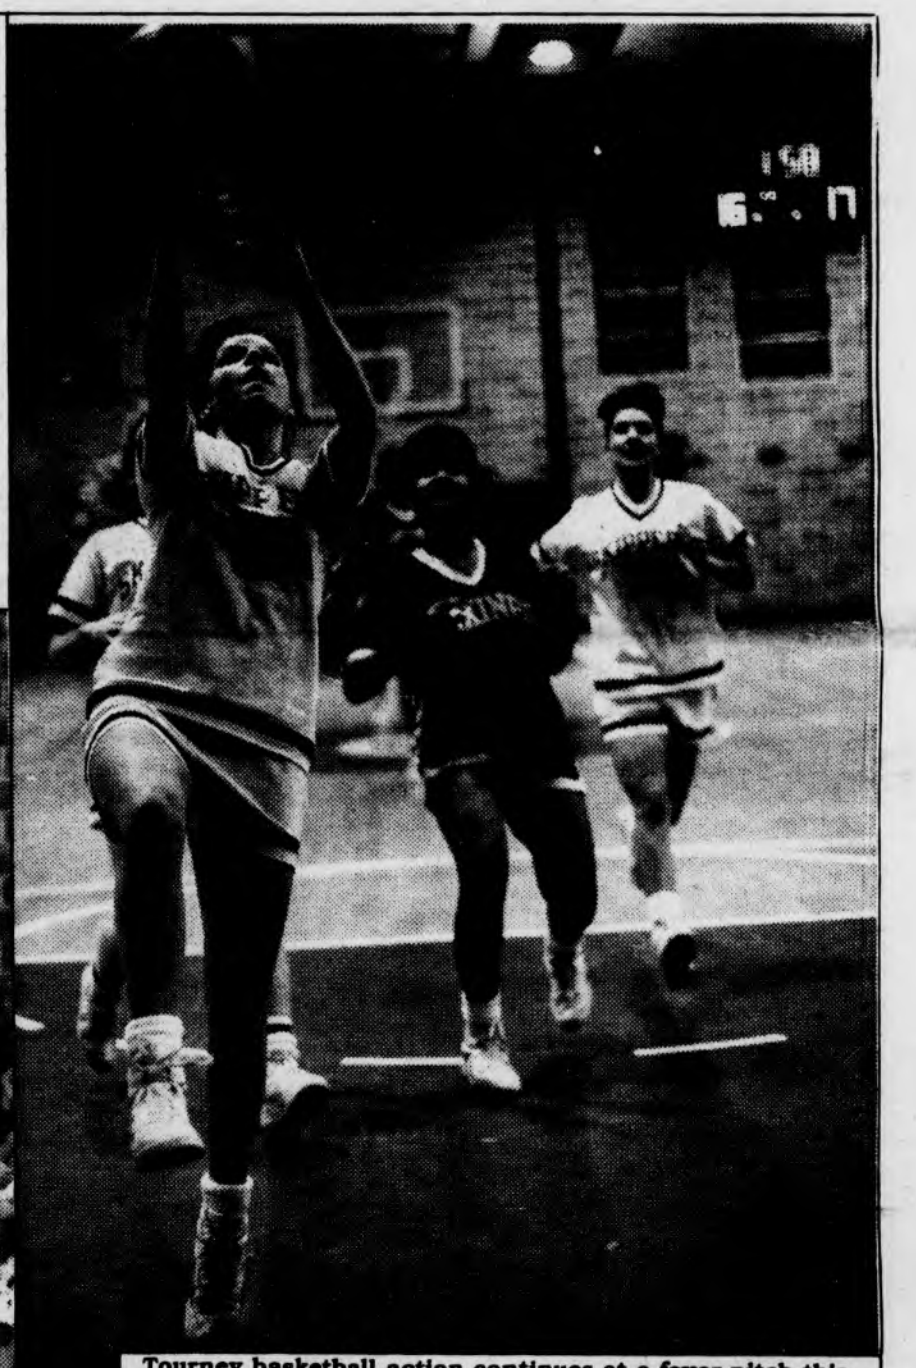
It has become tradition each March. Cohasset has been struck by basketball fever.

By the time anyone reads this report, it will be obsolete. The girls basketball team will either be on their way to the Division Three South Sectional Championship game or their 1987-'88 campaign will be over.

And the boys will be preparing for a showdown at Brockton High.

(See page 7)





(Photos by Alan Chapman and Kym Marcella)

Tourney basketball action continues at a fever pitch this week. Despite our hockey team's loss Monday night, the boys and girls hoop squads will continue their post-season competition. As Coach Eddie Minelli leads his team to victory against Sandwich, the girls squeaked by Wareham last week. Liz O'Leary is shown above in her typical aggressive style as she heads for the net.

Despite differences, CHL seeks compromise

While legal hassles persist, one man continues his fight to resolve the differences between the town and his business.

Attorneys for the town and Cohasset Heights Ltd. disagree on whether the town could pursue an offer to dump the town's trash at the commercial landfill.

As they continue to disagree, the owner of CHL is continuing his appeal this week with a written proposal sent to several town officials.

Paul Barry of CHL presented his written proposal to selectmen, and members of the water commission, board of health, and zoning board appeals, asking them to consider dropping litigation against the commercial landfill in return for free disposal of the town's trash for the next 15 to 20 years. The letter was hand delivered to most of the officials Tuesday afternoon.

In the open letter to the residents of Cohasset, Barry explained that taxpayers could be spending more than $400,000 to transfer their trash to Maine beginning next fall.

"Cohasset Heights Ltd. is two miles away and we are willing to accept the town's trash, up to 12 tons per day of household trash, five days a week at no disposal cost to the town," he wrote.

"My brother (John) and I opened the landfill six years ago . . . after six years it is time to make a move to settle this most costly lawsuit for the town of Cohasset and try to recover something from the many dollars spent," he continued.

Barry made the proposal to town officials last week. In return he requested that all litigation against CHL be dropped. Town officials have not responded to his offer.

Atty. Michael Leon who represents the town in litigation against the commercial landfill, acknowledged the propsal was "interesting. But it does not address the substantive issues of the safety of the landfill operations, which is the basis of our case against Cohasset Heights," he said.

"The merits of this proposal are unrelated to the town's concerns," he added. "We are concerned with the risks of continuing this

Waste symposium

The League of Women Voters of Weymouth, Hingham, and Cohasset will sponsor a Solid Waste Symposium and Fair to be held Saturday, March 26, at Weymouth North High School, 1051 Commercial St., East Weymouth from 12 to 5 p.m.

One of the most critical issues facing local governments is the safe disposal of waste according to the League. This fair is designed to provide the opportunity for local governmental representatives, private industry and interested citizens to explore all the options available in waste disposal technologies. There will be ample time to present questions and seek information from experts and vendors who will be participating.

Some of the activities planned for the fair include: newspaper and old tires collection; student poster contest; speaker Dr. Paul Connett of St. Lawrence University; exhibits from SEMASS, New England CRINC, MASS PIRG, and the Bridgewater Energy Center.

Music date changed

The all-school program entitled "Music in the Schools" which was scheduled for March 9 has been postponed.

Because of the basketball tournaments involving the girls and boys high school varsity teams, the music program has been rescheduled to March 22 at 7:30 p.m.

The public is invited to the program at the high school auditorium which is sponsored by the Cohasset Arts Boosters. Students in grades K through 12 will be performing choral music, band and orchestral music.

Following the musical entertainment, the public is invited to the art room for refreshments and an art show by the Cohasset students.

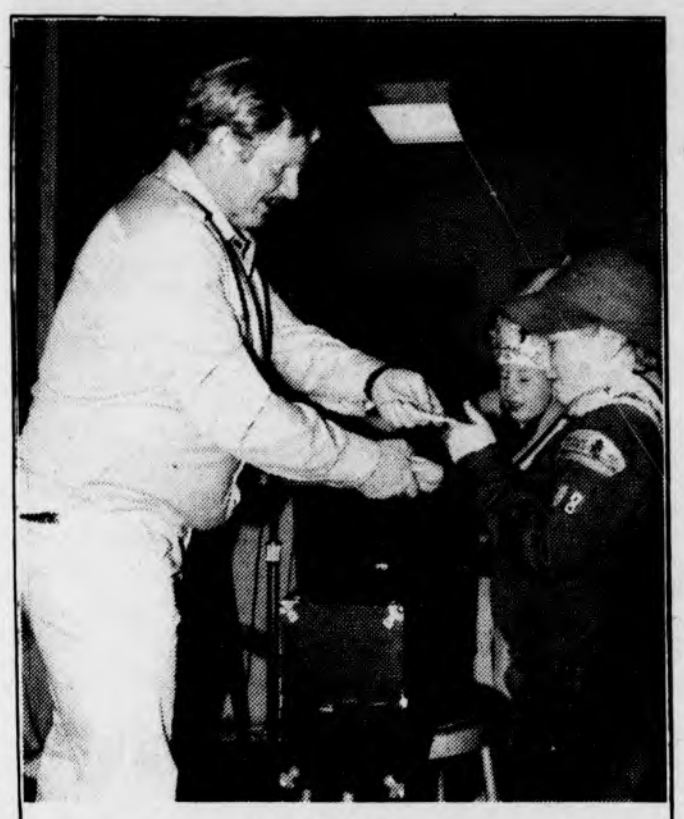
The special music and art event is part of Cohasset's celebration of Youth Art Month.

Incorrect candidacy

The Mariner incorrectly reported last week that school committee incumbent Barbara Bliss will face competition in the April election.

Bliss, a three-year veteran of the school board, is not opposed in her re-election bid.

John Russell Reidy is running for a three-year seat on the school committee, vacated when Chairman Joseph Nedrow announced his intention not to seek re-election to the board.



Greg Burton, 6, receives his merit pin during ceremonies held last weekend at the Cub Scout Blue and Gold dinner. (Chris Edwards)

Selectman Rocco Laugelle will have no opposition in his candidacy for a fourth term of office. Assessor Michael Patrolia is the only candidate for a three-year seat on the board of assessors. Richard Barrow, a current member of the recreation commission, will have no opposition in his bid for re-election.

There are four candidates for three seats on the board of trustees for the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. They are incumbents Elizabeth F. Eaton and Agnes McCann. Challengers for the three-year seats include Sigrid Carey and Katherine Sturtevant.

Michael Sullivan will be challenging Hugh Joseph Morgan for a three-year seat on the board of health. Incumbent Dr. John Burns will not seek re-election.

Planning board chairman Robert Sturdy will face a challenge from J. Stephen Bjorklund for a five-year term on that board.

James R. Sheerin is the only candidate for the three-year term on the board of water commissioners. Incumbent Lot E. Bates has decided not to seek re-election.

Sewer commissioner R. Gary Vanderweil Jr. will face competition from Lot W. Bates for a three-year seat on that board.

Transportation forum

State Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth testified at the Transporation 2020 forum held this past week in Boston.

An advocate for commuters on the South Shore, Golden said, "There is no single solution to (our) transportation problems.

"What we require are multimodal solutions which would include state aid for additional parking for commuter boat riders in Hingham and federal aid for the restoration of the Old Colony Memorial Railroad.

"Recognizing problems in transportation is not unique," he continued. "Recognizing the linkage between problems in housing, employment and transportation is.

"I congratulate the members of this panel for considering a combination of solutions and I urge the federal government not to leave out the state and the state not to leave out local governments in their efforts to solve these problems."

Transportation 2020 was initiated by the Advisory Committee on Highway Policy (ACHP), a coalition of more than 100 state and local government groups, highway-user organizations, trade and industry associations, civic leaders and private citizens.

Arts lottery applications

The deadline for the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council Grant Applications is April 1, for the current cycle.

Applications are available at the Cohasset Town Hall selectmen's office. Arts Lottery Grants are open to all committed artists and cultural groups.

Funding is made possible through the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council.

School committee approves testing change

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner Staff

A new form of standardized testing will aid teachers in better evaluating students' curricula needs.

The Cohasset School Committee voted Monday to combine the Senior Research Association (SRA) testing with the Educational Records Bureau (ERB) testing program.

Both programs evaluate a student's skill in the areas of mathematics, reading, spelling, language-arts, vocabulary and social studies.

By combining the two, the test results will aid in homogeneous grouping of students which makes for more effective teaching and will provide a very general curricula test enabling school officials and teachers to determine if certain areas of curricula needs enrichment, said William Kite, head of the English department at Cohasset High School.

He said the teacher will still have the "final word" on a student's assessment and the testing is only a "composite score which shows the student's level of academic skills."

"Testing is used as a backup," said Kite.

School Supt. Stephen Hart said the new form of testing will "allow us to identify students as a group."

According to testing research studies done at Columbia University, N.Y., the ERB test not only helps the students, but also helps their teachers determine curriculum effectiveness. This affects not only what they teach, but how they teach it. If students do not achieve a certain level, it may be a problem of teaching the wrong thing, to the wrong group, at the wrong time. The ERB helps by providing test data which teachers can use as a ruler against their lesson plans.

ERB researchers found that frequent testing closely monitors student progress and those falling behind receive immediate help. It also showed that testing encourages academic competition.

In other business, Supt. Hart announced a new senior elective International Relations. The class is similar to a current events type program except it deals in depth with such topics as how the United Nations functions within the world, U.S. — Mid-East relations, etc.

The board also voted the final budget of $5 million, but expressed concerns over the financial solvency of the town.

The board approved the 1988-1989 school calendar and voted to appoint Michael Gill, varsity softball coach, step two and John Rolandelli, junior varsity baseball coach step two.

The board went into executive session to discuss the collective bargaining issue.

R. Gary Vandweil Jr.

Coffee for candidate Vanderweil

Vanderweil will meet voters to discuss the campaign issues and his qualifications for re-election at a candidate's coffee Sunday, March 13 at 4 p.m. at the home of Sally Avery, 22 Surry Drive. Those interested in attending are encouraged to call in advance at 383-6043.

At a recent meeting with his campaign committee, Vanderweil said he remains hopeful about the prospects for an intermunicipal agreement with Hull. "I am very pleased that the Hull town government has put the identical article right back on the warrant for their annual town meeting April 11."

He added, because the agreement offers Hull so much in incentives, "once they hear all the merits of the proposal, it should succeed on the next vote."

Coffee for Lot Bates

The Lot W. Bates for Sewer Commission Committee held its first meeting, electing Chairman Lot. E. Bates of Beechwood Street and Jean Higgins of Todd Road as treasurer.

The Bates Committee has scheduled a coffee at Kimball's By The Sea, Sunday, March 20 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Bates welcomes this opportunity to discuss the many questions and concerns the voters of Cohasset may have regarding the town's sewer issues.

Bates was a candidate for the sewer commission last year. As promised, he has kept abreast of the issues facing Cohasset and hopes to serve as the town's elected representative on the sewer commission.

Advisors and selectmen review budget

again, then selectmen should go through their budgets first and cut them also," O'Donnell stated.

Committee members discussed how they would proceed with their budgetary responsibilities while awaiting a decision on the Prop. 2 1/2 override proposal. Martin Corry suggested that members should return to the town departments and ask them to further reduce their own budgets.

Member Arne Gjesteby suggested that a large chunk of money could be sliced from the town's special retirement fund. There is currently $730,000 in that fund. Gjesteby suggested that $334,126 the town owes to the Norfolk County Retirement System for pensions could be found in the town's special fund.

"Should we go to the departments and give them time to reduce their budgets by X-amount?" Goedecke questioned. "Or we could make a cursory look and see what things could be deferred without hardship, see where that gets us and make a tentative decision on the pension situation. If we find all that makes no difference, then we'll say this is the budget we're going with."

Members agreed they must continue some form of budget review until an official determination is made regarding the accuracy of the budget figures, or some movement is made to begin a Prop. 2 1/2 override.

If the $613,000 deficit is accurate, the town will not have enough money to operate, and there will not be enough money to consider warrant articles for capital expenses.

Goedecke explained selectmen must first vote to propose a tax override which requires varying majority votes of the board on the debt exclusion and general override issues. A debt exclusion override will then require a two-thirds majority vote by election ballot. It will not be accrued onto the tax base in subsequent years. A general override, which may also be required, will be rolled over annually. The two overrides, which must be approved by special election ballot and later by town meeting, will allow the town to exceed its tax limitation by five percent for the coming fiscal year.

Advisory member O'Donnell questioned whether they could prepare the budgets and educate the public about the override issues before the scheduled April 2 town meeting. Other members suggested that the meeting be postponed until all information is gathered.

But member Lean was adamant that an independent review of the budget be conducted before more steps are taken to support an override. "I do not believe that $600,000 is the real number. I think these are bogus numbers and I won't consider it (an override) when I feel these are bogus numbers.," he said.

Selectmen voted Monday to support the advisory committee's emergency efforts to resolve the town's fiscal dilemma.

"We have no other choice," Selectman Burt Pratt told despondent members of the advisory committee.

Following a lengthy discussion with selectmen, advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke suggested a bottom line budget figure should be given to each town department head in an effort to stave off a complete shutdown of town business.

Advisors met Monday night with selectmen to discuss the $613,000 the town needs to meet its proposed operating budget for the coming fiscal year. That figure was given last week to advisors by Town Accountant Mary Matthews after she discovered an error in the estimated annual town receipts that caused the budget shortfall.

Town officials agreed this week that her calculations are likely correct and the town is now more than $600,000 shy of meeting its operating expenditures for the next fiscal year.

In addition to paring down proposed FY 89 budgets previously approved by the advisory committee, selectmen agreed that a Proposition 2 1/2 debt expenditure and general override will be proposed next month.

The exact procedure has yet to be worked out, but voters will be asked to approve a debt exclusion override for the coming year, and a general override of the state legislation which will be carried over annually. Voters must approve the debt exclusion override by a two-thirds majority vote. The issue must also be placed on the ballot at a special election prior to the town meeting vote.

"Heads will have to be cut," advisory member Arne Gjesteby said, predicting that some departments will be forced to eliminate personnel in order to pare down the $600,000 budget deficit.

"The most important thing is to know how to proceed," said advisory chairman Goedecke. "We are going to have to face this. How did this happen, and how will it not happen again? It's important we understand how it happened - there are no guarantees it will not happen again."

Gjesteby answered, "People will want to know. Selectmen said we could afford a town hall and a fire station. This has been completely mismanaged."

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle agreed. "We have to explain this to the people. Otherwise, we're going to get zero."

Goedecke said in addition to paring down the previously-approved budgets, including the proposed school budget of $5.1 million, an override is necessary. "We can't exist without both," she said. "We have $1.6 million in money articles in the warrant and we are short $600,000

Advisors ponder budget override

in our operational budget. We can't exist without both (methods to balance the town budget)."

Town Accountant Matthews, who was hired by selectmen last fall, explained that after reviewing town receipts and state cherry sheet revenues announced last week, she discovered the budget imbalance.

According to Matthews, she used the operational budgets already approved by the advisory committee, together with the estimated school budget and figured in the 1989 tax levy limit and estimated new growth numbers. Together with the cherry sheet revenues of 1,770,000 (about $7,000 less than this year's revenues), estimated local revenues (which she said are projected the same as last year), Matthews calculated "the town is out $613,000."

Although Selectman Rocco Laugelle said Matthews should have the figures re-checked if she is in doubt, the town accountant said she is certain of their accuracy. She noted that Cohasset must raise $12,008,000 to meet its budget, as compared to $11,860,000 last year. According to her estimates, Cohasset will only be able to raise about $11,400,000 from taxes and revenues.

In addition, the town's free cash reserve, used to purchase capital equipment and to pay for services provided the town, will be about $307,000 after town meeting.

Assessor James Lagrotteria told Matthews that estimated new growth will be at least $100,000 this year. "But it won't be $600,000," he assured town officials, noting that assessors will be able to provide a precise figure "as soon as possible."

Selectman Cliff Mitman said, "realistically we can't get down back to below the limit. We've got to have room to negotiate pay increases and to pay increases for non union employees."

Goedecke also noted that with the $100,000 bill for the oil spill clean-up from the water department, a transfer station for the landfill and other unpaid bills, there is about $150,000 in costs that special town meeting is obliged to pay.

"This has been extremely upsetting," she added. "I have racked my brains trying to find how this happened to all of us. I do not have the answer."

"There should have been clues," Selectman Martha Gjesteby said.

"There definitely should have been," answered Matthews. "I can definitely see right off if there is an overestimate of revenues. I know how much our tax levy is up. Each year the free cash has been going down."

Goedecke noted that when she first became acquainted with town finances, the free cash reserve was about $1 million. "Now it's down to $300,000 in a three or four-year period," she said.

Assessor Lagrotteria said that board was "tipped off" when the town treasurer had to boorow in anticipation of taxes in October, only two weeks before the new tax rate was certified. "We were astounded and embarrassed," he said. "We saw the problem in October - that was a clue to us. We sent selectmen a letter in December asking you to talk about this. There were signs all along."

Mitman added, "we were just surprised it happened so fast."

Sohier Street resident Robert Davenport attended the Monday night meeting and asked selectmen where the estimated local revenue figures originate. He was told they are estimated by the town accountant.

"There were three or four people in that office the last couple of years," Selectman Laugelle answered.

Matthews explained that local revenues have not been set for the next fiscal year. But she explained the previous year Cohasset was reimbursed for Hurricane Gloria damage which will not be included next year, and she predicted motor vehicle tax income will not be as high as the previous year.

In a discussion with town counsel about the procedure for a Prop. 2 1/2 override, Goedecke cautioned that issues should be clarified for voters. "We have one month until town meeting. Our committee will continue to make decisions on the warrant, but we are going to have an acute problem dealing with the budget," she warned, noting that there is a 7.8 percent operating increase in next year's total budget, which only includes negotiated salary increases and hikes in the landfill and board of health budgets.

"When I looked through the budgets to see what has been cut, I do not see an increase in services. It's a maintenance budget right now," she added.

"The only thing you can do is cut the operating budget by $600,000," Town Counsel Richard Henderson warned.

"Or close the doors," Selectman Laugelle added.

"I remember," said Henderson, "a discussion at special town meeting when we went ahead with the town hall and the fire station and we were told it wouldn't be a problem. Now in 12 months $600,000 slipped through the cracks."

Speaking for herself, Goedecke said the advisory committee must go back and look at the budgets again "and make them sqeaky, strangling budgets.

"It's a sad thing," she said. "We already have a school department operational budget that is strangling - and other departments too. We were just trying to fix them to where they were before - to get the things they must have. Now we must cut those operational budgets - to get people to vote for an override."

Selectman Laugelle added, "we're not just looking for an override like some towns. We have to have an override."

Barry presents free offer to town

operation - risks caused by leachate and storm water runoff into the public drinking supply."

The town's special counsel said he would be willing to listen to the proposal, and he would advise the health board to do the same. "Any proposal from CHL is certainly something that has to be looked at. But the issue of the town dropping all litigation is another separate issue," he noted.

"It's a possibility," Atty. Leon said regarding Barry's offer. "I can't speak for the board of health, but nothing is out of the question. But at this point, the board of health remains extremely concerned with the landfill operation."

Atty. Leon noted that the two sides met Wednesday morning, Match 9, to discuss negotiations on the DEQE landfill expansion approval. Although no definitive answers resulted from the meeting, Atty. Leon said negotiations will continue and that some progress toward a settlement was made.

In his letter to town officials, Barry said he plans to make the landfill "safer than ever with a new wastewater treatment plant to treat the leachate to drinking water quality standards." In addition, the landfill recently received state DEQE approval of "an expensive odor control facility."

The landfill owners are also involved in investigating the contamination of the former Nike site next door to their business.

"It is time to end this costly litigation - money the town could be spending elsewhere - Milliken/Lillard Field, a new senior center," the letter continued. Barry proposed free disposal from the Cedar Street dump to the commercial landfill for the next 15 to 20 years. The result will be enormous savings to the town in concluding the litigation between Cohasset and the landfill," he said, adding, "I hope to come to some solution."

Atty. Anton Moehrke, representing the landfill owners, applauded Barry's efforts and called the peace-treaty a "definitive possibility."

"From a legal standpoint, this is a tremendous compromise between the two sides," he stated. "It could save the town hundreds of thousands of dollars - an offer that could stand for years.

"I think the town has some substantive problems with its legal arguments," he continued, explaining that CHL is considering "appropriate action" against the town's appeals board for exceeding the statute of limitations in its appeal of CHL's building permit.

Atty. Moehrke noted, " now we've made this offer, and the town has simply not yet followed up on it."

Officials ponder override . . .

"It's important to make people understand this is not a frivolous request," Atty. Henderson said.

Selectmen voted to support the advisors' efforts to cut the budgets as much as possible "in concert with department heads," Selectman Pratt noted.

"If we cut the school budget, we're cutting heads," advisory member Gjesteby said. "The only way is to cut heads."

"We may have to cut many heads," Selectman Laugelle added.

Although fifty-five percent of the total budget is for school expenses, a greater percentage of the cuts will not be aimed at the schools. "In dollars they will be hardest hit," Goedecke said, explaining that because it is the largest budget, a set percentage will mean more affected dollars. "But certainly there will be pain across the board. The smallest department needs the smallest cuts to be deeply affected."

In recommending a budget reduction procedure, Goedecke noted, "The only thing we (advisory committee) can say is what we said to the board of health 'that budget is too high.' We gave them a bottom line and they decided where to cut. Maybe this isn't the best way, but we could give the departments a bottom line and they could cut. There's also a time factor - in four weeks we can't go over each department again. Physically, the only way is a bottom line basis."

Selectmen supported that suggestion, while requesting that assessors accelerate their estimates of tax revenues.

The road to two championships . . .

At Oliver Ames High School in Easton Wednesday night, Bill Fallon's female Skippers will be looking to repeat the success of their male counterparts over a basketball team from Dover-Sherborn High School (Tuesday night Eddie Minelli's boys beat the male Raiders in Norwell 87-84) in the semi-final round of the Eastern Mass. Tourney's South Sectionals.

Thus far, their survival in post-season play has been achieved via victories over Wareham (48-39 Thursday) and Hopkinton (55-40 Saturday).

In last Thursday's March 3 contest, the girls came out on top with what appears to be a relatively cushy 48-39 cushion, but this final tally is actually quite deceptive.

For three quarters the 18th seeded Wareham (12-9) girls gave the second seeded Skippers (21-1) all that they could handle, playing them to a 31-31 standstill. However, the superior team prevailed in crunch time. But not before they, as well as the partisan Cohasset crowd, received a real good scare.

In the final eight-minute period, it was Cindy Spooner who got the home team off on the right foot, scoring six of her team high 14-points early in the quarter. But it was the speedy Marge Murphy (14-points as well) who stole the show, causing four Wareham turnovers, which precipitated her team's finally getting into their fast-break mode.

"I thought we were just a little nervous in the first half, said an obviously-relieved Coach Fallon following the game. "We were confident we'd come back in the second half though."

After the first quarter, Fallon and his team were brimming with confidence, having played a shaky first quarter and still sitting on a 13-8 lead. However, this complacency contributed a great deal to the Skippers going into the halftime intermission in a position they had not found themselves in in any of their previous 20 games: they were behind (22-20).

Coming out of the locker room, Cohasset seemed to begin to finally settle into the game, especially at the defensive end, as they held their opponents to just nine points, and tied the score at 31 heading into the final quarter.

Also turning in a valuable effort for the Skippers was senior point guard Liz O'Leary (13 points), who was quite possibly the key to the Cohasset offense finally clicking into gear.

Ironically, it was perhaps this shocking brush with early elimination that most aided the Skippers in Saturday night's game. No doubt, at least partial credit for the relative ease with which they dispatched of an extremely strong Hopkinton team (7th seed, 16-2), can go to this near mishap.

Once again in the friendly confines of their own gym, the Cohasset girls managed to gain control of a close game in the second quarter, stretch their lead into double figures and never look back.

Spooner again led the way on the scoring end for the Skippers, in an 18-point, 12 rebound performance which included a perfect 10-for-10 mark from the free-throw line. However, three of the senior's fellow starters also turned in double figures in scoring. O'Leary was again outstanding in her all-around game with 13-points and eight steals. And Murphy and Debbie Hartley played vital roles as well (12-points apiece).

The Skippers trailed by one, 7-6, at the first break. But in the second, when they clamped down a man-to-man attack at the defensive end, the whole complexion of the game began to change, as the home team managed to more than double their previous quarter's offensive output and take a comfortable 21-12 lead into the locker room.

Hopkinton, a far bigger team up front, never really was allowed the opportunity to take advantage of their size, as Cohasset held their own under the glass. However, the key, according to Fallon, was the press he deployed and his team carried out to near perfection.

"I think the press really got to them in the second quarter," said the head coach after the game, "and they (Hopkinton) didn't have anyone who could keep up with Liz O'Leary."

A suggestion for Cohasset High's boys basketball enthusiasts: for Friday night's South Sectional Championship game against the winner of the semi-final match between Wareham and Bellingham, at Brockton High school (7:00 P.M.): don't forget to wear blue and white to clearly distinguish your loyalties.

And bring a paper bag in case of hyperventilation! It appears that Eddie Minelli's hoop troups have a genuine penchant for throwing scares into their fans.

For the second straight game Tuesday night (March 8) in the Norwell High gymnasium filled well beyond its capacity, Cohasset came out on the tall end of a nail-biter.

Dover-Sherborn appeared to be a far more capable opponent than Fairhaven, who the Skippers defeated in their quarterfinal match Thursday night (March 3) in a 74-63 thriller (don't let the final score mislead you into believing otherwise). The Raiders (of D-S High) (16-4, 11th seed) came into their semi-final match against the highly-touted Skippers with every intention of becoming the tourney's Cinderella team.

Had it not been for Cohasset senior Dave Shumaker's hauling down a Mike Smith block, and his sinking of two subsequent free throws with three seconds remaining in the three-minute over-time period, the underdogs may have accomplished their goal.

Initially, the contest was sent into extended play as the result of a three-point heave by Raiders high point man Chris Paulic (34 points), which knotted the score at 77-77 with just one second remaining in the game.

This capped off an 11-3 burst by the Tri-Valley League representatives over the final 2:40, the last of many substantial leads the Skippers squandered over the course of the 32-minute regulation.

With 1:20 left in the fourth quarter, and the score tied at 74-all, Coach Minelli showed how much faith he places in his team's composure. He opted to hold the ball for one good shot opportunity. At the 29-second mark, with the Raider defense having opened up their zone, senior point guard Dave Schultz (8-points) hit teammate Matt Maloney. The Skipper's senior forward was quickly fouled before he could spin to shoot the lay-up.

Maloney, who had missed the front end of a one-and-one just 66 seconds earlier, calmly swished the tie-breaker. He missed his second attempt, which Bryan Edwards snatched away from a would-be Raider rebounder and banked his shot in. This was just the beginning of the heroics for Edwards.

On three consecutive possessions in the O-T the Skippers captain provided six big points. Each one was more magnificent than the last, each pushing his team ahead (81-79, 83-81 and 85-84).

"Going into the over-time, I felt I had to take over a little bit," said the Bay State's most highly-regarded basketball player after the game, "because I knew my teammates expect a lot of me."

Edwards finished up the high-scorer with 39-points, which included converting on 18 of 22 free throw attempts.

However, this was hardly a one-man show. Mike Smith, Cohasset's other All-Star, knocked down 17-points, nine of which came in the first quarter. The senior forward was plagued by foul trouble, picking up his fourth midway through the third quarter. But the remaining eight points he scored, the final two of which kicked off the scoring in O-T, as well as the rest of his performance, proved to be invaluable.

In fact, just about everyone Coach Minelli put on the floor made a valuable contribution. Schultz hit some key shots, directed the offense, and played an excellent heads-up game. Jason Marsac (six points) and Dennis Jones (eight points) performed capably. And, of course, Maloney and Shumaker made their presence felt in many ways.

Incidentally, there is an added incentive for attending Friday night's Championship Game at Brockton High School. With just 21 more points to go, Bryan Edwards, who averages 35 ppg, will surpass former Catholic Memorial great Ronnie Perry's state scoring record of 2,481 career points.

Papermaking at art center

Artist Annie Silverman comes to the South Shore Art Center for a papermaking lecture and demonstration as the Center's Sunday-at-the-Center series continues.

Sunday, March 13 from 3-5 p.m. Silverman will illustrate for her audience the processes of papermaking and describe with the aid of slides the history of papermaking.

Advanced registration is required and may be made at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

Sunday, March 20, psychotherapist and artist consultant Alan Cohen will explore the various psychological dilemmas and decision points facing today's artists.

Silverman's demonstration will include the actual sheet forming techniques for papermaking and using additional slides she will show the workings of contemporary papermills. Currently Silverman is an instructor of papermaking, collage and construction courses for the Massachusetts College of Art, the Department of Continuing Education.

For further information on Silverman's papermaking demonstration or the March 20 lecture, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. The Sunday-at-the-Center series is made possible by grants from the Joseph Drown Foundation, the Harold Brooks Foundation and the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council through the Arts Councils of Braintree, Duxbury and Weymouth.

around town

□ Cohasset residents Martha and Patricia Dellorfano have achieved honor roll status at Notre Dame Academy for the second marking period. Both girls are members of the senior class and both earned second honors.

□ Ester Pratt of Highland Ave. has been named to the Dean's List at Simmons College in Boston for the fall semester. She is a senior at Simmons.

□ Kimberly S. Zaslow, of Black Rock Rd., has been named to the Dean's List at Simmons College in Boston for the fall semester. She is a junior at Simmons.

□ Two delightful Hingham woman Mullen and Fitzpatrick have opened "Creative Accents" — which is located right across the street from Kimball's By-the Sea, in the former Print Room Shop.

They are quite an inventive pair, and their shop will delight you! Make sure you stop by and say hello. They do executive gift buying and can provide those special accents for special parties, wedding receptions. They're open Thursday through Saturday.

□ Bryan Edwards makes the news again this week! He has been invited to participate in the 15th annual McDonald's Capital Classic All-Star game. The event will be played on Saturday, April 9th, in Washington, D.C. The game will be televised "live" on ESPN at 1:30 p.m. Bryan also will be in on a tour of the White House, a special guided tour of Washington, D.C., and a visit to the Ronald McDonald House. As the letter stated, Bryan is one of a very select group to have the opportunity to continue in the traditions of such former high school All-Americans as Magic Johnson, Clark Kellogg, Ralph Sampson, James Worthy, Isaiah Thomas, Dominique Wilkins, Michael Jordan, Patrick Ewing, Danny Ferry, Jeff Lebo, and J. R. Reid, all of whom participated in Previous McDonald's Classics. Congratulations, Bryan, we'll be watching on April 9th.

It's time to wish a very special fella a Happy 75th birthday! Here's to "Uncie" Fred Dolan, hope your day is as special as it can be! Uncle Fred used to fly with Pappy Boyington, so he certainly has a lot to remember on his super day.

This past weekend, Krissy Pozatek qualified to participate in the Eastern U.S. Junior III Ski Olympics to be held at Pico, Vermont, March 5th and 6th by placing fourth overall in the Junior III Alpine Ski State Championship held at Waterville Valley, New Hampshire. In addition, she was also named to the New Hampshire Junior III Alpine Ski Team. Krissy, who is an honor student at Derby Academy, is appearing for the second straight year at these Junior Olympics. She is the daughter of Zig and Ellie Pozatek. We will all be awaiting the results, Krissy, let us know how you do!

□ Ken and Sue Fone are a happy pair lately, and the reason is that their son, Scott, is finally back in New England! Scott and his wife Nanette are now residents of Bath, Maine, and are delighted with the move. Much luck and success to you both.

□ If you aren't already proud of the Cohasset High Sports Program, this will do it for you! Marge Murphy, Cindy Spooner and Liz O'Leary were all chosen for the Girl's Basketball All Star Team; Glenn Froio, Doug Bennet, Peter Buckely, Greg Nourie, and Chris Froio were chosen for the All-Star Wrestling Team (Glenn and Doug went on to the New England's this past weekend); and, Craig Mulcahy, Todd Fitzpatrick, and Dan Pompeo made the hockey All-Stars. An outstanding achievement indeed, especially when you consider that we have one of the smallest enrollments in the League! Take a well-deserved bow, ladies and gentlemen.

□ Congratulations go to Gail Collins, who won the brand new car at the New Super Stop and Shop drawing. The drawing was part of the grand opening that took place a few weeks ago. Gail can head up there often in her new vehicle, and we are sure that she'll think of Stop and Shop every time she drives (if the kids don't get the keys first, right Gail?).

□ To all of you students that are would-be politicians comes a note from our State Rep., Mary Jeanette Murray. She would like you to participate in student government days at the state house. You can learn about State Government, facts and figures about the Commonwealth, and learn the legislative process. Get involved, call Mrs. Murray.

□ Donna Green, Cohasset's own talented artist, was seen at Yankee Village Workshop recently. Donna was demonstrating her artistic ability, and it sure was fascinating to watch her. Oh, to have such talent. . . .

□ This weekend the CHS Drama Club took part in the Drama Festival performing "Fortress." At this time, we don't know how they placed, but one can assume they did well, as they surely are a talented crew! Good luck.

□ If you have a few hours to spare a week, why not give Anita Bernstein a call. Anita reports that she has lost several of the drivers that deliver Meals on Wheels, and more are desperately needed! It only takes a little while, and the people who receive the lunches are a grateful lot! If you can spare a half hour or so, give Anita a call at 383-0812, there will certainly be those that are glad that you did.

□ That's the news from here, we are waiting for your call to let us know what's new!

□ Happy 21st birthday to Mark Lahive!

The Green Dragon slays CHS . . . again

By Mike Spellman
Mariner correspondent

It turned out to be everything a high school hockey game was meant to be. It was a delight for the hundreds of Cohasset and Duxbury residents who crowded B.U.'s Walter Brown Arena Monday night to watch South Shore League rivals battle it out for top honors in the South Sectionals of the Eastern Mass. Division Two Hockey Tourney.

However, just 1:40 into the first sudden death period, it was the Duxbury loyalists who were rewarded when senior forward Peter Moffat scored his second goal of the evening. For the scores of supportive Skipper-maniacs, the short end of the 4-3 thriller was an extremely bitter pill to swallow.

After all, far more was riding on the outcome of this game than just the South Sectional Championship. During the regular season the Green Dragons had simply had Cohasset's number. Twice they met in league play and twice Duxbury came away the easy winners (7-2 and 6-0, respectively).

A large part of the unprecedented success the Green Dragons enjoyed this season in their metings with the Skippers was, as the two previous scores indicate, their unexplainable ability to neutalize the S.S.L.'s highest scoring line.

The prolific three, Brian Pompeo, Danny Pompeo and Todd Fitzpatrick (the latter two combined to score 13 of their team's previous 15 tourney goals), failed for only the second time in the '87-'88 campaign (the first obviously being the Duxbury shut-out) to score at least one goal.

After 14:13 of a scoreless 15-minute final period, outstanding Cohasset defenseman Craig Mulcahy, the scorer of all three Skipper goals, managed to beat Duxbury netminder Marty Hauber (27 saves) with a low slapshot. It tied the score and prolonged the near perfect hockey contest.

Right from the opening puck drop the game was truly a spectator's dream.

The first period featured smooth skating, crisp passing, hard hitting, good, clean hockey. Both squads were extra sharp, especially the two exceptional goalies, Hauber and Peter Sandblom (28 saves), both of whom played as if the first goal scored was worth more than their very lives.

However, it was Duxbury's Hauber whose luck ran out first, when teammate Sean Wenham was whistled for tripping at the 12:08 mark of period one.

Right from the face-off in the Green Dragon end, the Skippers put pressure on Hauber with back-to-back solid coring bids. Fitzpatrick whistled a third near-miss from the right circle just wide of the net. But Mulcahy gathered in the long karem off the boards and drilled a blistering slapper from 40-feet out by a momentarily flustered Hauber.

Sandblom, who has been a season standout in net for Cohasset Coach Dennis Walsh, was almost unbeatable. But in a 5:30 stretch of the second period, Duxbury hit him fast and effectively, scoring three unanswered goals. And, when Mulcahy finally got the Skippers back on the scoreboard with another powerplay goal at 12:19 of the second period it appeared the club was in excellent shape for the stretch run.

It was not to be.

Afterschool recreation

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer another six-week session of after school games and sports for children grades K through 5.

The second session is scheduled to begin Tuesday, March 22, for grades K through 2, and Wednesday, March 23, for grades 3 through 5. If registered in the first session, your child may re-register for the second session of class on Tuesday or Wednesday, March 15 and 16.

The fee for the six-week program is $8 for the first child in each family and $4 for each subsequent child. Checks should be made payable to the Town of Cohasset, and brought to class March 15 and 16. If your child is not participating in the first session but wishes to join, please call the recreation department office at 383-6791 for registration.

The program will offer children structured and supervised low-organized games and team sports. Some activities will be held out-doors or in the Deer Hill School gym.

Editorial

What's the problem?

Well, this is another fine mess we've gotten ourselves into.

Here we are, ready to prepare for another fiscal year. Town meeting is on the horizon, and budgets are being reviewed and approved for the approaching deadline of July 1.

Then, all of a sudden last week, bad fiscal news hit us like a ton of gold bricks. The town is running out of money, and we don't have enough to operate town government next year. It's as simple as that. Unless we come up with some extra cash, we might as well lock the doors and close down town hall.

Now, $600,000 is not a small number. So it's difficult for most rational people to comprehend why it wasn't made apparent earlier that we were going to come up short by such a large sum.

The advisory committee members have some suspicions, but they haven't been able to pinpoint the source of their dilemma. Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, who was acting town accountant prior to the recent employment of Mary Matthews, has been away on vacation the past couple of weeks, and has been unable to help solve this mystery.

But according to Matthews, the town's previous estimations of local revenues were repeatedly exaggerated. Car excise taxes and other income to the town was overestimated for the past three years, she said. This would keep the town's tax rate artificially low, while the town's free cash reserve continued to sink.

Perhaps we should not be looking for someone to blame. The damage has been done, and the taxpayers of this town are once again the victims.

But this one really hurts. We are going to be asked to support a Proposition 2 1/2 override which will affect our tax rate for many years - and for what? Are we getting a new school building, shiny new desks and bright new blackboards? Are we getting a country club and acres of open space to maintain for our future recreational use?

No. We are going to have to approve an override so this town can continue to function. By function, we mean at a level similar to those bleak days when Prop. 2 1/2 cropped our government back to a new low.

As advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby warned, "heads will be cut." Unfortunately, he speaks the truth. There will likely be staff reductions in many departments - departments that are just beginning to recover from the devastation wrought by the state legislation several years ago.

To place blame for our situation is a human reaction. It will correct no wrongs, nor will it solve our woes. But if the blame is to rest on a town official or a town employee, the public has the right to be made aware. If we are paying someone good wages to operate this town, we deserve the best services he can provide. A private company would make similar demands - we should be no different.

If someone is at fault here, the taxpayers have every right to know who made this devastating mistake, and what measures will be taken to rectify it.

CHS makes it (again) to finals

For the fifth consecutive year, Cohasset High School has performed its way into the finals of the state drama festival.

The large cast of 20 students was honored Saturday, March 5 at Hingham High School when "Fortress" was selected for the final competition to be held March 18 at the John Hancock Hall in Boston.

In addition, the entire ensemble, including two lead actors, was named to the All-Star cast by judges at the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival. Joe Mazza as Billy and Michele Casolaro as Kim were named festival all-stars, along with the ensemble performances of 18 CHS actors.

Successfully completing the semi-final competition and earning a berth in the finals was the goal of this year's production, according to Ron Emmons. That second competition, he noted, is traditionally more tense than the initial performance. "But once we make it into Boston, it's a party for the kids," he said, noting that the school's record of achieving finals status five years straight is a difficult goal to strive toward.

"In Boston, we have a lot of fun and we enjoy it. Before that, it's pretty tense," he explained. Emmons was pleased with Saturday's performance, noting the cast performed "a little better" in the initial competition. "But that's natural. The semi-finals is a more serious step for us. It always is. And knowing that we've made it to the finals so many years is always in the back of your mind."

"Fortress" is a play by a favorite of director Emmons, Michael Scanlan. It includes the largest cast he has ever worked with in the state festival. But Cohasset is unique, Emmons noted, considering it's successful record and the fact that it is one of the smallest schools in the competition.

"It's really amazing," he said, "when you consider little Cohasset is competing against schools from Brookline, Brockton and Cambridge." An additional dilemma for the director has been scheduling rehearsals and play times. Cohasset was fortunate to be selected for the March 18 finals, he explained, because that is an 'off' day for members of the cast who are also involved in basketball play-offs. "I don't know what we would have done if we had to perform March 19 because that is the finals for the basketball tourney. I'd have to say we simply couldn't have performed," he stated.

Although the director felt Saturday's performance was a bit more rushed than the previous production, overall Emmons was pleased with the results. "I had no idea how the judges would rate this one, but I knew we had a good show. I'm glad we made it through - now we can enjoy it," he added. "This is the step we wanted to take."

One of the judges, a professor at Emerson College, stated at the production's conclusion, "You created a valid environment that served the play much more effectively than any other state setting could ever do. You are collective set designers and special effects team. Great work." As a general comment, the judge noted, " A good production that hit all the right notes. Nothing was forced, everything was honest. The emotional build was unforced, but powerful."

Regarding the lead performances, the judge termed Mazza's portrayal "good, natural acting." He stated that Michele held a "wonderful connection to the audience with a natural directness."

The director has called a temporary stop to all play rehearsals this week while the cast regroups for the Boston competition. "This is a real ensemble piece. I want it to stay spontaneous. It can get really stale with too much rehearsing," Emmons said. "We made the step we wanted. That's what was important to us."

The director did not dare predict the outcome of the March 18 competition. "I know we're good. I'm confident, but you can't be too confident," he said. "This whole process is a real crapshoot."

Yankee Atomic grasps at straws

Letters

To the Editor:

On Jan. 27, the Yankee Atomic Electric Company, owner of the Rowe nuclear power plant, filed suit against Michael Connolly, Secretary of the Commonwealth, and James Shannon, Massachusetts Attorney General. Yankee Atomic wants an injunction against the referendum question approved by Shannon and Connolly preventing further production of nuclear waste by Pilgrim and Rowe, the two nuclear power plants in Massachusetts. The company claims the referendum question illegally gives the people of the state the power to deprive the company of its property.

Yankee Atomic is grasping at straws to prevent a democratic vote on the issue of nuclear power in Massachusetts. In 1946, Albert Einstein said, "To the village square we must carry the facts of atomic energy . . . from there must come America's voice." Since that time the nuclear industry has mounted a massive disinformation campaign to keep the facts from the public. But the Chernobyl and Three Mile Island accidents have disproved the utilities' claim "an accident can't happen." For the first time in history, the people of this state have the opportunity to decide if they want their electricity generated by splitting the atom.

The nuclear industry is terrified by democracy, and is attempting through this lawsuit to deny the people a say in their future and the futures of their children. Of course Yankee Atomic makes no mention of the potential nuclear plants have to deny life and property to those living near them. A 1982 study for the Nuclear Regulatory Commission showed a nuclear plant accident's possible consequences are up to 100,000 first-year deaths and $300 billion in damages. Nor does the utility mention the serious and unresolved problem of disposing of deadly nuclear waste, including the plants themselves when the time comes to decommission them.

Until the November vote, the people of this state can look forward to being bombarded by nuclear utility propaganda playing on fears of job losses and freezing in the dark. Because the utilities are much richer than the question's proponents, the nuclear utilities' point of view will be everywhere—somewhat like Big Brother.

However, contrary to the wishes of the nuclear industry, this is still a democracy, and the people of Massachusetts know the difference between propaganda and the truth. That is why Yankee Atomic and Boston Edison so desperately want to prevent the people from voting on the further production of nuclear waste at electric power plants.

Appeals board approves Rte. 3A business

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner Staff

A new business is slated for Cohasset providing the owners meet ZBA conditions.

The board voted at its March 3 meeting, to conditionally approve a special permit request by Edward McDonough, Francis Sullivan and Richard Welch to establish a boat sales and service business on the site of Mitchell's Repair Shop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway.

In their presentation to the board at its Feb 11 meeting, the prospective owners told the board they would not change the footprint of the existing building, would provide a greenbelt with a circular drive in front of the structure and meet all conditions set forth by the ZBA, Board of Health, Conservation and Planning Board.

Problems arose when when ZBA Chairperson Myrna Putziger noticed that the plans the businessmen presented showed a concrete slab and foundation at the back of the building where it was presumned to be permeable material.

She also expressed concerns that the footprint of the building would be changed.

However, McDonough quickly pointed out that, not only was it not presently permeable, but there was an existing carport with a roof, walls and an asphalt slab. It is connected to the main building and is therefore part of the existing structure.

Putziger also noticed the absense of the greenbelt on the presented plans and no provisions for removal of existing auto debris which is littering the property.

McDonough said the plans were not the final plans and the greenbelt would be planted and agreed to remove the auto debris.

Another concern expressed by the board was the fact that Bound Brook, Cohasset's well-water supply, runs directly in back of the property.

Putziger said the board wanted to be assured that there would be no danger of contaminants entering the water supply.

McDonough reassured the board there would be no contamination from the business and reiterated there would be no bottom scraping or painting outside the building.

In granting the conditional approval, Putziger told the three businessmen it rested on the following: the greenbelt must be planted, all auto debris must be removed and no increase in surface runoff to either Bound Brook or other property.

The owners were also told they will have to comply with the board of health conditions.

In other business, board member Mark DiGiacomo informed the board that Town Counsel Richard Henderson has found there is no basis for appealing a recent superior court ruling against the board.

On Feb. 5, Superior Court Justice David Kopelman ordered the board to issue a special permit to Barbara O'Pray, trustee of Waterfront Realty Trust and to co-owner Donald Staszko.

In his opinion, Judge Kopelman said he found the board "exceeded its authority, was unreasonable, arbitrary and capricious" in denying the special permit.

The board's contention was the four-bedroom, single-family residence with an attached two-car garage on the Jerusalem Road side of Pleasant Beach, would present a potential hazard because the waterfront property location "changes shape, elevation and contour annually due to wave action."

The board had also decided the trustees failed to comply with a section of the bylaw regarding construction in a floodplain and watershed district despite the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) superseding the Cohasset Conservation Commission's denial of the septic system plan, noting in its order, "the proposed dwelling and apparent structures can be built subject to conditions which prevent any adverse impacts to storm damage protection, prevention of pollution and flood control."

Judge Kopelman said, "The denial of a building permit to the plaintiff is all the more egregious when one considers that a building permit was issued to the owner of the adjacent lot."

Senior Center news . . .

To learn more about osteoporosis, come to the senior center Friday, March 25, at 11:30 a.m. when Andrea Blumberg, MS, RD, Director for the Nutrition Education Service of South Weymouth, will present information on this topic.

The program will include information about osteoporosis from a nutritional standpoint. It will include information on the treatment of and prevention of the disease. Also, it will include information on calcium, food sources - how much do we need - and non-food sources.

If you are over 40, you should plan on joining us at the Center March 25. Bring a light lunch and the Council will serve the dessert and beverage. Only you can determine whether you are at risk for this bone disease.

The Council on Aging and Sixty Plus Club are sponsoring a St. Patrick's Day corned beef dinner Thursday, March 17, at noon. Tickets are $5.50 and they may be purchased by calling Mary Donovan at 838-1130 before the 12th. Music by Paul Wiggins of Muse. Don't forget!!

Come to the Center Thursday, March 10, at 1:30 p.m. when Helen Gallop will take you on Armchair travel tour of "Ireland in the Springtime". Tea and dessert will be provided by the Council.

From Wendell Colton, Blue Cross/Blue Shield advisor —Mass. Blue Cross/Blue Shield will hold an open enrollment period for Medex during the month of March. Coverage for persons enrolling in the annual enrollment period will take effect June 1, 1988.

More than 400,000 persons age 65 and over in Massachusetts have Medex coverage, including a number of persons under 65, who became entitled to Medicare in the 25th month of receiving Social Security disability benefits.

Application forms may be obtained at the Senior Center, 3 North Main Street, or write to Medex, P.O. Box 840, Boston, Mass., 02103.

Veterans Health Benefits Explained

The Hingham Council on Aging, Hersey House, 229 North Street, will sponsor a lecture Thursday, April 28, on veterans' health benefits. This is part of the SHINE program offered at the Cohasset Senior Center.

Health care counselors

SHINE (SERVING HEALTH INFORMATION NEEDS OF ELDERS) is a program sponsored by the Executive Office of Elder Affairs in conjunction with Councils on Aging. It is designed to develop a network of volunteers trained as health benefits counselors. At present there are 9 SHINE sites consisting of 121 volunteers in 61 communities.

The purpose of SHINE is to ensure that Massachusetts elders have access to accurate information regarding health insurance and health care options. SHINE counselors are volunteers, mostly elders, who have received intensive training on health benefits. Some counselors receive a small monthly stipend for their work, but all provide their important services free of charge.

Suggestions Welcome

The Council on Aging members feel this is your program, and we very much welcome your suggestions and ideas for new programs, trips, and events. If there's a place you'ld like to visit, or a program you'ld like to have us create, please call the office (383-9112) and share your thoughts with us. It's fun to have something interesting to do that is new or on a weekend, and we need your ideas for programs you will enjoy. Call us - we listen!

Monday Lunch-ins

The Council working with the South Shore Elder Service has provided a special van every Monday to take Cohasset Seniors to lunch at the Scituate Council on Aging, Brooks Street. You can be one of the lucky one's to ride along the waterfront on the way to lunch.

If you think you would be interested, please call the office at 383-9112 a week in advance so arrangements can be made. Lunch menu's include: March 14 - Turkey Tetrazzini, March 21 - American Chop Suey, and March 28 - Chicken Chow Main. Lunch donations $1.25.

Quilting class welcomes new members

Every Thursday morning at the Center you will find men and women stitching up pillows, wall hangings, quilts, some family heirlooms that were never completed.

If you've "always wanted" to make a quilt, come and join the fun Thursdays from 10:15 to 11:15 a.m.

Health Fair - 1988

It's that time of year again when the Council on Aging, Social Service League and Board of Health will hold its fourth Health Fair. This year the fair again will be held at the Second Congretional Church and the Town Hall on Highland Avenue, which will give those who have not been to see the fair a chance to get out and participate in health testing and secure some good health information.

Education and prevention are the goals of this year's Health Fair. We hope all who participate will find the screening and information useful.

If you have the time and would enjoy working at the Health Fair, call Kathy Bryanton at the Senior Center 383-9112.

Cohasset COA needs your help

If you have a talent, interest or skill that you would like to share with the community, please contact Kathy Bryanton, COA director at 383-9112. Working together with volunteer and community groups enables us to better serve local senior residents in programs responding to their leisure needs and interests.

If you have the time and desire, then we can put you in contact with the group which best suits your interest. Call or write Cohasset COA, 3 North Main Street.

Education is learning what you didn't know you didn't know.

Plymouth Philharmonic concert

Trumpeter David Bilger will join Rudolf Schlegel and the Plymouth Philharmonic at the orchestra's next concert Saturday, March 12. The performance, which includes works by Mozart, Haydn, and Dvorak, begins at 8 p.m. in Memorial Hall, Court Street, Plymouth.

Bilger will perform Haydn's Trumpet Concerto. Concertgoers are invited to attend the pre-concert talk at 7:30 p.m. in the Blue Room of Memorial Hall.

Also on the evening's program are Mozart's Symphony No. 36, ("Linz") and a symphonic poem by Dvorak called "The Golden Spinning Wheel."

Concert patrons can purchase a pre-symphony dinner at the Inn For All Seasons, 1620, and Station One all in Plymouth and Bel Canto in Duxbury, at discount prices by showing their March 12 tickets. Pre-symphony suppers, initiated by Friends of the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra, are a new feature this season.

Advance tickets are available at The Snow Goose Shop (Plymouth and Sandwich), Notes & Quotes (Kingston), The Studio (Duxbury) and Hub Music Shop (Pembroke). Mastercard and Visa charges are accepted by calling the Philharmonic office during business hours at 746-8008.

Some glimpses on the road to state finals

School orientation for parents

The Joseph Osgood School's annual kindergarten orientation for parents of kindergarten-ready children will be held at the Joseph Osgood School Thursday, March 17, at 10 a.m. in the school library.

Kindergarten screening originally scheduled for the week of March 21 has been postponed. Instead, two days in May will be set aside for small groups of incoming kindergarteners to enjoy a casual visit to our kindergarten open space.

Spelling Bee qualifiers

Several sixth grade students recently competed for a chance to qualify for the Patriot Ledger Spelling Bee, the winner of which will be eligible for the National Spelling Bee.

The ten students scoring highest on a written test earned the right to compete in the oral spelling bee which was held Wednesday, March 2.

Those students competing were: Ann Senechal, Becky Golden, Christa Ansgergs, Jill DuMoulin, Hope Gaston, Brian Duffy, Lara Martin, Johanna Horn, Diane Saldi, and Cilla Goff.

The winner was Lara Martin who battled out several final rounds with runner-up, Becky Golden.

Lara will now compete April 9 at Weymouth South High School.

Planning for college costs

Guidance departments in the towns of Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate are co-sponsoring a financial planning seminar for parents who will be paying for postsecondary education in the next decade.

Four panelists will present information, which will be followed by a question-and-answer period. Michael Bartini, Director of Financial Aid Services at the New England Regional Office of the College Board, will speak on how the college financial aid process works, distinguishing between financial aid and financial planning. Robert Shorb, Director of Student Aid and Financial Planning at Wheaton College, will discuss college and university sources of financial aid, scholarships, loans, and job programs. Grace Bartini, of the Massachusetts Education Loan Authority, will explain federal and state involvement in the financial aid process and review other sources of funding. Claire Adams, an account executive with E.F. Hutton, will present, in the light of recent changes in the tax laws, various long-term financial planning strategies and their relative risks.

The program is scheduled for Wednesday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m. in the Hingham High School auditorium. All interested parents are encouraged to attend.

Whispers and Shadows

The following are excerpts and illustrations from the 1987 literary and arts magazine published by Cohasset High students. The 1988 Whispers and Shadows will be released in the spring.

"Images of Self"

It felt funny, looking in the water.
There in the water was a face,
A small, rounded face, very much like mine.
I smiled.
It smiles back,
But when I touched it, it rippled
Away in shades of sadness.

I am lost in the woods
Of a distant land,
But before I wake up
And realize what happened,
I find myself
Feeling I don't want to be found.

Me
I am myself,
Knowing on this earth
There is no replica,
Anyone else who looks, acts, talks
Or feels the way I do.
I'm individual.

Sean Fitzsimmons

"Afloat"

Out on the water
we cut this glass.
My friend stands beside me;
his fists are like brass.
As the motor murmurs softly,
we propel with such a grace-
My eyes can't stop from watering;
the wind is in my face.
My friend turns and looks at me,
his expression friendly but wise,
No need for hugs or kisses-
I can see it in his eyes.

Jen Plante

"Look Up"

Look up to the sky
Clouds, sun, birds
Deceive the mind.
Figures, floating about,
Running into each other,
Free, aimlessly
With no limitations.

Kathy Haase

"A Special Place"

I tried to find a quiet place where I could be alone
To hide and seek and run and play
among the rocks and stones,
A place where I could laugh or cry,
frolic or mope all day.
But most of all a special place where I could have my way.

St. Mary's Parish services

A scriptural program based on the four steps of the Rite of Christian Initiation (RCIA) is held at 3 p.m Sundays during Lent at St. Ann's Church Hall by St Mary of the Assumption Parish in Hull.

Also, the parish holds Stations of the Cross at 7 p.m Wednesdays during Lent at St. Ann's Church, Lewis and Samoset streets.

And St. Mary's Sodality invites all parishioners to a St. Patrick's Night beginning at 7 p.m. March 17 with a Mass at the Knights of Columbus Hall. A pot luck supper follows and admission is $3 per person. For more information, contact Sodality officers Ellen Murphy, Eleanor Kilfoyle or Grace Coleman.

Finally, all lectors at St. Mary's Parish will meet at 8 p.m. March 21 at St. Ann's Church for an update on training and procedures.

First Parish services

CANVASS DINNER

Plans for our Canvass Dinner scheduled for Saturday evening, March 19 are now well underway and invitations should be in the mail soon.

If you have not received an invitation by March 11, please be sure to give Millie Mitman a call at 383-9766. We want as many of our members and friends as possible to attend.

Our thanks to those who have agreed to host the dinners, the Karchers, the Olneys, the Sandells, Chartis Langmaid, Anita Franks, the Kornets, the Hendersons, the Hobsons, the Bells and the Millards.

PARENT DISCUSSION GROUP

"Helping Children Develop Good Values" is the topic of the next Parent Discussion meeting set for Friday, March 11 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Parish House.

Sub-topics will be individualism versus conformity and materialism. Susan Etkind, a social worker; Joseph Becker, a teacher at Deer Hill School; and Diane and Joe Wolfe, parents involved with the Cohasset Ecumenical Youth Study Group, will lead our discussion through the questions and perhaps some answers surrounding this theme. All are invited to attend.

Day Care is available and should be reserved by calling Gladys at 383-1100.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION NEWS

From the R.E. Committee: Our R.E. Director, Chris Demers, has taken a full-time job in Boston and consequently has resigned from her duties at First Parish.

Nancy Connolly, a member of the R.E. Committee and a church school teacher, has agreed to take over the planning and coordination of R.E. programs on a temporary basis. Nancy is an artist and has many years of experience teaching classes and workshops at the South Shore Art Center. Her two sons, Mark and Gregory, attend church school, and Nancy has been enthusiastically involved in helping with Sunday morning classes and special events.

The R.E. Committee is very pleased that Nancy is willing to jump into this job "mid-stream" to carry on the interesting activities Chris began this year and to develop some of her own.

HIGHLIGHTS

Many thanks to Nancy Gleason from Samaritans of Boston, who (with her volunteer Samari-Teens Meg and Debbie) provided all of us with greater insight into stress, depression, and suicide as they relate to teenagers. All are reminded that this next Sunday we will be going as a group to the Colonial Bowladrome in Weymouth. We will meet at the Parish House at 7 p.m., and will drop everyone off at home about 9 p.m. Bring about $5 for the expenses. Get some exercise, have some fun, and help us plan future activities. Should you have a question or problem, call me at 383-6055. Thanks—Bryan

Business problem may end in courtroom

Litchfield Express and the Board of Selectmen may not be able to resolve their dispute without a court battle.

In a case which has been on-going since 1984, Barron and Isabel Salvador, the owners of the 145-year-old trucking firm are seeking to buy a piece of property which adjoins theirs and is owned by the town. Since 1969 the Salvadors have been parking three of their trucks on the property, because they believed it to be legal.

According to the Salvadors, they were given permission to use the land indefinitely at a 1969 selectmen's meeting, but the minutes of that meeting appear to be lost.

However, in an affidavit, former selectman Arthur Clark gave oath that not only did the 1969 board grant permission to use the property, but the permission was re-affirmed by a 1974 board.

The present board refuses to honor the previous board's commitment, claiming it knows nothing about any permission for use.

The case has been in litigation since June, 1986.

According to Isabel, the town requested a pre-trial hearing in the Stoughton Court June 4, 1986.

She claims Town Counsel Richard Henderson never made an appearance and when the judge called Henderson's office, he allegedly told Henderson to meet with the Salvadors and selectmen and resolve the issue within the town's framework.

Isabel said another pre-trial hearing to report on the outcome of the town's attempt to settle the issue was scheduled for June 25, but Henderson requested a five-day postponement.

She claims at the June 30 court hearing, Henderson told the judge the selectmen refused to meet with the Salvadors and the judge told Henderson to schedule a July meeting between the two parties. Isabel said Henderson told her in July that the board still refused to meet with the Salvadors.

Another pre-trial was set in Norfolk County Superior Court for Sept. 9, 1986 and Isabel said Henderson did not show, but his associate did and reported to the court that he had no information of a meeting between the Salvadors and selectmen.

The case was dormant until Jan. 22, 1988, when Henderson and the Salvadors both appeared in the Norfolk County Superior Court before Judge James Lynch.

According to Salvador's counsel, Joseph D'Agnostino, he had tried to reach Henderson Jan. 21, in an attempt to work out some sort of an agreement between the town and the Salvadors.

D'Agnostino said he was told by town officials that negotiations were impossible and that Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said that it was now in the hands of the court.

The town's Executive Secretary Don Andrew said he tried unsuccessfully to reach selectmen to poll them as to negotiations.

"I tried more than once to reach all of the members, but was unable to reach more than three," he said, "and the vote was two-to-one against negotiating."

He said in order to pass any vote, there must be three members in agreement.

As reported in the Feb. 4 Mariner, when all parties appeared in court, Henderson apparently had an agreement prepared and presented it to the judge.

In a telephone call to the Mariner, Andrew said this statement was in error and that the judge ordered Henderson to draw the agreement.

Middlesex Superior Court Assistant Clerk of Courts Paul Mahoney told the Mariner "Judge Lynch said the papers were brought before him and he approved them."

Henderson said, "That is not the way it happened."

Another court official, who was present at the Jan. 22 session, said that most of the work on the agreement had taken place in the hall prior to court convening and there was very little said in the court.

Henderson said, "That is not the way it happened."

But, the judge's and the court official's statements were verified by Selectman James Gallagher who was present at the hearing.

Gallagher said that Henderson came up to him prior to the court convening and said "Let's make up an agreement," whereby Henderson, D'Agnostino, Gallagher and building inspector Don Robbins sat down in a conference room and hammered out the agreement which was subsequently presented to and accepted by Judge Lynch.

Henderson said, "That is not the way it happened."

Both the Salvadors and D'Agnostino said when the judge called the case, Henderson stood before the bench and said it was not necessary for a trial because both parties had finally reached an agreement.

Henderson said, "That is not the way it happened."

When asked to tell how it did happen, Henderson said, "The case was so insignificant that I really do not remember," adding, "But the town got what it wanted."

The Consent Judgment gives the Salvadors 90 days to obtain a decision from selectmen and a variance from the ZBA. It states that should they not be granted a favorable agreement from both government bodies, an injunction will automatically become effective which will permanently enjoin them from parking their trucks on the property and no more than one truck on their own property.

The Salvadors said they have repeatedly told selectmen there is not adequate space on their property to park any vehicles, therefore they need the use of the town-owned Bayberry Lane property.

Gallagher agrees there is not space on the Salvador's lot to park more than one vehicle and they are requesting permission to park three on the town-owned property.

However, selectmen seem reluctant to sell the property to the Salvadors despite their admission the property is unsuitable for building purposes.

On Feb. 2, Andrew sent a letter to D'Agnostino stating that the board feels the Salvadors should obtain a ZBA variance to park vehicles on their property before the board acts upon their request concerning the purchase of the town-owned land.

Henderson said, "If they [Salvadors] don't hurry to appear before the ZBA, their time will run out."

The Salvadors said they felt the only way this situation would be resolved was to re-enter the case into the legal system and obtain a binding decision from the court.

Coalition proposes historic trail

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

Between the city of presidents and the home of the Pilgrims, there is a wealth of historic sites, and a new subcommittee of the South Shore Coalition wants to tell you about them.

At the behest of state Sen. William Golden, the coalition brought together members of local historic commissions and societies to develop a South Shore historical trail.

Scituate selectman Gerry Dwight, the town's coalition representative brought historians together last week at the Little Red School House on Cudworth Road to form a new subcommittee dedicated to informing the public about historic sites on the South Shore.

"Through the coalition you could raise funds for your town's attributes," he said, enticing representatives from Marshfield, Hingham, Cohasset, Duxbury, Rockland, Hull, Hanover, Norwell, Weymouth and of course, Scituate.

"We are the vehicle to bring you people together," he explained, "but you are going to do it."

Golden explained how he came up with the idea.

"I just woke up one day and realized that when people come to Boston, they know about the Freedom Trail, they know about the Adams historic site in Quincy and they know about Plymouth," he said.

"It's like this region is not recognized as having any national or state historical significance. But more tragically, there are people in Cohasset, for example, who have never heard of Scituate's Little Red School House or the Dugout Canoe in Weymouth or Fort Independence in Hull.

"I grew up in Cohasset," Golden said, "and its history has given me a great sense of my roots. It is a source of inspiration that we should preserve for our children.

"You are struggling against ignorance," he said. "Historic preservation has been for the most part, a cottage industry. But as in other issues such as transportation and water resources, I think it's very important to work together."

Golden assured the historians such teamwork would not infringe on their local autonomy.

Kathleen Laidlaw, president of the Scituate Historical Society, was named temporary chairman of the new subcommittee.

Joan Scolponeti of the Marshfield Historical Commission countered, "Naturally we have one of the best sites, the Daniel Webster estate and his law office.

"This brochure could direct people there who might not see them otherwise."

AIDS: Contemporary Concerns

On March 11, following the 8 p.m. service at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, Dr. Robert Schooley will speak and give a slide presentation on the topic, AIDS: Contemporary Concerns.

Schooley, a Hingham resident is associated with the Infectious Disease Unit of the Massachusetts General Hospital and is a foremost authority on the disease AIDS. He is a graduate of Washington and Lee University and Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. He has written and published several reports and articles on the research he has done.

Sha'aray Shalom is located at 1112 Main St., Hingham. The public is welcome to attend.

Old books to be appraised

An opportunity to get an expert opinion of the value of old books and documents will be offered at a dinner meeting of the Cohasset Historial Society Wednesday evening, March 23 at Trueblood Hall of the Unitarian Parish House in Cohasset.

Kenneth Gloss, proprietor of Boston's famous Brattle Book Shop, will not only describe his experiences in searching out and dealing in old and rare books, but will appraise books and documents brought in by those attending. The meeting is open to the public (by reservation) and people are encouraged to search their attics and bookshelves for volumes which might prove to be not only interesting but also valuable.

The special program presented by Gloss, entitled "Treasures In Your Attic, Old and Rare Books," will follow a dinner at 6:30 p.m. catered by Jessica. A wine and cheese reception at 6 p.m. will precede the dinner.

Reservations at $10 per person, to be paid in advance, may be made by check mailed to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset, MA 02025, or by telephone to 383-6930.

Deadline for reservations is Saturday, March 19. Be sure to mark this special spring event on your calendar; the Historical Society's old books evening promises to be both informative and highly interesting.

Boo Leach (far left) and Vivien Bobo, Amateur Horticulture Society Committee members, discuss their entries in this year's N.E. Spring Flower Show with committee chairman Helen Freidberg.

Amateur Gardeners meeting

The Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, March 15, at 1 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Jean Syrmopoulos, with Mrs. Jean Gould assisting as co-hostess.

The program will be presented by American Field Service student Steven Sont from Amsterdam, the Netherlands, who is currently attending Cohasset High School, and Kimberly Dwyer of Cohasset, who was an A.F.S. exchange student in Saipan last summer.

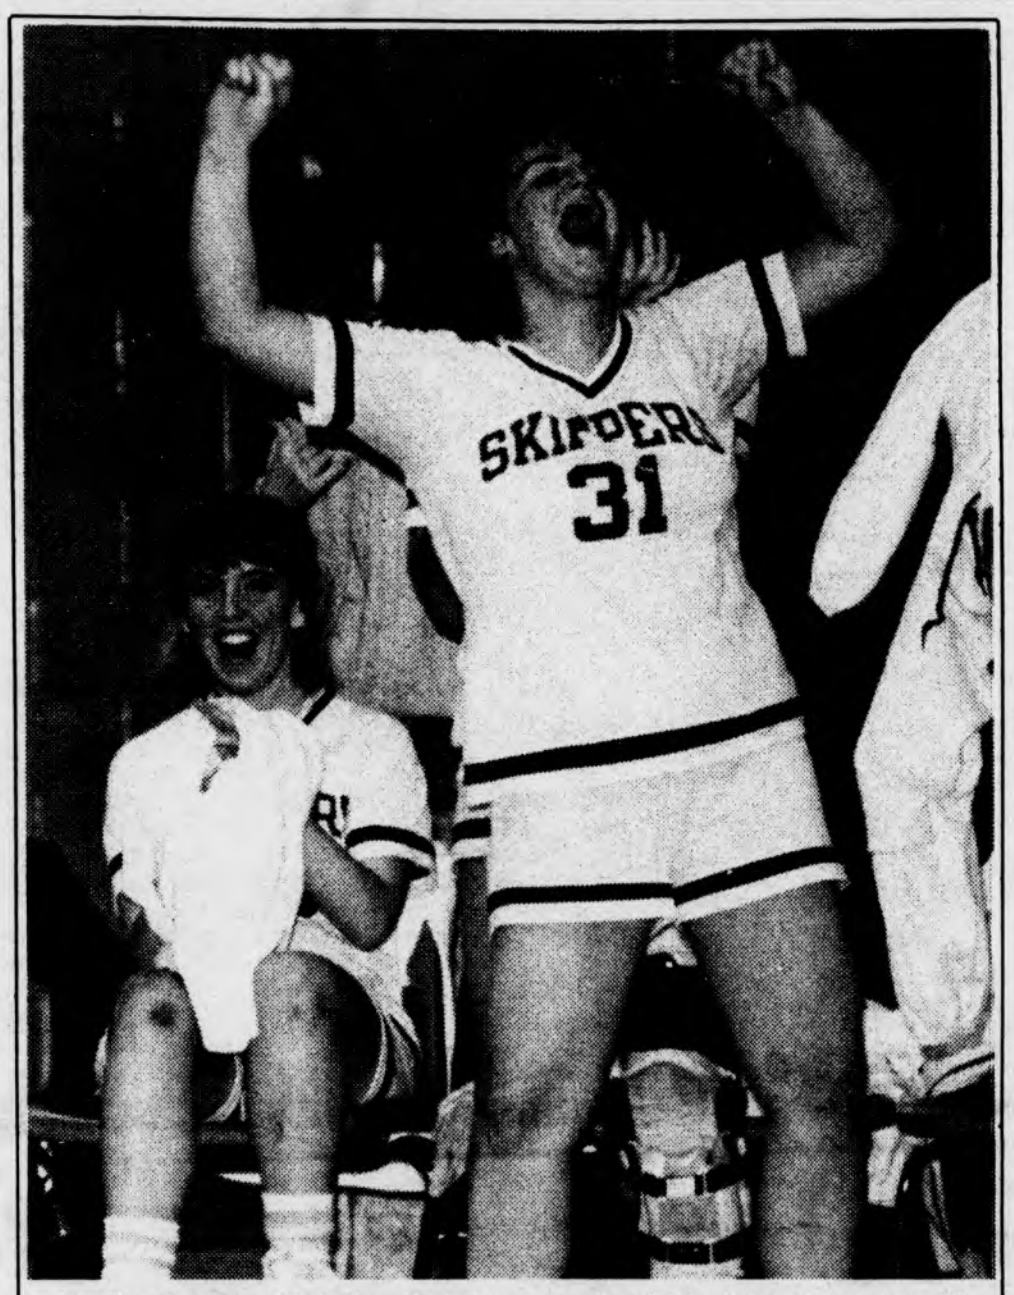
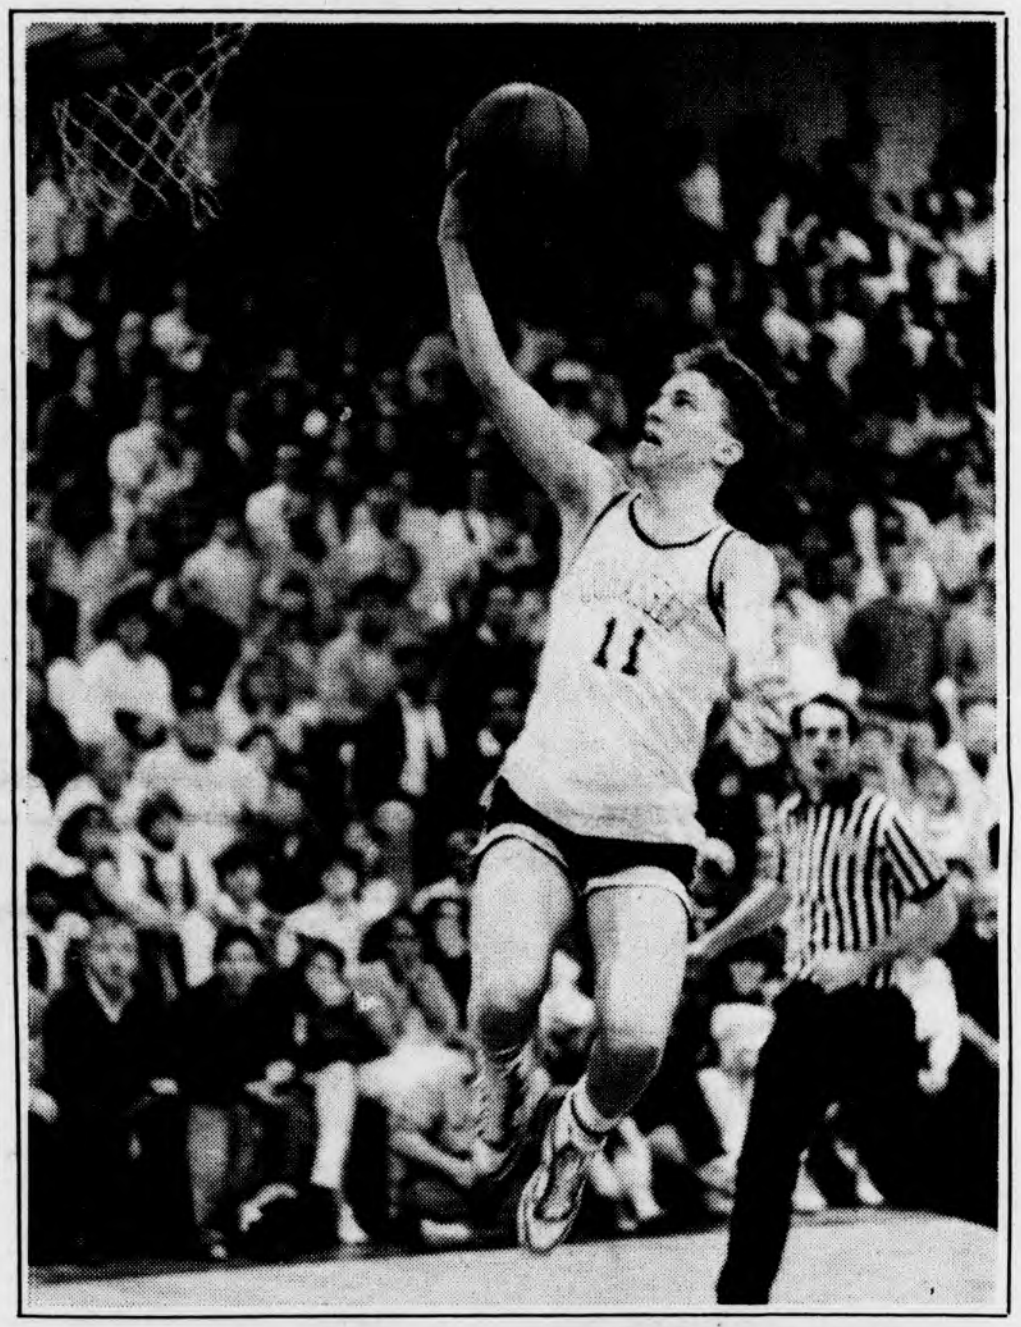
We're almost there!





Heather MacDonald displays the intense emotion felt by the entire community as both CHS basketball squads steam toward the state finals. Mike Smith (r) was outstanding in Tuesday night's win over Weston. (Photos by Alan Chapman) While the big news was Bryan Edwards (below) who set the state scoring record Friday night. Just hours before his achievement, he was besieged by autograph seekers at the Deer Hill School.

Typical tournaments for two terrific teams

By Mike Spellman
Mariner correspondent

It was billed as the battle of the two top basketball players in Division III.

The Eastern Mass. Championship game had literally been reduced to a competition between two high school seniors: Bryan Edwards of Cohasset and Peter Condakes of Weston. And Edwards, whose exceptional 42-point effort will not soon be forgotten, emerged the victor.

But the only thing that truly mattered was Cohasset's 77-72 win.

Tuesday night at Bentley College, in Waltham, Ed Minelli's troups entered the game realizing just what was required to defeat Weston: a solid job on the boards, capitalization on transition opportunities, and a big effort from the state's all-time leading scorer.

Early in the contest, the situation appeared to be extremely dire for Cohasset. The front line of Condakes (6'8"), Billy Wadkins (6'5") and Tom Norton (6'8") seemed too strong to be contained by the much smaller (a combined 10 inches smaller to be exact) starting front court of Cohasset.

It was Condakes who really gave Ed Minelli fits, especially in the early going when the Weston pivot-man converted his first six field goal opportunities. The Cohasset coach could only watch in frustration as his team played to its capabilities, yet still were unable to make any headway.

More congratulations

Selectmen sent a congratulatory message to the coaches and students of a Cohasset High School.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle noted during Monday night's meeting that the boys' hockey team ended its season as finalists in the Division II South Sectional Championship. Their season record was 13-3.

The boys' basketball team was playing Wednesday night in the semi-finals of the Division III State Championship after an 18-2 season.

And the girls' team was in the midst of the same fight, playing Wednesday night for the Division III State Championship. Their record this year was 19-1.

And Selectman Laugelle also noted that Bryan Edwards of the basketball team has enjoyed the finest season in the state, setting a new scoring record of 2,482 points during last weekend's divisional playoff game.

"The coaches have done a hell of a job for the price they're paid," he stated, "and for such a small school."

Fuel tank clean-up

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle reported last week that an oil fuel tank was removed from the basement of the town hall after the building and addition were converted to gas heat.

After inspecting the site where the tank had been stored, Fire Chief Daniel Brock requested a review of the area by an environmental engineer. The superintendent at the construction site recommended the town hire its own engineer for the inspection, according to Laugelle.

Late last week, selectmen were informed that BSC Engineering agreed to perform the inspection.

Budget woes substantiated

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

After reviewing the town's operating budget, a certified public accountant assured selectmen the town's fiscal situation is as gloomy as projected last week by the town accountant.

In his report toselectmen Monday night, Raymond Kasperowicz said a decrease in federal aid combined with a decrease in estimated local receipts have resulted in a shortfall in the town's operating budget for the next fiscal year. "It's equal to the concern of a week ago," Kasperowicz said, referring to the warning that Cohasset's budget is shy $613,000.

In his view, the elimination of federal revenue-sharing, the level-funding of state aid to Cohasset, and the inability to raise the tax levy under Prop. 2 1/2 has resulted in the $613,000 budget shortfall Town Accountant Mary Matthews projected last week.

"We are being trapped in this tax levy limit. I see how we got here," he said, suggesting that selectmen begin budgeting the town's finances on a 24-month cycle - projecting expenses and department budgets years in advance. He envisioned future budget preparations in which state aid totals are displayed along with grant money, tax levy, and new growth numbers. Changes would be plugged into a computer and selectmen would receive periodic updates of the numbers.

"It is extremely critical that there is coordination among town officials," he added. Selectmen explained the advisory committee held two meetings this year to discuss budget preparations with all town department heads. "Those meetings can be critical," he agreed.

Selectman Cliff Mitman said in the future he would like to review revenues from each department under their jurisdiction. "If we know when motor vehicle bills are sent out, there should be a pattern and when those numbers don't come back in, a red light should on," Mitman stated.

Kasperowicz agreed revenues from town departments, particularly from the water department, should be examined closely. "I feel pessimistic about future increases in state aid," he said. Local revenues will become increasingly important if state aid does not grow in future years, he added.

The accountant had two questions following his budget review. He told selectmen that motor vehicle estimated receipts may be about $200,000 shy of projections made during budget preparations. A total of $540,000 in bills were sent out, but as of Feb. 29, only $153,000 had been collected for fiscal 1988.

The water department projected $700,000 in revenues this year. Thus far, only $400,000 has been collected and the department's expenditures total $547,000. "If the receipts are not there," he stated, "are we billing adequately enough?" Selectmen explained that a warrant article in the April 2 town meeting requests a hike in water usage fees.

Kasperowicz explained that if the revenues are below budget estimates, the shortfall must be made up somewhere else in the budget.

Suggested methods include hiking the tax rate next year, borrowing, or cutting back the town's expenditures. He noted that whatever method is used, deficits in the water department and motor vehicle taxes this year will impact on the following year's budget.

Selectman Mitman noted there was no reason not to believe the budget figures used by the town accountant and Kasperowicz, because they were audited during the past year.

"I am completely confident we're in thr right ballpark," Kasperowicz added.

The certified public accountant was scheduled to attend a meeting Wednesday night, March 16 with the advisory committee, the town accountant, executive secretary and selectmen.

Brook St. changes

Following a recommendation from Safety Officer Cliff Jones, selectmen voted that beginning April 1, all parking along Brook Street will be banned.

There will be a special stipulation regarding Central Market. All delivery trucks will be allowed to park parallel to the street in the loading zone.

Selectman James Gallagher disagreed with the suggestion made by Officer Jones, and suggested that Brook Street be made one-way from South Main. Special fire apparatus would be allowed to go from Elm Street down Brook Street to South Main Street, he noted.

His suggestion was not endorsed by the other selectmen, although Selectman Burt Pratt questioned whether the parking ban would pose a hardship for the Linen Chest. Selectman Laugelle said customers could park along South Main Street or in the town parking lot. There may be space for one or two customers behind the store in the private parking lot, he added.

Selectmen voted to support the parking ban which will go into effect April 1.

Transit officials worry about UMTA's stalling

By Nancy O'Connell
Mariner Staff

The restoration of the Old Colony Line (OCL) may be sometime in the distant future if the Mass. State Senate does not pass the transportation bill soon and Urban Mass Transit Authority (UMTA) does not begin reviewing the 15 different reports sent to it over the past one and one-half years.

Asked why UMTA appeared to be stonewalling, OCL's Citizen's Advisory Committee (CAC) Chairman Terry Fancher said he believed "We have not done enough work to show cost-effectiveness of the railroad's restoration."

"I think if we went in and asked for the Middleborough and Plymouth lines only, we would be OK."

He said there was less opposition to those two lines.

Steve Polechronis, MBTA project manager for the OCL restoration disagreed.

All three together will generate a much more attractive package from a cost-effective standpoint, he said, adding, "Cost-effectiveness is not a factor.

"We are not at a point right now where cost-effectiveness is in dispute," he said.

He said the UMTA process is like building blocks.

"UMTA has a very specific process to achieve the end result and we're not even at the first level."

Polechronis said first is the discussion of any alternatives. Then the analysis of projected ridership. Third is the environmental analysis and last comes the capital and operating and maintenance costs.

Polechronis said neither the state nor MBTA has "had any substantive response to any of our material during the past one and one-half years."

He said this lack of response from UMTA has placed the state in a bad situation.

The National Environmental Protection Act allows UMTA to control whether or not a state can circulate a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS), Polechronis said.

"The Mass. Environmental Policy Act does allow the state to circulate the document whenever we feel we are prepared to," he said.

Polechronis said the problem was that the circulation of the DEIS, which contains both environmental and cost-effectiveness, is the step which must occur before UMTA will make any decision on funding.

There can be no circulation of the DEIS until UMTA has read all the reports and to date, it has not acted, said Polechronis.

"We're in a real 'Catch 22,'" he said.

Polechronis said Greenbush has a higher projected ridership than Plymouth, but it also presents the most complications from an environmental view.

Fancher, who is head of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, said he plans to meet with UMTA Administrator Ralph DelliBovi at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce meeting in Washington in May to try and work out any problems.

Fancher said he has again invited DelliBovi to visit Mass.

"I would like to see him come in the latter part of May," he said.

Fancher said the timing would be right because the transportation bond issue should have passed the senate and CAC recommendations should be fairly well underway.

DelliBovi had been invited previously but declined the invitation because "You have nothing to show me."

Solid waste symposium

The League of Women Voters of Weymouth, Hingham, and Cohasset will sponsor a Solid Waste Symposium and Fair Saturday, March 26, at Weymouth North High School, 1051 Commercial St. in East Weymouth from 12 to 5 p.m.

According to the league, one of the most critical issues facing local governments is the safe disposal of waste. This fair is designed to provide the opportunity for local governmental representatives, private industry and interested citizens to explore all the options available in waste disposal technologies.

There will be ample time to present questions and seek information from experts and vendors who will be participating.

The fair will focus on:
recycling,
separation and processing,
current and emerging technologies,
composting,
incineration, and landfilling.

Some of the activities planned for the fair include: newspaper and old tires collection; student poster contest; speaker Dr. Paul Connett of St. Lawrence University; exhibits from SEMASS, New England CRINC, MASS PIRG, and the Bridgewater Energy Center.

Selectmen vote on few articles

Without daring to look at anything remotely related to money requests, selectmen last week reviewed and made recommendations on the remaining April 2 town meeting warrant articles.

Selectmen did not review any of the 13 articles scheduled for the special town meeting which will take place the same day. Most of the those articles pertain to unpaid services rendered in the current fiscal year.

By a slim margin, selectmen voted to support article 33 calling for the installation of automatic sprinkler systems in lodging houses.

But they did not recommend another article which calls for the sprinkler systems in all new residences. Selectman James Gallagher noted that each person has the right to talk to thier individual builder about installing such an option. Last year, town meeting approved a similar article, but the wording of the bylaw was ruled illegal by the state attorney general.

And despite a recommendation by Selectman Martha Gjesteby, selectmen voted not to support an occupancy excise tax for local lodging houses. Selectman Gjesteby supported the tax, and explained the town has lost matching state revenue because of town meeting's failure to impose the surcharge.

Selectmen voted to support an article to petition the state legislature to create a land bank in the town treasury. Proceeds from the sale of real estate in the town would be set aside and used toward the purchase of open space land for the town.

Selectman Burt Pratt questioned town counsel about the article. He asked that more precise language be included which would specify whose money at the time of sale would be set aside in the land bank. Atty. Richard Henderson explained that in this state, the person to deliver the deed is the one who pays taxes on the property. In the absence of more precise language, it is the seller who is the presumed tax payer.

Selectman Gallagher supported the article as amended to include a provision that the seller would pay two percent of the purchase price into the land bank.

Selectmen also approved a warrant article calling for an increase in water useage fees. According to Supt. Benjamin Curley, the hike in fees will bring in an additional $158,000 in revenues to the town next year. "We sure will support an increase," Selectman Laugelle said in reference to the pending proposal to override Prop. 2 1/2 because of a shortage of local revenues.

The new rate will cost residents $18 per quarter plus $2.20 per hundred cubic feet used in that quarter. Non residential users will be charged by the size of the meter, plus a charge per quarter and a charge per 100 cubic feet used.

Selectmen will also support an article requiring recycling at the town landfill. Article 43 will require residents to recycle all bulky materials, glass, newspapers and other papers, corregated cardboard, yard waste and household hazardous waste material beginning July 1, 1988. Although selectmen questioned how a mandatory procedure could be arranged in such a brief time, they unanimously supported the proposal. Currently, residents are encouraged to voluntarily recycle the same materials at the landfill.

Selectmen also voted to support two planning board articles which would increase the density of a development if 20 percent or more of the homes were designated as affordable housing. The second article would establish a municipal housing authority to preside over those units. Selectmen noted the new housing agency would be separate from the Cohasset Housing Authority which is under the jurisdiction of the state Executive Office of Communities and Development.

There are a total of 56 articles included in the town meeting warrant and 13 in the special town meeting, most of which can not be voted upon until another special town meeting is convened. Following a special election, a special town meeting may be called to vote to override Prop. 2 1/2. If voters approve that measure, town meeting would be reconvened to vote on the remaining warrant articles.

Spring soccer starts March 26

With more than 300 players enrolled, Cohasset youth soccer's spring season starts Saturday, March 26 with its first annual Uniform Day.

The get-together at the Cohasset High School gymnasium, beginning at 9:30 a.m. will include the distribution of team uniforms, team pictures, and a special appearance by players from the Boston Bolts. The Bolts are New England's only professional soccer team, and will begin its season at Boston University's Nickerson Field, April 30.

"This will be our biggest turnout ever," said Cohasset league coordinator Larry Shultz. "We'll field a total of 16 teams, both boys and girls, in five different age groups. And we have waiting lists of children who we can't fit onto the rosters."

The Cohasset teams play in the Coastal Soccer League, which prohibits more than 18 players per team.

Other towns in the Coastal League include Plymouth, Hanover, Scituate, Kingston, Pembroke, Carver, and Norwell.

The Cohasset season begins Saturday, April 9, and runs for ten consecutive weeks. Cohasset's home games will be at Milliken Field.

Hockey honors

Michael Anderson and Todd Fitzpatrick from Cohasset High School have been recognized by officials at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham as recipients of the first annual Scholar Athlete Award.

The Scholar Athlete Award is given to senior, varsity high school hockey players whose teams have "home" ice at the Pilgrim Skating Arena. The athlete must have maintained a B average or above, and have earned at least two varsity letters in hockey.

In honor of each player to receive the award, the Pilgrim Arena will donate a $150 Pro Shop credit to the player's high school hockey program. In addition, the athletes personally receive a plaque and suitable memento in recognition of their high school achievement.

Brattle Book Shop owner looks into past

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

It promises to be an entertaining evening - an opportunity to look back and measure the value of our past.

Residents will have a rare opportunity March 23 to find that unknown treasure hidden away among the cobwebs of the attic or basement.

The Cohasset Historical Society will be hosting Kenneth Gloss, owner of the Brattle Book Shop in Boston, for a unique look at our artifacts and antiques. Gloss will be the guest speaker at the society's annual dinner meeting. Following a brief talk, he will take aside old books and magazines, transcripts and news articles brought by the audience and he will appraise them.

Gloss has been operating the famed Boston book store since his father died several years ago. The book store has been in downtown Boston since the 1820's, although its location has changed seven times.

Originally, Brattle Street was located in Scollay Square. That street, Gloss explained, no longer exists. This fact confuses many people who assume the Brattle Book Shop must be located on Brattle Street which is now a thoroughfare in Cambridge.

"With urban renewal and lots of demolition, we've had to move several times," Gloss explained during a recent visit to Cohasset. "Every time we've moved, we've had a big sale and given away a lot of books. My father once figured we gave away 150,000 volumes that way."

Eight years ago, Gloss recalled receiving a telephone call from the Boston Fire Department, notifying him of a fire in the store on West Street. "It burnt to the ground," he said. "But with a lot of help from city officials and our friends, we had enough money to start over. And then, five years ago, we moved to another location. We bought a building at 90 West Street where we occupy three floors. We have no plans to move again."

On the first and second floor, Brattle's features general second-hand merchandise including magazines, manuscripts and old books and autographs. The third floor contains rare books. A traditional feature is the cart of books outside the store. Shoppers regularly browse through the books and make purchases for $1 each. "We don't put junk out there," according to the owner. "We want people to come in and shop, so we can't put just anything out there."

The 37 year-old store owner said old shops such as the Brattle, where loyal customers browse for hours are "a thing of the past."

He said, "it's a problem of real estate with

Book store owner will appraise artifacts

skyrocketing prices and rents. Old book stores need a lot of room. They need to be in a downtown area that is heavily populated and they need that low rent. I plan to continue, but it's not always easy."

The Brattle Book Shop succeeds, Gloss explained, because of its highly-regarded reputation and the continuation of that tradition. Gloss makes many personal appearances throughout New England, such as the one in Cohasset next week. "It keeps the store and its name out front, in people's minds. I don't want people to ever think the Brattle Book Shop is gone," he stated.

There are few books, if any, Gloss has not seen in his many years at the shop. "If I haven't seen the exact book, I've seen a duplicate, or something similar in similar condition. It only takes me a few seconds to look at a book or magazine to tell its approximate worth," he explained.

Along with his lectures and supervising the book store, Gloss loves to "treasure hunt." This is his term for the booklover's endless search through dust-covered volumes at an estate sale, or library closing.

"I love that part of the job," he said. "It's great to go hunting through homes and meeting new people. Everyone is always eager to uncover that rare 'find' - that Tamerlan," he added.

That is the title of a book by Edgar Allen Poe which is reportedly worth $250,000. "It was written while Poe lived in Boston, and he hated it," Gloss explained. "He wanted every copy destroyed, but there are a few still around somewhere. It would be a great find."

A treasure is indeed in the eyes of the beholder, according to Gloss. What one person considers an invaluable piece of history is another man's junk. Condition of the artifact, the author, or title of the book is an important factor in determining its monetary worth.

"The topic of a book is really not important, although an early history of a New England town is always a great find," he stated. "But we like to look at any book, from sports, ships, to travel - from pins to skyscrapers, they're all important and valuable to someone."

A signed cookbook from the 1720's would be a valuable find, or a well-preserved newspaper from the 1700's. Comparatively modern books on computers written after World War II are classic gems, Gloss said. "And books on space exploration are noteworthy because they are relating our history at this particular time. But not everything has to be valuable in order to be special to someone," he added.

His expertise is not limited to books. At a recent appearance on the Eddie Andelman sports radio show, Gloss was asked to appraise certain baseball cards on the air. "I pretty much know by now what that type of thing is worth," he said, explaining that a more thorough examination of any artifact would lead to a more precise appraisal.

Participants at the historical society annual dinner should bring books or documents they would like appraised by the store owner. There is no limit to the number of items each person can bring, since Gloss can easily survey each article in a matter of seconds.

Reservations for the dinner meeting and lecture must be made by Saturday, March 19.

Science center programs

It's finally spring! Celebrate the advent of the year's prettiest season by participating in a program at South Shore Natural Science Center in Norwell.

WED. NATURE WALKS

Wander through the Glades with staff naturalists on Wednesday, March 23 from 10 a.m. to noon. Originally held by John Quincy Adams' family, the Glades remains privately owned and offers a variety of habitats to explore. Visit the rocky beach with its salt loving plants. Investigate the saltmarsh and the hardwood forests. Birds usually abound at the Glades — look for the common eider, king eider, Barrows goldeneye, osprey, and perhaps the snowy owl. Join this informal walk by calling 659-2599 to pre-register. (members/Free; non-members/$4.) All ages welcome!

EASTER FLORAL BASKET

Create your own masterpiece! Learn the basics of flower arranging as you make an Easter arrangement in a basket. Jean Craig, past president of the Scituate Garden Club, will lead this adult workshop on Friday, March 25 from 10 a.m. to noon. All materials are supplied, including a variety of colorful flowers and baskets. Bring your own scissors or clippers. Pre-paid registration required (members/$12; non-members/$14). Call 659-2559 for registration information.

EASTER BASKET MAKING

Make your own Easter basket to fill with candy, eggs or anything you like. Learn how baskets are crafted and the many uses for them. Basketmaker Susan Pithie will lead this workshop for children 7 years and older on Saturday, March 26 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. All materiels supplied. Pre-paid registration required. (members/$13; non-members/$16. Call 659-2559 for registration information.

South shore Natural Science Center is on Jacobs Lane in Norwell, just off Route 123 and less than a mile from the Hanover Route 3 interchange (Exit 13). The Center is open Mondays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sundays and most holidays from 1 to 4 p.m. Trails, exhibits, store library. Free admission.

□ Happy news from the land of sunshine . . .Chris Watters, son of Bud and Shirley Watters, has been accepted at Cornell University. Needless to say, they are all on cloud 9, but we'll bet one thing . . . a definite shopping spree will be in order for Chris, he cannot wear his shorts during the winter at Cornell!! The good news is that we are all sure to see more of the Watters family now, something that everyone looks forward to.

□ The Bay State Games took place recently, and the figure skating competition was held at Williams College. Once again several gals make the news in their efforts to capture the gold. Marisol Perry earned a gold in free style 4 and a gold in team compulsory 5; Lauren Wood received a gold in team compulsory 5; Kara Protulis won a bronze in free style 5 and a gold in team compulsory 5; and Kim Ward won a silver medal in team compulsory 5. They sure are getting great reviews everywhere they go, as well as learning all the ropes to become Olympic material someday. Great work girls.

□ If you think that Dr. Woods is "just a dentist," you had better thank again! He won an award at the Flower Show held last week for his entry in the orchids! It sure shows that he has a gentle touch, and a gift with flowers as well.

□ If case you are wondering what is new in the life of Mike Brady, he has received wonderful news. Mike has been accepted to Northwestern, all tuition paid and a paying job as well. Mike will earn his Ph.D in materials engineering over the next three years, and we wish him well. It's an honor to be accepted to that college, much less under full scholarship. All of your hard work certainly has paid off, Mike.

□ Have been asked to remind you that the fifth annual auction to benefit the Glastonbury Abbey will be held on Saturday, March 26 at the Hingham Armory on Central Street. Doors open for preview and afternoon auction at 1 p.m. with the auctioneer beginning at 7 p.m. Admission and catalogs are free, so go and browse. Refreshments are available, as well as unlimited treasures. Don't forget to circle the date for this worthwhile event.

□ We hear that David LaVange is recuperating rapidly from his recent quadruple bypass surgery. David is a patient at Brigham and Women's Hospital, but should be home real soon! Continued speed in your recovery, Dave.

□ There is a musical opening this Friday, March 18, produced by the Braintree Curtain Call Company. The deLima family will be there, and the name of the musical is "Gypsy". The two deLimas with juvenile leads are Caroline, a student at Deer Hill School, who will be playing Baby Jane; and Kate, a student in the Junior High at CHS, who will be playing Baby Louise. Mrs. deLima will also have a role in the production. For further information and a chance to see our own stars, please call Mrs. deLima.

□ Talking about the deLimas, another one makes the news this week. Everyone knows Jane, the Cohasset diving coach. Well, she came in sixth in the New England Finals Diving. Not only is that great, you must remember that Jane has seen no water for the past three months!

□ Congratulations to Peter Isso, who made the honor roll at Thayer Academy. Peter is a sophomore at Thayer.

□ Don't forget, you artists, that the deadline for the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council Grant Application is April 1st. The applications may be picked up at the Town Hall Selectmen's office, and anyone that is an artist or part of a cultural group may apply.

□ A lot of people are interested in how she does it, and we are about to find out. Sine Pounder will have a new program on making bread on Cohasset Cable entitled "Baking it Easy". One can still smell her bread as you passed the Bread Shop, now you can learn how it is done. The series will be on every Thursday at 6:30.

□ If you don't think there were a bunch of happy students at Deer Hill School last Friday, think again! Bryan Edwards was at the school, and everyone asked him for his autograph. Naturally he obliged, and that was the day that Bryan broke the state record in scoring. All of the kiddos were so excited!! And, everyone was thrilled for Bryan when he made his mark in basketball history Friday night . . . good work Bryan.

□ Virginia Abbadessa of Cohasset was named to the dean's list for the fall term at Massasoit Community College.

□ Sean P. Kelley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Kelley, 211 Fair Oaks Lane, received honors for the second term at Boston College High School.

□ The 60th season of the Boston Morning Musicales will end March 24 at the Copley Plaza Hotel, with a concert by Mezzo-Soprano Cynthia Clarey. For sixty years the Musicales have brought young and rising, as well as internationally famous artists for the listening pleasure of subscribers. Mrs. N. Frank Neer, Jr. of Cohasset is Chairman of the Musicales.

Curtis committee enthused by turnaround

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Buoyed by news that the attorney general will now consider alternative plans for the 55-acre Jerusalem Road estate, members of the Curtis Estate Action Committee have formulated a detailed plan for the "benevolent use" of that property.

For several months the committee has argued that plans to privately develop the land are in conflict with the intent of the will of the late George Curtis. In that will, Curtis specified that his property be used "as a home and refuge for feeble, deformed or invalid women who are without means and are unable to provide for their own living."

Action committee chairman Stephen Bobo told selectmen Monday night that the state attorney general has backed down from his original position not to oppose plans by estate trustees. The trustees intend to sell the property for private development. The Curtis Estate Action Committee has fought those plans, enlisting the support and help from selectmen, town officials and many other residents.

The estate trustees filed a Cy Pres document in court this year, requesting permission to sell the Jerusalem Road property to a developer. The state attorney general originally indicated to members of that committee that he would not oppose the trustees' petition.

"The attorney general has decided not to go along with the Cy Pres without review of other alternatives," Bobo told selectmen this week.

Subsequently, the action committee formulated a plan and submitted it to the attorney general for review. Generally, the committee's plans include conversion of the main Curtis Estate house to eight housing units for retarded residents, an administrative office within the barn, and additional outbuildings for transitional shelters for low income residents. Forty-two acres of undevelopable land will be sold to a conservation trust, and about five acres will be reseved for future needs.

The property would be operated by a non profit company with a board of trustees, including representatives oif the housing authoity, the new local housing commission, the state Department of Public Health, an advocate for the retarded, a representative of the local churches, the director of the company operating the program, and an abuttor.

Bobo explained the location of the land is better suited for housing for the retarded. Properties closer to the downtown area would better accomodate low income and elderly residents, he noted.

The plan "For the Development and Operation of Curtis Park," was finalized Monday. It will be presented this week to the court as part of the action committee's appeal of the trustees' plans to sell the property.

According to the committee's plan, which won approval of selectmen, Curtis Park will include housing for eight retarded persons.

Administrative offices will be provided in the Curtis Barn which will be fully renovated. The construction costs will be paid for with $589,000 received from the state for this purpose. There will be a minimum of three units for low income, and there will also be a transitional housing shelter for low income families. Costs for renovating and furnishing these homes will be about $198,000 which will be taken from state Executive Office of Communities and Development (DEQE) money which is available to the housing authority.

The shelter will include a housing search worker, according to the committee's plans. That worker will seek out other housing opportunities in the nearby area. Most families would stay an average of three months, and would be selected on the basis of need and motivation to find their own homes.

One unit of trannsitional housing would be included as part of refurbishing the Curtis Barn. Construction costs will be paid for from funds provided from the trust, according to the plan. Also, proposals will be written to obtain grants from the Mass. Housing Partnership.

According to the committee's plans, it is the best for "potential beneficiaries (and) provides a synergistic use of all resources for the poor, utilizing funds from state, town and beneficent donations in an efficient combination to derive the most benefit for the needy."

Bobo stated, "this is what the judge wants for an alternate plan."

Selectman Burt Pratt asked if the state would approve real estate under the control of a non profit organization. Bob answered that two nearby towns have the same type of agency formed for the same purpose.

Spring concert March 20

A special setting has been selected by the Unicorn Singers and the Broad Cove Chorale for their forthcoming spring concert on Sunday, March 20. Director Margo Euler describes the Atrium at Brandon Woods (a proposed luxury retirement community located on the site of the former Maryknoll Seminary in Hingham) as "one of the best acoustical spaces" her singers have encountered.

The Broad Cove Chorale (women's chorus) and the Unicorn Singers (mixed ensemble) usually perform separately in the spring; the benefit of this joint venture will be a maximum variety of vocal colors as well as of styles, period and languages.

Euler has selected sacred and secular works — all for unaccompanied voices — especially chosen for the acoustics of the Atrium: Renaissance motets of 4, 5, 6, and 8 parts, lush Romantic period pieces of Brahms, Reger, Hugo Wolf and Verdi; intimate French chansons of Debussy and Faure, and English part- and folk-songs. One highlight of the concert should be the exquisite double chorus "Ave Maria" of Gustav Holst performed by the 30 women of both ensembles.

Performances of the March 20 concert will take place at 4 and 7:30 p.m. Tickets ($5 and $3) may be purchased in advance at Noble's Camera Shop in Hingham Square or by calling 749-0056, and will be available at the door as space allows.

Brandon Woods is located at 110 Charles Street (between Prospect and So. Pleasant Streets) in Hingham, where there is ample parking.

Cohasset residents Sarah DeLima, Lisa Koid and Diana Rousseau will be performing at the March 20 event.

Reserve now for March 23 dinner

Wednesday, March 23 is the date of the Cohasset Historical Society's spring dinner meeting. Special guest speaker for the evening's program will be Kenneth Gloss, owner of Boston's Brattle Book Shop.

His subject will be "Treasures In Your Attic — Old and Rare Books". Gloss will appraise old books and documents brought in by those attending the dinner.

The Society's spring dinner will be catered by Jessica, and will be held at the Unitarian Parish House. dinner will be served at 6:30 p.m. which will be preceeded by wine and cheese at 6 p.m.

Reservations for the Society's dinner meeting are $10 per person, and must be made by Saturday, March 19. Send checks to: Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset MA 02025, or dropped by the Society's Caleb Lothrop House at that address.

Reservations and payment in advance are a must for this special event.

Republican Club meeting March 21

The South Shore Republican Club will meet Monday, March 21 at 1 p.m. at the Norwell Grange Hall, Route 123, at South Street.

The speaker will be Joseph Malone, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee.

The public is welcome.

Editorial

Troubles are behind

Maybe, at least for a few more days, the biggest talk in talk won't necessarily be about the town's budget problems.

While town officials ponder the possibility of Prop. 2 1/2 overrides, there are more pleasant subjects to discuss - at least until Monday morning. By then, our basketball tournaments will be over, the drama festival will be history, and we'll have nothing to look forward to but a dismal budget forecast and a puzzling town meeting.

But for this week at least, let's give a cheer to our deserving (and extraordinary) high school students.

Each year we marvel that tiny Cohasset sends one or two teams to the basketball championships. Ron Emmons and his merry band of thespians have become odds-on-favorites to make it into the finals of the state drama competition. For at least a week or two, it's nice to sit back and feel good about this town.

We should thank Senator William Golden and Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray for speaking loudly and eloquently against the discrimination encountered by small schools. The state high school athletic association prohibited Division III small schools from competing within the hallowed walls of Boston Garden.

Sen. Golden and school committee chairman Joe Nedrow yelled long and hard about that bad policy. Nothing was changed, but we doubt if Cohasset will ever be overlooked again. "We raised their consciouness," Nedrow said following a meeting with athletic association officials. We hope the lesson was understood. No school - big or small, should be deprived of the same advantages given to other students in other schools.

To think that both the girls and boys teams have made it to the finals is mind-boggling. The possibility of that occuring must be miniscule, yet Cohasset proved once again that statistics aren't the ballgame. Talent, guts, perseverence and a lot of support from the fans have made Cohasset's sports teams great.

The same can be said of our high school actors. They are a talented bunch of kids who happen to have a wonderful director who brings the best out in his performers.

We wish them the best of luck in their production this Saturday.

Wouldn't it be amazing if Cohasset had two state crowns and a drama festival title to bring back to the high school Monday morning?

Then, at least for a few more hours, our budget problems, our sewer dilemmas, our landfill woes and our everyday worrries and concerns could take a backseat. Cohasset could become the community of champions - that's a title we prefer.

Meet the candidates

Once again, the Cohasset League of Women Voters is sponsoring Town Affairs Night.

This is an opportunity to not only meet and hear the candidates running for office declare their positions through an unbiased forum, but to also hear the facts pertaining to the proposed override of Prop 2 1/2.

People involved with the town will be on hand to discuss, educate and answer questions with regard to this issue. If you care about the town, you won't want to miss this.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, March 29 at the Town Hall. For further information, please contact Debbie Cook at 383-6313.

What's selectmen's role in dispute?

Letters

(This letter was sent to the selectmen. — Ed.)

This is an open letter questioning the recent developments regarding the town's attempt to reclaim control of a parcel of land which belongs to the town on Bayberry Lane, currenty under dispute as to both it's use and status within the neighborhood where it exists.

I would like to be able to put to rest any questions as to who was given permission to do what and when, also for how long and for how much, but I have no more documentation than anyone else has.

I do know, however, that the recent article is the Cohasset Mariner dated March 10, 1988, has me in a real quandary as to what role the Board of Selectmen are playing in this dispute.

At a meeting in February, 1986, I believe the Selectmen ordered the property vacated. At that time my father and I were told that within 90 (ninety) days the issue would be settled and while the trucks have at least disappeared for a time, this issue appears to be just as confusing as ever.

Perhaps a short outline of an order of events would help:

1. Sometime in the late 1950's the Salvador's were sold a piece of land on Bayberry Land to build a house and were told then, and I believe it is in their deed, the Town was not responsible for any water problems.

2. After the death of his father, Barron Salvador would drive one of the trucks home to Bayberry Lane and park it on the street. This became a problem for plowing etc. and after consulting with several neighors, it was agreed that the town would dump some fill collected from street sweepings just off the roadway beside his lot line, on the empty lot so he could park his truck off the road.

3. In the early 1970's suddenly and without warning, one morning a fleet of trucks started to haul fill into the vacant lot. A strong protest was lodged by my father and the local and state agencies of the Conservation Commission were called and investigated but were told on the site by selectman, Arthur Clark that the town had voted to allow the filling even though no record or warning of any vote had been given or could be found.

4. This land was donated to the town for use for the Veterans of Cohasset of World War II, for home construction and not more than one lot could be purchased by anyone. I have been repeatedly told this lot is not for sale.

5. These lots are not only now but have always been prohibited from any business or commercial use, even to the point at one time, the parking of commercial vehicles of any type were prohibited.

6. The uncontested parking of one truck has escalated to 6 or 7 trucks and several parts of trucks, boats and trailers parked on this land.

7. My father and I presume any other neighbor would not want a trucking business move in beside their home on town land in a residential zone right beside a free flowing brook which runs directly to the town water supply.

Mr. Salvador has repeatedly refused to go along with the order to vacate even though for years he was allowed to conduct his business, rent free on town land, to the detriment of his neighbors causing both noise and inconvenience as well as an eye sore of debris on the property.

It is time the issue was ended. Mr. Salvador should move his business to a place suited for same with the same expense and responsibility as every other citizen of the town is required to do.

Mr. Gallagher should be chastised for his apparent meddling in the court action as a minority of the Board of Selectmen and Mr. Henderson should be replaced as Town Counsel for his apparent disinterest and disregard for the best interest and order of the Town Fathers.

Even if permission had ever been given to run a business in a residential zone, it was not right then and it is obviously not right now.

Thank You,
John J. Rhodes, III
23 Bayberry Lane
Cohasset, Massachusetts 02025

P.S. As I read the quote attributed to Mr. Henderson in the Cohasset Mariner, he says, "The case was so insignificant that I really do not remember," etc.

This is a case of an invidivual attempting to take control of town owned land for his own personal use an gain against the will of the Board of Selectmen who control land owned by the town, and against existing by-laws and zoning. If this is insignificant what than is important in his role as Legal Counsel to the Town of Cohasset?

Need to smooth misunderstandings

To the Editor:

I must take exception to your editorial "A few problems" in the March 3 edition.

To characterize Hull's defeat of the proposed intermunicipal agreement which would have allowed Cohasset to buy nearly 16% capacity in Hull's wastewater treatment facility as only the short-sighted result of Hull residents' inferiority complex is an insult to the collective intelligence of more than 300 voters who turned out at last week's special town meeting.

Hull voters listened for more than 90 minutes to arguments for and against the proposal before defeating it. Among the concerns they detailed were questions as to whether Hull's own burgeoning development might need this reserve capacity at a future time, sludge disposal (particularly in light of Cohasset's precarious landfill situation), the potential for sewering Jerusalem Rd. in light of the continued pollution of Straits Pond from raw sewage, and, of course, the financial aspects of the plan.

There were few negative comments as to whether Cohasset would be paying enough to tie-in to Hull's system. Money was not the essential issue. Therefore, your editorial comment that: "...the residents there were opposed to the thought of helping us out, no matter how much money we waved in front of their faces," was inordinately misleading.

From our point of view, the dollars involved seem fair. Cohasset is not being gouged. Do you think that if Hull were holding your town for ransom that your sewer commissioners would dare propose this agreement to your town meeting? Hardly.

Hull residents, for the most part, understand the benefits of allowing part of Cohasset and part of Hingham to use our facility. We understand that we will alone bear the costs of upgrading and maintaining the plant without an intermunicipal agreement.

Senior Center news

Osteoporosis will be the topic of discussion Friday, March 25 at 11:30 a.m. at the Cohasset Senior Center. Andrea Blumberg MS RD., from the Nutrition Education Services, So. Weymouth, will talk.

Blumberg's presentation will focus on Osteoporosis from a nutritional standpoint. It will include information on treatment of and prevention of the disease: also to include information on calcium, good food sources, how much do we need, and non-food sources.

The lecture and discussion will be held at 11:30 a.m. at the center. You should bring a light lunch and the COA will provide dessert and beverage. Call the Council on Aging at 383-9112 for more information.

MASS DENTAL SOCIETY OFFERS ACCESS — The Massachusetts Dental Society offers a special access program in the following areas: (1) Senior Citizens on a limited income who are not covered by prepaid dental insurance or Medicaid dental treatment includes all needed care at reduced fees to be negotiated privately between dentist and patient. (2) Dentures to people of all ages on a limited income who are not covered by prepaid insurance or Medicaid dental treatment includes all needed care at reduced fees to be negotiated. (3) Developmentally disabled or handicapped patients needing information on local dentist with barrier-free offices and those who are trained and equipped to treat them. (4) Potential patients should call 1-800-342-8747 Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. for eligibility requirements.

SPRING CLEAN-UP FOR SENIORS — The Cohasset Council on Aging offers a new program this Spring for seniors. If you need help with raking, mowing, gardening, and/or other spring chores — if you are a senior and need help, call the council office and have your name placed on the job order list. This is a volunteer service being offered between March and May 30.

HEALTH FAIR - 1988 — It's that time of year agian when the Council on Aging, Social Service League and Board of Health is planning its fourth annual health fair.

It will be held at the Town Hall and the Second Congregational Church on Highland Ave., May 12 from 1 to 3:30 p.m. which will give those who have not attended the fair last year a chance to get out and see it and get some good health tests and information.

The 4TH Annual Health Fair is being offered to all Cohasset residents. The goal of this year's fair is to provide information to those who are interested in learning more about how they can change their daily lifestyles and living habits to ensure a more healthful way of life. We will try to establish a well balanced plan to give each participant the opportunity to explore specific concerns they may have.

Need to smooth misunderstanding

But while we realize Cohasset's deadline for applying for federal funds, we must be excused if we maintain our right to scrutinize a long-term proposal. After all, it was exactly the lack of long-range planning on the part of our town officials that led to what many of us see as the overdevelopment of our town in much too short a time. It is also the reason that Hull voters have become very active in changing those officials and establishing tighter growth limits in Hull.

Rather than perpetuating stereotypical sentiments between Hull and Cohasset residents, we would invite you to send a reporter to the proposed public hearings and our annual town meeting in April where this agreement will again be brought before the public.

If we are ever to be "caring neighbors, not competitors" as you suggest, the burden is on the media to consider carefully the reportorial emphasis we present to our readers.

Fanning the feud may sell newspapers but it does nothing to foster greater cooperation and a regional solution to common problems.

Sincerely,
Susan Ovans

It's happening...

Discussion of nature trail

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold its monthly meeting in Walton Rodgers Hall Tuesday, March 22.

This is the President's Tea where the presidents of surrounding garden clubs are invited. Tea will be served at 12 p.m. followed by a meeting featuring David Clapp, Director of the South Shore Regional Center of the Mass. Audubon Society, Marshfield.

Clapp will show slides and discuss the proposed Nature Study Area on 59 acres adjacent to the two Cohasset elementary schools. Flowers for the tea table will be arranged by Mrs. Donald Larson.

Garden Club prepares for show

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset is finalizing preparations for a standard flower show which will take place Tuesday, May 10, at the South Shore Art Center. The theme of the show is "Genesis".

Tickets may be purchased at the Cohasset Community Center at 3 North Main St. in Cohasset. This will be a fund raising activity for the club.

Garden Club annual meeting

The Community Garden Club of Cohasset will be having their annual luncheon meeting and fashion show Tuesday, May 24 at the Barker Tavern in Scituate. Festivities will start promptly at 11 a.m.

Fashions will be presented by The Talbots of Hingham and Kakas Furs of Newbury St. Tickets may be purchased at the Cohasset Community Center at 3 North Main St. Seating is limited. All tickets must be purchased by May 10.

Music news

Cohasset instrumental music teachers Suzanne Parker and Colleen Foley will be performing with the Metropolitan Wind Symphony on the following dates:

Sunday, March 20 — Sanders Theatre, Harvard University, 2 p.m.

Wednesday, March 30 — Norwood Junior High School, 8 p.m.

Saturday, April 9 — U.N.H (times to be announced), College Band Directors National Associaton Clinic.

Sunday, April 10 — Faneuil Hall in Boston, (time to be announced).

Sunday, May 15 — Bernardi's Function Hall in Walpole, 2 p.m.

Republican club to meet

The South Shore Republican Club will meet Monday, March 21 at 1 p.m. at the Norwell Grange Hall, Route 123, at South Street.

The speaker will be Joseph Malone, Executive Director of the Massachusetts Republican State Committee.

The public is welcome.

Cable TV award presentation

The Fourth Annual Golden Tape Awards hosted by American Cablesystems Regional Vice President, John King, will be held March 29.

This year's black tie event includes thirteen community television categories such as Best Educational Program, Best Community Event and Best Producer.

Awards will be presented by area judges and American Cablesystems representatives in recognition of outstanding producers and shows produced on the South Shore this year.

The Golden Tape Awards will be telecast live on cable channel 53.

Women's Influence in the world

"Behold Thy Handmaiden: Women as a Force for Good" is the theme of the annual Women's conference sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, to be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., March 19, at the Foxboro LDS chapel, 76 Main St., Foxboro (on Rt. 140, just north of the center.)

The keynote speaker, Cheri Loveless, is a homemaker, author, activist and mother of six-having appeared on Donahue, Hour Magazine, and CBN's Women of the 80's. Loveless founded the organization "Mothers at Home"to help build the image of mothers who choose to remain home with their children.

In addition, there are 16 theme-related workshops, a luncheon, musical program and reception to meet the speaker and teachers. For pre-registration and more information, call Polly Doggett 383-1847.

Little League meeting

There will be a general meeting of the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association (CYAA) Wednesday, March 23, at 7:30 p.m. at the American Legion Post across from Kimball's.

Everyone interested in coaching or volunteering in any capacity is invited to attend.

The 1988 season itinerary will be discussed for all leagues — farm, minor, major, pony.

Registration will be March 26, at the Little League field house from 9 a.m. to noon.

Lunch with Easter bunny

The Cohasset Community Center is sponsoring Lunch with the Easter Bunny at the Center Saturday, March 26 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The menu will consist of hot dogs, salad bar, drink and dessert. The cost is $2 for children and $3 for adults.

Tickets are available at the Community Center at 3 North Main St. and must be purchased in advance. There will also be a clown to entertain the children.

Deadline near for Cohasset race

With less than a week remaining to register for the Cohasset Roadrace by the Sea, applicants are approaching the 800 runner-limit.

The March 27 event will again be started at 1 p.m. by former Marathon Director Will Cloney. T-shirts have been sponsored by local merchants, and many local restaurants and businesses have donated prizes for the class awards.

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor an annual trophy to the first Cohasset runner to cross the finish line, and the Rotary Club will continue to sponsor a trophy for the first Cohasset team.

The event, sponsored by the Cohasset Rotary under the direction of Roy Fitzsimmons and Peter Logan, has become a ritual of spring in Cohasset.

Please restrain dogs on the day of the race to avoid harm to the runners or animals. Refreshments will be served at the Community Center, donated by Sarasota Springs, Claushauser, and Poland Springs. T-shirts are available to all applicants who pay the $7 entry fee.

Applications are still available at Cohasset Liquors, Good Sports and Harbor Liquors. The deadline is March 22.

Art center programs

Art center receives grant

The South Shore Art Center recently received a grant from the Harold Brooks Foundation of Quincy in support of the Center's ongoing lecture/workshop series.

Shirley F. Neer, president of the Center, expressed the board's appreciation of this funding. The grant will be used to bolster the Sunday-at-the-Center lecture series and the Design for Living Workshops through increased promotion and purchase of equipment.

The Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, is currently running the Sunday-at-the-Center program which presents a combination of topics geared to a broad range of interests, including developing a collector's eye for works of emerging artists, the art of papermaking and dilemmas for the artist in making the transition from private to public view. A series of Saturday workshop topics range from silk painting to stone carving to drawing on the subjects of dreams for source material.

The grant from the Harold Brooks Foundation, established as a charitable trust fund in 1984 from the estate of Braintree businessman Harold Brooks, will help defray the costs of advertising and promotion and the purchase of folding chairs, storage dollies, room-darkening shades, microphone, lecturn and amplifier.

New art center workshops

Saturday, March 19, regional artist Syma comes to the Center at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset for a day-long (10 a.m. to 4 p.m.) workshop "Life Mask Making." Participants will use plaster gauze bandages to create masks on each other.

The following day, Sunday, March 30 at 3 p.m. noted Brookline psychotherapist and artist consultant Alan Cohen will explore for his audience the various psychological dilemmas and decision points faced by makers of art. Both the workshop and the lecture require advanced registration.

During the Life Mask Making workshop, Syma will include a slide presentation depicting the history of masks and mask making, which she hopes will stimulate decorating ideas for the masks. Students will be able to decorate their masks with color, feathers, glitter and personal treasures.

During Cohen's Sunday lecture, he will discuss with his audience the usefulness of clarifying one's priorities as an artist. Cohen has combined his work as a psychotherapist and as an artist and has developed a program of professional support and technical information for artists who wish to expand their public audience.

Further information on Syma's workshop or Cohen's lecture may be obtained by calling the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548.

Cohen's lecture "Dilemmas for the Artist" is part of the Sunday-at-the-Center series which is funded by grants from the Joseph Drown Foundation, the Harold Brooks Foundation and the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council as administered by the Councils of Duxbury, Braintree and Weymouth. The Center is supported in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Spring open house at art center

Artist Michael Phillipps will demonstrate at the South Shore Art Center how learning to copy the masters dispels the fear students face when confronting the task of painting.

His demonstration will begin at 5 p.m. Sunday, March 20 as part of the spring open house. Visitors will learn about classes on the spring schedule, meet instructors and enroll in courses. The Center, at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, has a new session of courses for adults beginning March 28.

The purpose of Phillip's exercise is for students not to become masters, but for them to gain the self-confidence through their accomplishments.

Phillips' demonstration follows the March 20 Sunday-at-the-Center lecture at 3 p.m. "Dilemmas for the Artist" by Alan Cohen, a noted Brookline psychotherapist and artist consultant. He will explore for his audience the various psychological dilemmas and decision points faced by makers of art, which can impact on the transition from private to public view.

Advanced registration is required for the Cohen lecture. For further information call the Center at 383-9548.

Programs of the Center are supported in part by the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency, and the Sunday-at-the-Center series is supported by grants from the Joseph Drown Foundation, the Harold Brooks Foundation and from the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council as administered by the Councils of Duxbury, Braintree and Weymouth.

They may have lost the battle, but some officials believe Cohasset High School has won the war.

Angered that Cohasset High's basketball teams were prevented from playing in Boston Garden, some strong voices raised loud objections.

Senator William Golden said the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) "discriminated" against Cohasset by not allowing the small school Division III tournament teams into the famed Boston arena.

School committee chairman Joseph Nedrow was equally disturbed. He suggested in the future the MIAA use a lottery system to schedule tournament finals in the Boston Garden.

Although MIAA officials did not budge from their original position, Nedrow felt Cohasset supporters "at least raised their consciousness."

He said, "the issue is more than Cohasset. At least we raised their consciousness about small schools. We're supposed to be creating a good experience for young athletes, and by denying them the privilege of playing in Boston Garden, we are denying them that good experience. If there is only time to schedule six slots, then there should be a lottery system for the boys and girls teams. Give everyone a fair chance.

"Afterall, Cohasset and all the schools within Division III pay the same MIAA dues as the big schools. We should all have an equal opportunity for those good experiences. I feel bad. Every kid dreams of playing on the same floor as Larry Bird and the Celtics. But our kids won't have that chance," Nedrow said.

Neal also noted that all teams in the state finals will play at the Worcester Centrum Saturday, March 19.

Senator Golden explained that he was fighting for equal treatment by the state organization to all high schools. "The question is, when all schools pay the same dues, are they all given the same consideration?" he inquired.

He noted that by eliminating small schools from the most prestigious tournament location, the MIAA was diminishing the college scouting opportunities for those schools. "There will not be as many scouts at Bentley as there were in the Boston Garden," the senator stated. "They are not ... the kids from Cohasset the same opportunity ... the same exposure ... from other schools. This may be the difference between a student getting into a college, or receiving a scholarship to that college, or not."

He added, "To think that little Cohasset is sending two teams to the tournament is amazing. And our athletes put out as much as effort and talent as any other athletes. Not to allow them the same advantages is outrageous."

Although still angered after his discussions with MIAA officials last weekend, Sen. Golden acknowledged "the MIAA now has a new force to be reckoned with. High school athletes, whether they're from a big or a little school, must have the same rights and advantages. And if the MIAA can't deliver, they're going to have some very real problems."

He added, "to think that little Cohasset is sending two teams to the tournament is amazing. And our athletes put out as much as effort and talent as any other athletes. Not to allow them the same advantages is outrageous."

Although still angered after his discussions with MIAA officials last weekend, Sen. Golden acknowledged "the MIAA now has a new force to be reckoned with. High school athletes, whether they're from a big or a little school, must have the same rights and advantages. And if the MIAA can't deliver, they're going to have some very real problems."

School news

Sherlock Schultz

We were on our field trip to see "Sherlock Holmes" at the Berklee Performance Center. The school bus was traveling down Mass. Avenue when Greg Schultz, a fourth grader at Deer Hill, spotted his family's recently stolen car going in the opposite direction. He was sure it was their car because he recognized the license plate and three bumper stickers. The information was written down and given to a policeman. When Mr. Schultz was notified, he called the police and was disappointed to find out the car had not been recovered. Sherlock Holmes solved his second mystery in the play, but the mystery of the stolen car remained. The next morning the class felt badly that the case had not been solved, until our school secretary, Ms. Conte, arrived with good news. The car had been found. Watch out Holmes, here comes Sherlock Schultz!

Mrs. Price's "O" Week

Odd Orange Octopus Stew was cooked up in our imagination by Mrs. Price's P.M. class for "O" week. The ingredients were one octopus and lots of olives, onions, oatmeal, oranges, and omlets, then cooked in the oven.

Ben Peterson brought in oar locks. Better get them back so you can row the boat ashore.

Aryanna Afshar brought in a beautiful stuffed owl named John Lennon. The owl was found the day John Lennon was killed.

"P" week brings many pretty, polite, pupils into kindergarten. Caitlin Stansell and her pretty, polite, pink and purple chicken brought a pointy pencil to share.

Jamey Strebel made a glittering "P" for Mrs. Price to wear proudly all week.

Liam O'Donnell brought and ate a tasty piece of pizza.

Askley Kild shared a pretty Chinese pin cushion.

Sophomores — Elizabeth (Liz) Buckley, Noah Hill, James (Jim) Reidy, and Jill Hamilton.

P.S.O. Phone-a-thon

The P.S.O. will conduct its annual Phone-a-thon on Wednesday, April 6 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Volunteers will call families of school-age children asking them to make a pledge to help fund the enrichment activities planned for the 1988-89 school year. All donations are tax-deductible.

Students rock for Heart Fund

In tribute to two beloved colleagues, teachers at Cohasset High School thought a fundraiser for the heart association would be an appropriate gesture.

Home economics teachers Carolyn Contis and Patricia Wunschel wanted to sponsor a special activity - one that would be a fitting tribute to the late Charles Davis and Ed Sheehan and would attract a number of student participants.

Both Davis and Sheehan died from heart ailments.

When Wunschel mentioned the idea to the junior high school students "as usual," they responded enthusiastically. They decided to hold the event on an appropriate date, St. Valentine's Day. The event would be a rockathon, in which a group of students would settle into a rocking chair and rock back and forth for as long as possible. Each student was responsible for soliciting pledges for each minute they rocked.

About $600 was raised by the group this year, which included mostly junior high students, Wunschel said.

The rockathon's overall champion was Meka-Marie Laugelle. The 13 year-old seventh grader raised $158 in pledges, including one $30 pledge for her efforts.

Meka-Marie figured she received about 42 sponsors, averaging a penny a minute. Meka-Marie's group started around lunchtime and ended their rocking about the time school ended for the day. One member of the group would rock for about five minutes. Then within 30 seconds, another member took over the seat.

Choral director Bryan Marks served as dee-jay, playing music for the enjoyment of the young participants. Dr. John Packard video-taped the session.

Meka-Marie was generously rewarded for her efforts. Mr. and Mrs. Shumaker donated a pair of Celtics tickets to the seventh grader. According to Wunschel, this was the Shumaker's way of thanking the teachers at Cohasset High for the education their children received there.

LWV voter registration

More than 74 seniors registered to vote during an assembly sponsored at Cohasset High School by the League of Women Voters, with assistance from the PSO.

League Voter Service Chairman Debbie Cook emphasized the importance of an educated vote, which the League promotes through sponsorship of candidate debates and study of local, state, and national issues.

Social Studies Department Chairman Dorothy Wondolowski explained the voting process for primaries and local and national elections. The right to vote is guaranteed by the Constitution, she said, and was granted to 18 year olds following the Vietnam War, when the nation realized the irony of sending to an undeclared war young men and women ineligible to vote.

Democratic Town Committee Representative Ron Goodwin and Republican Town Committee Representative Julie Guild urged the students to consider the differences between the two parties, particularly in the issues of the role of government in the economy and social welfare, the environment and education. Students were advised to register for the party which best represents their values, and in the halls following the assembly students could be heard hotly debating their party choices.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson outlined the legal rights and responsibilities of 18 year olds, including the rights to own property, to enter into legal contracts, to be tried as an adult. Some responsibilities concurrent with these rights are the obligation of males to register with the selective service and the responsibility of all to vote. Cohasset's Town Meeting, Henderson said, represents the purest form of democracy and, as registered voters, students can participate in town decisions, like appropriations for school and town facilities, that directly affect them.

Cohasset High School secretary Jean Higgins, who has been sworn in as the offical registrar for the school, encourages any student who will be 18 before the November election to come in to the main office at any time to register to vote.

All seniors were invited to hear the candidates for local office discuss local issues at the League of Women Voters Town Affairs Night Tuesday, March 29, at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall. They were encouraged to attend Town Meeting Saturday, April 2, and to vote in town elections April 9.

Kindergarten program

The Joseph Osgood's Annual Kindergarten Orientation for parents of children age-appropriate for Kindergarten in the Fall will be held at the Osgood School, Thursday, March 17, at 10 a.m. in the School Library. This meeting is for parents — please do not bring your kindergarten youngsters with you.

Kindergarten screening originally scheduled for the week of March 21st has been postponed. Instead two days in May will be set aside for small groups of incoming Kindergarteners to enjoy a casual visit to our Kindergarten Open Space. We are looking forward to seeing you March 17th.

Thanks to Kim and Chris

A special thank you goes to Kim Ward and Chris Condrat, two of Deer Hill's sixth graders. They visited a third grade class at Osgood (Mrs. Atkinson's) and answered questions regarding the differences between the two schools.

Many of the third graders are anxious about the forthcoming change, but through Kim and Chris's efforts, much of that fear is gone.

Math League winners

Last Tuesday, the sixth grade and some of the fifth grade, from Deer Hill School, participated in the New England Math League Contest, sponsored by the New England Math League.

Ann Senechal came in first and Christa Ansbergs came in second. Tied for third were Adam Reid and Bonnie Krueger. Tied for fourth were Brendan Mulligan, Jerimiah Stevenson and Jessica Jenkins.

Spring class registration at Community Center

The Cohasset Community Center will be holding registration for its spring classes from March 9 through March 18.

Registrations will be available in some familiar classes along with many new additions. Call 383-0088 to register or for more information.

No sweat is a new program which consists of stretching exercises designed to relax tense muscles, relieve aching necks and backs, and promote a balance between mind and body.

The class includes an extended progressive relaxation segment which decreases stress and increases the participants' energy level. This program minimizes the problems that contribute to back pain. It consists of stretching exercises for the back, strengthening exercises for the opposing muscles, and final period of stretching and complete relaxation for stress reduction. This class is taught by Normandie Nigh. Call 383-0088 for further information and to register.

SAT Preparation in math and English will be offered by the Cohasset Community Center on Wednesday and Thursday evenings starting March 23. Review the basic skills in English and math in preparation for College Boards. In order to tailor to student's needs, size of the class is limited. Classes are held at Cohasset High School from 7 to 9 p.m. All classes must be pre-registered.

Saturday gymnastic classes will be offered for both boys and girls starting March 12. Ruthann will be teaching these classes. Call 383-0088 to inquire about time and ability levels.

New Kodaly Music classes for children aged 12 months to 3 years of age will be starting on April 5 and 6. These classes are offered for an 8 week period. The Kodaly concept is effective with both gifted and non-gifted children as well as children with special needs. Authentic children's folk songs, rhymes and games are used in the classes, the rhythm of which are the rhythms of our language.

Tiny Tot Chef which is a cooking class for 3 to 5 year olds will be starting on Thursday, March 31 from 9 to 10 a.m.

Pre-School Science and Nature, a class for 3 to 5 year olds will also be starting on March 31 at 10 to 11 a.m. These classes must be pre-registered because of the small class size. Chef and Nature are both eight-week classes.

Another 4-H Babysitting Course will be offered by registered nurse, Linda Farrag, Wednesday afternoons from 3:30 to 5:30 for children 10 and over.

This four-week program will give participants a better understanding of the safety and care of children. It will explain what is expected from a babysitter, discuss safety and practical tips for babysitter, demonstrate basic first aid procedures as they relate to young children, and explore ways to amuse children whom they are babysitting thorugh arts and crafts.

An Ingenue Charm Course will be offered by Noreen DaRue Minichiello, a professional model, Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5:30 starting April 7. This is a 6-week course which includes general hygiene and grooming, walking, poise and exercising, proper use of make-up, wardrobe and accessories, personality awareness, and a graduation ceremony.

A Flower Arranging class will be taught by Master Judge, Tish Grinnell, on Thursday mornings from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. for four weeks starting March 24.

A Pediatric Safety and Accident workshop, taught by Ann Stadtler, will be held Thursday evening from 7:30 to 9 p.m. This one evening workshop will discuss a home first aid kit, prevention of accidents, and treatment of common injuries. This workshop will be conducted on March 31 and must be pre-registered.

Dancercize, with Karen Kirkendall, is scheduled for Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 8:45. Dancercize combines elements of dance and aerobic exercise.

Aerobics classes are scheduled from 9 to 10 a.m. Monday through Friday and Saturday mornings from 9 to 10:30. Classes are also given on Tuesday and Thursday from 5 to 6 p.m. Jazz aerobics is scheduled for Mondays from 7 to 8:30 p.m. No Sweat class of stretching and toning is held Tuesday and Thursday mornings from 7 to 8:45.

A new Mothers and Infants group is starting Monday, April 4, from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. This will be a six-week class for moms and infants from birth to 18 months. The subjects covered will include the psychological development, physical development, nutrition and sleep problems, medical problems, safety and accidents, issues of the parenting role, and discipline from birth to 18 months.

A Weight Control and Nutrition program will be offered by Pat Messing, a nutritionist, on Tuesday evenings from 6:45 to 8:15 strting April 5. This class uses proven methods of weight control including behavior modification, food awareness and increasing metabolism. Each class also includes an exercise period. This is an eight week program.

A Color Analysis Workshop will be conducted by Kathleen Pratt on Friday morning, March 11, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. This includes a complete color analysis by draping — using seasonal method, professional skin analysis determining skin type, adaptability, general condition and prescription for skin care routine. Also included is a complete makeover using color-coded makeup and the proper tools for achieving a harmonious image to fit your particular lifestyle.

Lex America Language Play Group wil start Friday, April 8, from 10:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. Once a week, family members gather together to sing, dance, and play along to music and stories in Japanese, Spanish, German, Korean, English, Chinese and French. As they play and experiment, children, ages one to three, acquire the languages naturally, similar to how they learned their first language. This program provides the opportunity for people of all ages and nationalities to learn about new languages and cultures in a relaxed and enjoyable environment.

To register for any of these courses, please call 383-0088 from Monday to Friday. The Cohasset Community Center is a non-profit organization.

An Easter Egg decorating workshop will be held March 31 at the Cohasset Community Center from 3:30 to 5 p.m. for grades 1 to 5.

CHS basketball tourney . . .

"I knew the big kid (Condakes) was a great player," said Minelli, after the game. "We weren't giving enough help early with him, and then when we did the other kids just shot sensationally. I felt at the time, that if we could stay within say ten points, with the way they were shooting, we'd be in good shape. I figured their shooting percentage would even off after a while."

Behind Condakes, who scored 20 of his team high 29 points in the first half, Weston took control of the game late in the first quarter. They ended the period with a 12-2 run which staked them to a 22-16 lead. In the second quarter they continued to widen the margin, getting it all the way up to 12 (33-21) once midway through the quarter, and appeared on the verge of blowing it completely open.

However, it was at about this point that Edwards simply concluded enough was enough. In the final three minutes prior to the intermission, Cohasset's superguard almost single handedly got his team back into the game, scoring all but two of the Skippers points in a 14-6 run. This made things a whole lot cheerier heading into the locker room, down only four, 41-37.

"I just thought it was time for me to take the ball to the hoop," said Edwards, and I figured that as long as they kept going in and I kept getting them off, I'd keep taking them."

This was merely a preview of things to come from Mr. 2,699 and counting. In the third quarter it was all Bryan Edwards. Everything he threw in the direction of the cylinder seemed as if it were being

Docket No. 88E0015-P1

To Margaret Elgin of Milton in said County, Quincy Savings Bank of Quincy in said County and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas F. Manning, Jr. of Cohasset in the County, of Norfolk representing that he holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: The land and the buildings situated in Cohasset in Norfolk County, bounded and described as follows:

EASTERLY: by the Westerly line of a New Right of Way, as shown on plan herein after referred to, two hundred fifty-seven and 75/100 (257.75) feet;

SOUTHERLY: by Lot D and by L E7, two hundred ninety-seven (297) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY: by the Southeasterly line of a Way, three hundred thirty-eight and 02/100 (338.02) feet; and

NORTHERLY: by a curved line on said Way, forty-three and 89/100 (43.89) feet.

See Land Court Plan 1924X Certificate No. 13768, Book 69, setting forth that he desires that all—of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than four hundred thousand dollars and petitioner further prays for compensation more fully set out in said petition, and further prays that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of March 1988, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this eleventh day of February 1988.

HONEY BAKED HAM, SO GOOD WE BUILT A STORE AROUND IT.

For more than 25 years, Americans have enjoyed the unique flavor of Honey Baked Ham. Using our own family recipe, each ham is specially cured and slowly cooked in hickory smoke for up to 30 hours. Honey Baked Ham is spiral sliced... slices carved allowing the meat to remain on the bone. Each slice is just the right thickness to let you savor every bite. Then Honey Baked Ham is glazed with a secret blend of honey and spices that seals in the incredibly delicious flavor. Every ham is fully cooked, completely ready to serve.

Honey Baked Ham is sold only from Honey Baked Ham Stores. There are more than 100 HoneyBaked Stores across America, and we are proud to be in Weymouth. Call, or better yet, come by and taste the exquisite flavor of Honey Baked Ham.

CHS teams roar onto state finals

pulled in by some type of basketball magnet.

In the quarter he tossed in 19 of the Skippers 21-points, including three three-pointers (which, unofficially, made it 6-for-9 on the game). Condakes again lead they way for his team with 9 of their 17 points to keep things on an even par and send it into the final quarter deadlocked at 58.

The majority of the fourth quarter was played in a manner truly befitting play at this plateau of the Tourney; with all the tension and drama any fan would dare to hope.

There were four lead changes and two ties. Cohasset's Edwards and Mike Smith (13 points) picked up their fourth fouls early and less than a minute apart. For Weston, Condakes also picked up his fourth and Billy Wadkins (16-points) fouled out.

It was at the 1:41 mark that Cohasset took its first lead since 65-64, when Matt Maloney (nine-points) was hammered in the paint. Still somehow he managed to put the ball in the hole when he made his free throw his team lead 71-70.

What can be considered the single most important series of events in the game, came on the subsequent Weston possession. With Weston desperately wanting to score, they forced the ball into a well-defended Condakes. He incidentally was held scoreless in the final period. He faked once, faked twice and pivoted left and then right looking for room to get his shot off, but the 6'5" Smith refused to commit, which forced an off-balance one-handed shot by the much bigger center. The shot clanged hard off the back of the rim, Smith grabbed it quickly and was immediately hacked by the frustrated Condakes.

And then, in what had to be the most pressure-packed couple of seconds in Smith's life, he calmly stepped to the line having missed three of his previous six attempts, and hit nothing but net on both one-pointers.

The Skippers then were able to put the game away quickly when invaluable senior point guard Dave Schultz (8-points) made a pair of steals in the final minute, the first of which he carried in for an easy two by himself, and the second going to Edwards as a reward for a job well done.

Saturday, one way or another the Skippers will wrap-up their sensational campaign at the Worcester Centrum (12:30 p.m.) where they will meet the winner of Wednesday night's showdown between Worcester Vocational and St. Joseph's to determine Division Three bragging rights for an entire year in Massachusetts.

Cohasset Girls Basketball

The boys basketball team is not the only group of Cohasset High athletes to have generated much excitement around town.

The girls basektball squad continued in its quest for equal recognition from the hoop-crazed Cohasset natives, as they managed to keep pace with their counterparts by beating Notre Dame Academy in surprisingly easy fashion, 55-34, and capturing an Eastern Mass. Tourney Crown of their own.

The lady Skippers, who were originally slated to meet the North Sectional Champs Tuesday night at Stonehill College in Easton received a change in plans Sunday. This was the day after they shocked the local basketball community by upsetting previously unbeaten Jeremiah Burke, 52-46 in overtime, as the MIAA accommodated Cohasset partisans by making possible the Cohasset basketball double-header that took place Tuesday night at Bentley College.

Entering the contest the Skipppers, and specifically head coach Billy Fallon, were quite confident in their ability to contend with Notre Dame, an attitude which prevailed largely as a result of the success over a much bigger and faster Burke club.

"We match-up with our next opponents very well (not sure at the time whether it would be Notre Dame or Greater Lawrence)," said the coach following the Burke thriller. And, after Tuesday night's blow out, he continued on this point by saying that the difference was, indeed, "like night and day."

However, going in, neither he, his girls nor the scores of Skipper backers who made the Waltham trek had any way of anticipating the one sided manner of the affair.

Right from the opening tip, Cohasset's overall superiority was frighteningly revealed, as they rolled out to a 7-0 lead to start the game (N.D. did not log its first point until the 3:11 mark of the opening quarter), and never looked back.

The second quarter was so bad it was embarrassing for not only the Notre Dame supporters, but for those from Cohasset as well. The Skippers simply outplayed their opponents in every phase of the game.

At the intermission, Cohasset had already seen to it that the entire second half would become what has got to be the longest extended garbage time in the Eastern Mass Tourney history, having coasted to a 28-11 lead.

They did it with exceptional play at both ends of the court, and, as is so often the case, the two complemented each other wonderfully.

Fallon deployed his bread-and-butter 3/4-court press, which virtually brought Notre Dame to its knees. It also made possible several easy transition hoops for the Skippers, three of which were scored by invaluable point-guard Liz O'Leary (a game high 16 points). And, on the occasions when a half-court offense had to be settled on, exceptional work both inside and out, Cindy Spooner (11 of 12 points in first half) and Marge Murphy (nine points) respectively, continued to frustrate N.D.

"Our interior passing, especially in the second quarter, was excellent," said Fallon following the game, "and the floor opened up a little bit too, which got us some fast break hoops."

"Liz (O'Leary) and Cindy (Spooner) keyed us tonight, and Marge got us some big hoops as well."

In addition to beating Burke this week, the Skippers also defeated Dover-Sherborn 54-38, Wednesday night, at Oliver Ames High School (in Easton), in the South Sectional semi-finals by breaking open a 34-34 deadlock after three, outscoring the Raiders by a whopping 20-4 margin in the final quarter to breeze 54-38.

Now one hurdle stands between the Cohasset girls and top honors in Massachusetts Division III basketball. That will be the winner of the state's Western champs, either North Brookfield or Frontier. The game will be played at Worcester Centrum at 10:45 a.m., Saturday.

THE GIRLS ARE NUMBER ONE!

It was a time to shout from the rafters of the Worcester Centrum. Let everyone know the girls are the 1988 champs!

A 'bare bones' budget stays at $5.1 million

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The school department will stand by its "realistic" budget of $5.1 million for next year.

Despite "recent fiscal concerns," of the town, Supt. Stephen Hart said the proposed budget "strikes a balance between fiscal realities and the continuing educational needs of Cohasset."

At the school committee's public hearing Monday night, Supt. Hart said many requests from department heads within the system were cut during original budget sessions with school principals. The 6.9 percent increase over last year's appropriation does not represent an ideal budget, he stated. "This represents very realistic, uninflated requests to the town," the superintendent noted. "It is my recommendation we present this budget to town meeting."

As the superintendent explained Tuesday night to the advisory committee, one foreign language teaching position has been eliminated, and a retired English teacher will not be replaced in the 1988-89 budget.

The largest increase, about 70 percent in the school budget for next year, is in staff salaries. Supt. Hart explained that contract negotiations with the teachers' union have commenced. Any money for teacher raises will have to come out of this budget, he said.

In their discussions with the advisory committee Tuesday night, school committee members noted no money for pay raises is "hidden" elsewhere in the budget. What the administration can offer in collective bargaining contract increases is within the proposed salary total of $3,720,604. That is a $200,000 increase over last year's entire instructional salary account.

Advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby noted that some townspeople may consider a five to six percent teacher salary raise unfair, compared to a three percent raise given to town employees.

But advisor William Lean noted that the average town employee actually receives a seven-to-eight percent pay hike, taking into account a three

Sewer articles prompt new town meeting

The town will now be facing an annual and a special town meeting April 2, a municipal election April 9, another special election April 25, and a special election to override Proposition 2 1/2 sometime in May.

The new addition this week is the second special town meeting. Selectmen agreed to a request Monday night by the sewer commissioners to schedule a special town meeting April 25.

Three articles sponsored by the commission are proposed for that meeting.

Which articles will be presented to Cohasset voters will depend on the outcome of the April 11 annual town meeting in Hull. At that meeting, voters will be asked to approve the proposed intermunicipal agreement with Cohasset - the same agreement they failed to support at their Feb. 29 special town meeting.

If Hull approves the agreement April 11, Cohasset voters will be asked to implement the $1.1 million design and construction of a sewage interceptor pipe from Cohasset into the Hull

Two top teams a rarity in state

By Mike Spellman

Their mere presence was enough. Regardless of Saturday's outcome, Cohasset High is widely recognized as the top basketball school in Massachusetts.

Of all the high schools in the Commonwealth only C.H.S. has both its teams representing it, vying for top honors in the annual State Championships at the Worcester Centrum. This is a type of occurence which is a rarity in any state in any year. Indeed, the story of the '87-88 hoop campaign for the Skipper team was reminiscent of a children's fairytale or even a John Avildsen (producer of Rocky series) film.

Unfortunately, courtesy of St. Joseph's of Pittsfield, the traditional picture-perfect ending was marred. While Billy Fallon's girls prevaled 54-44 over Frontier Regional of South Deerfield to capture their first ever state title, Eddie Minelli's two-time champion boys ('85 and '86) were more or less shocked by the 77-58 manhandling they suffered at the hands of the Pittsfield based team.

For the girls team five seniors, four of whom were starters — there is the profound feeling of accomplishment that will be rekindled every time each of them thinks about basketball. For the boys, eight of whom are seniors and each of them key contributers, most have already been a part of a State Championship team. This year, coming up one win short, is not exactly cause for ignomony.

Meet the candidates

The Cohasset League of Women Voters is sponsoring Town Affairs Night, Tuesday, March 29.

This is an opportunity to meet and hear the candidates running for office. Voters will also hear the facts pertaining to the proposed override of Proposition 2 1/2.

People involved with the town will be on hand to discuss, educate and answer questions with regard to this issue.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. at the Town Hall. For further information, please contact Debbie Cook at 383-6313.

Rep. Murray joined protest

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray (R)-Cohasset joined with Sen. William Golden (D) in opposing the omission of Division 3 basketball finals in Boston Garden.

A House of Representatives resolution was accepted in the Massachusetts Legislature last week by Murray along with Golden's Senate resolution.

"Smaller schools pay the same fee to MIAA as the larger schools and Division 3 should be treated the same as Division I and 2 schools", Murray said.

Murray's father, the late "Nate" Hurwitz was a professional basketball player. He was director of the Boys Clubs of Boston in Charlestown where he started, which is now the longest-running basketball tournament in the world.

"My father certainly would have objected as I do to the callous and unfair treatment of smaller schools," Murray said.

Murray also contacted the MIAA to register her protest and is not satisfied with their answers. She also said, "I certainly hope that this episode will never happen again."

Landfill consideration

Once pollution and odor control facilities are in place at Cohasset Heights Ltd., the board of health recommended the town consider using the commercial landfill.

In a letter to selectmen this week, the health board stated, "as long as a condition of pollution and odor are occurring, the board would not recommend CHL as an alternative to any solid waste management plan. When the proposed controls are in place, the board of health suggests that (owner) Paul Barry's offer then be considered."

Barry, the owner of Cohasset Heights Ltd., made an offer earlier this month to town officials, which would allow the town to dump its trash at the commercial landfill "for little or no cost." In return, the town would have to agree halt all ongoing litigation against the landfill and allow the operation to expand into the 30-plus acres currently owned by Barry.

The zoning board of appeals is currently fighting the commercial landfill in court, after refusing a special permit to expand into another area of the dump. And the appeals has stated that according to a 1976 special permit, only demolition debris is allowed within the commercial landfill.

The town has signed a 15-year contract with SEMASS, but will not participate until the second phase of the facility is constructed, about 1991. In the meantime, the dispsoal area study committee has recommended a short-term disposal contract with an Orrington, Maine firm for $500,000 a year.

In the letter to selectmen, Health Agent Joseph Godzik said that CHL has prepared a comprehensive groundwater interceptor and treatment plant design. It was agreed at a recent meeting between the town, CHL and the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) that the $1.5 million groundwater installation must be working before expansion into Area IV A can proceed. "That is good news and the town should congratulate itself for perserverance," Dr. Godzik wrote.

The health agent also noted that an odor control facility has received DEQE approval and will soon be installed at the commercial landfill. He noted it may be a year before the effect of odor control is known.

Straits Pond group

At the suggestion of Hull's representative to the Hingham, Hull and Cohasset tri-town committee, a groundwater protection committee will be formed as part of a Straits Pond Cleanup Committee.

Hull representative John Silva suggested in a letter to Cohasset and Hingham selectmen last week that the issue of the Straits Pond clean-up is a tri-town issue "and a collaborative effort by Hull, Hingham and Cohasset is necessary to rectify the pond's problems and their impact on the surrounding area and in particular the quality of life of area residents," he stated.

He further suggested that each town's conservation and health boards contact the tri-town representative about a designee to the groundwater committee. Each town's designee to the groundwater protection committee will also be active on the Straits Pond cleanup committee, he added.

Sludge suggestion

The local board of health has suggested that rather than studying the subject of sludge disposal, Hull be allowed to compost the material at the Cedar Street landfill.

The state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE) will fund 90 percent of a study to investigate longterm sludge disposal methods from the Hull wastewater treatment plant.

But the Cohasset health board said a solution is readily available here. "Such composting would take place at a proposed regional composting facility at the Cedar Street landfill, designed to compost leaf and yard waste, bulky wooden demolition materials, pallets and sludge. The composting of septage in such a facility will also be explored," according to a letter sent from the health board to the Cohasset Sewer Commission.

Health Agent Joseph Godzik explained that rather than spending money on a study, "it would be better to expend those funds on the design of a composting facility." Speaking for the health board, Dr. Godzik suggested that the contract for the landfill's transfer station could be amended to include a composting facility "if the funds were available from the DEQE," he wrote.

The health board suggested a combined meeting be scheduled with the Hull and Cohasset sewer commissions and the health board to discuss the proposal.

In a related matter, DEQE Chief Engineer Paul Taurasi informed the Hull sewer commission last week that any longterm sludge solution is required for that town "regardless of whether Cohasset and/or Hingham connect to the Hull sewerage system."

In answer to a question from the Hull sewer commission, Taurasi noted that Hull is under no obligation from the state to ever accept more sewerage from Cohasset than the 300,000 daily limit outlined in the proposed intermunicipal agreement. "Cohasset would bear the responsibility to solve its own problems," Taurasi stated. "Hulll would be under no obligation from the Division (of Wastewater Management) to accept additional Cohasset flow."

Authority vacancy

Selectmen are now accepting applications for a seat on the Cohasset Housing Authority.

The vacancy was created by the recent resignation of member Kathleen Conte. Conte's term expires in 1989.

The appointment of a new member will be made next month at a joint meeting of selectmen and the housing authority.

New member

Selectmen appointed a new member to the conservation commission.

Based on recommendations made by conservation chairman Merle Brown, selectmen appointed Veneta Roebuck to the commission. She has an extensive background in environmental conservation, according to Selectman James Gallagher, liason to the commission.

No town engineer

The town government structure committee will not recommend the town hire a fulltime engineer. But committee members suggested that in the future, the building inspector's job description include the duties of reviewing zoning by-laws and effectively enforcing those by-laws when projects are under construction.

After studying the need for a town engineer, the committee agreed the town's engineering needs "are best served by employing outside firms that have the expertise and specialized engineering services that are necessary to satisfy the various requirements of the town."

During its study and discussion with town committees and boards, the local board of health strongly recommended that a Department of Public Works be created to oversee the work performed the town's independent boards and departments. The government structure committee noted the suggestion was beyond the scope of its current study.

Annual cable company report

American Cablesystems General Manager Steve Farquhar recently presented a $908 check to the Cohasset Board of Selectmen. The payment represents the cable company's Cohasset franchise fee for 1987.

Farquhar also took the opportunity to report on the progress made by American Cablesystems last year on community television, programming, customer service and technical operations.

"We're pleased to report improvements in the amount and diversity of local and cable network programming; continued progress in better serving our customers; and technical improvements to our cable system," Farquhar said.

The local franchise fee, set by state statute, is based on the number of subscribers on the company's books as of December 31 of the previous year.

Farquhar also announced that the merger of American Cablesystems with Continental Cablevision, the nation's third largest cable operator, was completed Feb. 29.

"Our cable subscribers should notice no difference in service, programming or billing as a result of the merger," Farquhar said. "American's local and regional managers remain unchanged, and Continental is committed, legally and philosophically, to fulfilling all of the terms of American's local franchise agreements."

Education the key to approving tax override

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Educating the public about the cause and effect of a Proposition 2 1/2 override must begin immediately, town officials said last week.

At a meeting between town officials and department heads March 16, they agreed an educational strategy must be developed. But they have yet to unanimously agree whether to support that override.

Selectmen voted March 16 to support a general tax levy override to cover the town's essential services "at an amount to be determined." Selectman Cliff Mitman noted, "Frankly, I do not foresee any way we can not ask for an override. But the extent (of the override amount) will have to be hammered out." He suggested that whatever amount is requested for an override, it should be enough to project necessary expenditures for at least three years.

After researching the subject, Town Counsel Richard Henderson informed town officials last week that one general tax levy override will be necessary. That override, he explained, will be permanently built into the tax base, beginning in fiscal year 1989.

At the meeting, town officials agreed that because of lower-than-anticipated car excise taxes and water department revenues this year, the operating budget deficit for next year is close to $800,000.

Advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke commented, "part of this education process will be explaining to the townspeople how we were caught so unaware, and why this is such a surprise. We must assure them we've solved the problem. That that hasn't been done is a source of great concern."

Selectman Mitman agreed "red flags" should have been raised early in the budget preparation process. But he acknowledged that traditionally the expenditures, not receipts, are reviewed at that time. "We tend not to look at how the budgets are going except when we are setting them for next year," he added.

"I assume there has been no one there to track this money - that's frightening," advisory committee member Jill O'Donnell said. Several town officials, including assessors James Lagrotteria and Thomas Duggan agreed. They requested that a finance committee be established for that purpose.

"I suggest we form a finance committee to coordinate the financial affairs of town departments," Duggan said. He noted that assessors warned selectmen in December of a "serious cash flow problem" which resulted in the borrowing of money Oct. 1 in anticipation of taxes.

"First," Goedecke replied, "we have to figure out how to keep the boat we are in from sinking."

Throughout the March 16 session, assessors discredited figures used by the town accountant's office regarding estimated local receipts and local revenues. He asked Executive Secretary Donald Andrew, who served as interim accountant for several weeks, why a greater figure ($507,806) was used in the estimated motor vehicle excise tax receipts than was received the previous year. Andrew replied that was proper accounting procedure used throughout the state.

"But my estimate average is $394,000 for the last three years," Duggan stated. "To think that we will be getting more is very optimistic."

Andrew noted, "motor vehicle excise taxes are a problem statewide. (I was told at a recent accountant's convention) more towns are now considering Prop. 2 1/2 overrides and they are caused by the (decline) in motor vehicle excise taxes."

Officials agreed that in estimating the FY 89 deficit, motor vehicle excise tax revenue should be lowered by $50,000. They also agreed the $10,000 in "rooster" mooring fees (charged to a boater who stays temporarily at a vacant mooring) which was included in the revenue estimates, should be eliminated. Because that revenue has never been collected before this year, advisory committee chairman Goedecke suggested the total not be calculated as part of next year's operating budget.

Certified public accountant Raymond Kasperowicz was brought in two weeks ago by selectmen to review the troubled budget figures. At the March 16 meeting, he emphasized that another area of concern was the deficit in collected water department fees as compared to the estimate of $574,000.

Although Water Dept. Supt. Benjamin Curley said $522,645 in fees has been committed as of March 1, Kasperowicz noted that accounting must proceed on a cash basis, "and on a cash basis, you are lagging behind. You have to look at cash in the water department. Otherwise, we have to borrow from general fund resources."

Town Tresurer Elizabeth Ripley explained that she estimated between $600,000 and $634,000 in water fees in 1988. "We have $422,985 as of now," she stated.

It was suggested that about $150,000 be removed from anticipated water fees revenue. That reduction, coupled with the lack of rooster mooring fees, totaled a deficit of $200,000 in local revenues.

Goedecke emphasized that the town's operating budgets have been reviewed carefully and no further reductions were recommended. "We do not feel we are looking at things improved, or service enlarged," she said, warning this will be an expensive year because of major increases in pensions, insurance and salaries.

"Our feeling (advisory committee) is that if you cut the budgets, it will have a significant impact on the level of services to the town," she said, adding that a four percent decrease in the school department would mean a $200,000 cut. "And it's not possible to cut four percent in some of the smaller departments."

Town Counsel Henderson said cutting the budgets is one way to offset the anticipated $800,000 operating budget deficit.

Another option, he noted, was to hold the town meeting as scheduled, April 2. Based on the amount of money appropriated by approved articles at the town meeting, officials could figure the exact amount of a necessary override.

A majority of selectmen must then vote to propose a general override in order to meet the operating budget, specifying the purpose and the amount. A special town meeting would be scheduled sometime before July 1, requiring one majority ballot vote to approve the override. If a specific project requires a Prop. 2 1/2 override, he said, that would necessitate a debt exclusion override and support by two-thirds of the voters.

Goedecke suggested that if the pension reserve fund, excess insurance liability coverage and the stabilization account are not funded next year, it will save $210,000 from the entire operating budget. Andrew noted that the town's reserve account could be funded with any excess from the overlay reserve fund.

But advisory committee member Jill O'Donnell stated, "I don't know how we're going to educate the public as to what a great deal this is." Throughout the inter-departmental meeting, O'Donnell expressed skepticism with supporting an override.

"I do not have the feeling that by doing this (override) we will be better off fiscally than before. How are we going to explain this to the public? We went from happily looking at the budget ten days ago to this. I think it's a real problem."

During an advisory committee caucus called during the meeting to gather support for the override proposal, members failed to take a vote.

Assessor Lagrotteria again called for the formation of a "cash flow management team" to supervise budget expenses and receipts. "Too much is spent in one lump. That's why we have to borrow and it costs us interest. We need to meet on a regular basis and give selectmen regular updates," he suggested.

Former host families encourage trip to Souppes

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Students from Cohasset High School are being beckoned to the lake shores of our sister-town, Souppes sur Loing.

And among the most enthusiastic recruiters are those local teens who hosted a group of French visitors last summer.

During a recent event at Cohasset High sponsored by the cultural exchange committee, one local host family and several teens talked about their unique experiences. The idea, according to committee member and former host John Dean, is to solicite students for an exchange trip to Souppes.

Although a trip is proposed this summer, cultural exchange members suggested that anytime a student can make the journey, the committee will assist with those plans.

Round-trip fare is estimated at about $500, they noted. Room and board will be provided by a Souppes host family, although it is suggested that each person bring along about $300 in spending money for shopping trips and other expenses incurred during the visit.

The cultural exchange committee hopes to provide a specially-reduced group fare for this summer's journey to Souppes.

Applications for a visit to the French town sponsored by the cultural exchange committee, are available at the Pratt library, at the high school front office, or by calling members Eloise Welz or Liz Warren.

Frank Narkowicz, chairman of the high school foreign language department, encouraged all students to participate in this experience. Although no background or knowledge of the French language is necessary, he noted that living with a French-speaking family will be a "wonderful opportunity to learn the language. So it's a double opportunity if you're taking French," he stated.

In his presentation to the junior and senior high students, Dean said the cultural exchange is for the benefit of the entire town. When he asked how many students are aware of the sister-town relationship with Souppes, a majority of the students raised their hands in approval. Fewer students replied that they would take advantage of the exchange possibilities.

Dean, whose family lived in France for a year, said it affects "how you see the world." He described the fabulous ski resorts in France, the beautiful city of Paris, and the lovely countryside.

Students who hosted teens from Souppes sur Loing last summer recently talked to other Cohasset kids about going to France for an exchange trip. They include: (l to r) Alida Dean, Karena Minnar, Ali Welz, Robby Lawrence, Eric Waal, Rebecca Kurtz and Krissy Martin. (Alan Chapman photo)

"This would be opening a whole new world and experience to you," he stated. "Consider the opportunity. This program could be meaningful to you and the community."

He also encouraged students to become host families when visitors from Souppes travel to Cohasset. "It can be rewarding," he noted.

Dean's daughter, Alida who is a student at the school, told about her memories as part of a host family last summer. "I didn't know what I was getting into," she told the assembled students. "But my message is - the opportunity is there for those who are interested."

It was an interesting time, she said, admitting she learned much about their cultural tastes - from rock music, to food, to clothes. "We shared a lot," Alida stated.

She said families in Souppes are eager to host Cohasset residents in their homes. "We are very welcomed there," she said. "It is of such importance to them - this relationship between the two towns." Alida urged students not to worry about the language differences. they are learning

Uniform day for youth soccer

The spring season for Cohasset Youth Soccer will begin Saturday, March 26 with the first annual Uniform Day.

Uniform Day, where uniforms will be distributed to 16 Cohasset teams playing in the Coastal Soccer League, will take place at the Cohasset High School gymnasium. Players have been asked to assemble there at 9:30 a.m.

The 300 Cohasset soccer players, who range in age from 8 to 18, will also be given a mini-clinic by two players from the Boston Bolts, the new pro soccer team. The players scheduled to appear are fullback David Pike and midfielder Jeffrey McEvoy, a former Duxbury High School star and All-American at Williams College.

The Bolts' clinic will begin at 10 a.m.

The Cohasset players are urged to wear sweat pants and either indoor soccer shoes or sneakers, according to league coordinator Larry Shultz. Team pictures are scheduled to be taken after the clinic.

The Cohasset teams will begin play April 9, Schultz said. Teams will play a 10-game season and, barring inclement weather, will play all games Saturdays.

Team schedules will be released in a week, Shultz said.

Senior parents meeting

The PSO invites all parents of the Cohasset High School Class of '88 to a meeting scheduled for Wednesday, March 30 at 7:30 p.m. in the New Study Hall. Senior class teacher advisors, class officers, and parent advisors will discuss how we can all work together to create a festive and safe graduation season. Students are welcome to attend.

Little League registration

Final Little League registration for 1988 will be held Saturday, March 26 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Little League Field House.

This includes all leagues farm, minor, major and pony.

Town finances discussed March 30

There will be a one hour special presented Wednesday, March 30 live on Community Channel 3, American Cablesystems at 8 p.m.

Wigniore Pierson will talk with advisory committee chairman Jane Goedecke and other guests. The topic will be the financial situation of the town and the proposed Proposition 2 1/2 override.

Class of '68 reunion planned

The Cohasset High Class of 1968 is planning their 20th class reunion. The date is Aug. 6.

However, there are a few lost classmates. They include: Anne Bessac, Sally Bohmer, James Feran, Bob Flanagan, Alison Hathaway, Robert Henn, Kathy Hobbs, Margie Hubbard, Cathy Raymond, Jim Hurley, Sue McIntire, Byam McGoodwin and Jack Thompson.

Please call Cathy Davis at 383-9064 if you know the whereabouts of these people.

Egg decorating class

An Easter Egg Decorating Workshop will be held Thursday, March 31 from 3:30-5 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center.

Children in grades K-5 are invited to participate in this fun-filled afternoon.

A variety of media will be used to create fanciful egg animals and decorative eggs. Cost is $5 including materials. Call 383-0088.

Gourmet Guild meeting

"Light and Elegant" is the title of April's monthly meeting of the Scituate Gourmet-Decorator Guild. The meeting will be held Tuesday, April 12, at 8 p.m. at the First Trinitarian Congregational Church, in Scituate.

The program will feature Greer Underwood of Hingham. She is the author of two cookbooks entitled "Gourmet Light" and "The Enlightened Gourmet."

Come and sample some new, lighter, healthier, gourmet cuisine which is reduced in calories, but not in taste! Nonmembers are welcome for a fee of $3.00.

YMCA spring classes

Sign up now for a great set of early spring classes at the YMCA.

You can spend 10 weeks working on ceramic pieces which can decorate your home or begin your Christmas gifts for 1988.

Ceramics is available Monday mornings or evenings. Other 10 week classes include knitting and crocheting on Wednesday mornings, knitting on round needles on Friday mornings, and the newest offering — Caning and rushing chairs on Thursday mornings.

All these classes offer a chance to learn a skill in depth. The crocheting class will give you an opportunity to make a beautiful and popular lace collar for you or your child. And don't miss the opportunity to learn basketry from Dianne Stanton, nationally known weaver and teacher in an eight-week Wednesday morning class.

A special pair of classes this spring are Wednesday afternoons: Jeanette MacKenzie, local herbalist and crafter will teach how to make a dried herb/flower wreath on April 6 and how to plan you herb garden April 13. Jeanette will supply all the dried materials for the wreath and plants for planting if you like. If you like herbs, crafts, or gardening, take one or both of these classes.

Featured classes between now and April school vacation include Baklava, Brown Bread and Baked Beans, Country Sweats, Dimensional Star, Easter Folk Bunnies and Chicks, Fix it Seminar, Folk Art Bunny Peg Rack, Jams, Puff Pastry, Real Estate information, Sewing Machine Repairs, Spring Door Hanging or Door Hat, Stenciled Floor Cloth and Taco Salad.

These classes can be taken alone or as part of series. Many classes are available to nonmembers.

Additional classes will be held after April School Vacation. For information get a brochure on YWCA classes at your local library or call 834-8371.

Prelude concert

The opening concert of the Prelude Concert Series' Seventh Season features the Festival Winds, in a traditional classical program of works by Mozart, Debussy, Poulenc and Stravinsky.

The concert will be held on Saturday, April 9, at 8 p.m. at the Scituate Town Library, 85 Branch Street, Scituate. Tickets at $10 each may be reserved in advance by calling 545-0238 or purchased at the door the evening of the performance.

Praised for their technical perfection, carefully balanced ensembel and ability to establish great rapport with their audiences, the Festival Winds have been in residence at the Vermont Mozart Festival each summer since its inception in 1974. They have toured extensively, premiering many new contemporary works, and introducing American audiences to woodwind music never before heard in this country.

Subscription tickets are also available for the Prelude Concert Series Seventh Season; future performances on the series feature the lively sound of Newberger & Mazzy, July 9; the esteemed Talich String Quartet from the Prague Conservatory in a all-Czechoslovakian program on November 5; and the delight of commedia dell 'arte with LiveOak & Company on January 14, 1989. Special rates are available for groups of ten or more. For information, contact the number above, or write to Prelude, Box 109, North Scituate, 02060.

CHS dramatists take acting honors in festival

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

The director said it was their best performance. The judges at the Boston Globe Drama Festival apparently agreed as they lavished prestigious awards upon each of the 20 Cohasset High School cast members of "Fortress."

Cohasset High School, which competed in the state finals of the drama festival last weekend, essentially came in third in a two-winner race. If the second-place play from Longmeadow can not make it to the New England competition, Cohasset will substitute.

But there were no solemn faces from Cohasset as cast members and director returned home late Friday night. Director Ron Emmons was "incredibly proud" of his students. He realized the judges had a difficult time eliminating Cohasset from the winner's circle.

"It was obvious because they took so much time, about an hour and a-half, to decide which two schools won," he said. "The judge said there were really three winners, but only two get the silver bowls. We took home a plaque and they took home a silver bowl. That was the only difference."

The cast members were buoyed by the separate acting awards bestowed upon every member of the Cohasset play. Michele Casolara and Joe Mazza were named to the All-State Cast, an honor the Globe presents to few of the individual student actors competing in the final competition.

The remaining 20 cast members were honored with the ensemble acting award. According to Emmons, the 20 Cohasset actors comprised the bulk of the 38 students from throughout the state selected for the ensemble honors. "That is an incredible accomplishment for this school," he stated.

The supporting cast included: Erin Powell, Scott Caristo, Katie Tolini, Rebecca McCarthy, Heather St. Onge, Pam Hasse, Erin Monaghan, Michelle Meagher, Allison Reilly, Jack Beddows, Adam Durant, Zach Hochkeppel, Jen Coley, Neely Hemassi, Doug Moe, J. Gaston, Lauren Kalita, Jen Plante and Jay Staunton.

"It would have been nice to win it all," Emmons said, "but we got what we wanted. They did their best and walked away with all the individual acting honors. That's a great accomplishment. We got the glory of winning and we dominated the awards."

The play's author, Michael Scanlan, was in the audience when the cast performed "Fortress" in Boston Friday afternoon. "He loved it," Emmons stated, noting that his publisher came along.

Emmons felt Cohasset's accomplishments were even more fantasic considering they were competing against larger schools. "But perhaps our size works for us. In a lot of schools, the kids don't have a choice to do both sports and drama. They're either drama jocks or athletes. But the kids here get the chance to do both. We're really flexible about arranging our schedules around the kids. There was some definite finessing during the past few months to make this come together."

He explained three students in the drama cast participated in state competitions on various levels this season. Jason Marsac was on the soccer team that made it to the state finals. Heather St. Onge rearranged her hectic schedule between girls' basketball tournaments and the drama festival. And Adam Durant was a member of the soccer team; competed in the finals of a recent ski team competition, and performed in "Fortess."

"That just can't be done in a larger school where teachers are unable to bend their schedules to fit individual needs," Emmons said.

Cohasset thespians will have a brief respite from Emmons' directorial duties while he coaches spring track. This weekend he plans a trip to Bedford, N.H. where he will watch a production of his own play, "What You Will" performed by Bishop Brady High School.

"I'm really happy for the kids. They worked hard. But I'm exhausted," he laughed.

Keating named vice president

Former professional football player Christopher P. Keating has joined The Boston Company's Institutional Markets Group as vice president of its principal subsidiary, Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company.

Keating, the son of Gerald and Margaret Keating of Cohasset joined the financial services industry five years ago as a financial consultant with Shearson Lehman Brothers while still playing for the Buffalo Bills.

His football career included six seasons with the Bills and one year with the Washington Redskins. Keating was the Bills' player representative to the NFL Players Association in 1983 and 1984.

Keating received his bachelor's degree from the University of Maine. He is currently enrolled at Suffolk University Law School evening division and is a member of the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans.

He resides in Quincy.

☐ Four kids from Cohasset are spending spring vacation at Space Camp in Huntsville, Ala. They are Toby Horn, Matt Larson and Dean Volungis. Tara Volungis will attend Space Academy, Level 1.

☐ Betsy A. Campbell, CTC, president of Lido Travel, recently earned the professional designation of CTC (Certified Travel Counselor) from the national Institute of Certified Travel Agents. Campbell joins over 9,800 other travel professionals across the country in achieving this distinction.

☐ Mark S. Lahive, son of Mr. and Mrs. David K. Lahive has attained Dean's List statute, the second highest recognition for academic achievement for the fall term at Middlebury College.

☐ Sean Farrell was named to second honors on Cheshire Academy's honor roll for the fourth marking period.

Sean, the son of Terence Farrell of Virginia Lane, achieved a B grade point average.

☐ Andrew C. Nawn of Cohasset joined approximately 300 outstanding high school juniors and seniors from across the country at the National Young Leaders Conference Tuesday, March 22. Andrew, a student at Cohasset High School was selected as a congressional scholar based on demonstrated academic achievement, leadership, and citizenship.

☐ There are a mighty happy bunch of folks "Around Town", and it all started on March 13!. That is when Wayne and Nancy (Cone) Aikens had their brand new son, Nicholas Ryan Aiken. Grandparents Margo and Dick Aiken are thilled to say the least, as is Erwin Cone; you can bet there will be many trips from New Hampshire to Cohasset for Erwin, we'll bet that Nicholas will be his pride and joy.

☐ Had a call from Shirley Laidlaw the other day. She wanted to report that she is fine and healthy and that it wasn't her that was taken off in the ambulance the other night. Although she is happy that everyone cares so much, she is also happy to report that she is healthy!!

Amanda Turner loves to dress up for her busy day at the community center nursery school. (Kym Marcella photo)

☐ On Monday, March 20, the Youth Group of the Second Congregational Church did a wonderful thing!. They all met after school at the church to prepare a meal, and then they drove into Boston to Rosie's Place where they helped serve the dinner to several of Boston's homeless. The group of 9-11 graders, led by Judy and Gary Ritts, has been discussing the struggles of the homeless at recent Thursday night meetings.

☐ Congratulations to Edward and Christine Straughn, who became the parents of a son on March 1 at the Quincy City Hospital.

☐ Dan Pompeo received more accolades last week when he was notified that he made the Hockey Night In Boston All-Star Team. He certainly will be playing a lot of hockey in the weeks to come, he is also on his way to play in a SeaHawks tournament (along with Craig Mulcahy and Todd Fitzpatrick). Our hats are off to you once again, Danny.

☐ Sure is great to see Linda Campbell up and around again, and we are sure that she feels the same way.

☐ Congratulations surely go to Bill Fallon and "his girls" on their huge win Saturday. Sure is nice to be champs, right everyone? Coach Fallon had to get out of a sick bed to hold practices last week, but it certainly paid off for all of them (and us). We are proud of you, and the rally on the Common that was attended by 400-500 loyal fans is further proof of that!

☐ Our hats are off to the boys basketball team also, they did a super job this season and will always be winners as far as we are concerned.

☐ Hope that everyone saw the wonderful article on Karen Golden that was in the Patriot Ledger a few weeks ago. She certainly is a talented gal, as people who know her realized when she was a youngster. With her own line of children's clothes, E—I—E—I—O, she will do well, a talent like hers is destined! We certainly do wish her luck! Karen's parents, Jack and Doris Golden must be bursting with pride, especially with Karenand Stephen's son, John Thomas, pictured wearing his mom's designs.

Exchange trip to Souppes . . .

English from the visitors, while the Cohasset contingent learns French from their host families. "You're on a one-on-one basis," she assured her classmates.

The cultural exchange committee will attempt to pair a Cohasset youth with a Souppes family which includes a teen of the same age and interests. "You will know exactly where you are going and with whom," he stated.

Several students whose families hosted Souppes teens last summer, talked about their experiences. Rob Lawrence said he intended to visit with the boy who stayed with his family, but instead he will be getting a job.

Rebecca Kirk said her Souppes friend "liked most of the things I liked, especially Madonna. I learned a lot about France, and I hope to be going there this summer," she stated.

Ali Welz agreed last summer's exchange experience was positive for her and her family. Her "sister" from Souppes enjoyed Sandy Beach, the town pool, ice cream and Pudding Pops.

Mark Waal admitted that he and his 15 year-old Souppes friend often disagreed, but they had a lot of good times, particiualrly at the beach.

Alida Déan explained that the exchange committee intends to arrange a similar discussion following the summer trip by Cohasset students to Souppes. "Our hope is that is will be as much of a positive experience on that end as it was last summer on this end," she said.

Committee member Martin urged all interested students to contact Narkowicz, or Carolyn Contis at the high school. "You do not have to limit your visit to this summer," she said, explaining that students may travel to Souppes during any school vacation.

Time for education

The town's operating budget is in big trouble, and there's no disputing it.

Town department heads agree there is an $800,000 hole created by a number of factors, but mostly because local revenues do not match budget estimates, state aid is leveling off, and federal funds are drying up.

Those factors, coupled with a false tax base which began with Prop. 2 1/2, have finally caught up with us. As explained last week by various town officials, property values were artificially low when Prop. 2 1/2 began. Property was assessed at about 46 percent of true value, and our tax base was formed from that false start.

Property taxes in Cohasset have been unrealistically low for too long, and now we can no longer avoid the inevitable. We must begin to make up the difference and start raising that base.

It will hurt. But it's a necessary wound. If we don't fix things now, that budget deficit will grow bigger and bigger while our town services shrink. If you thought Prop. 2 1/2 cut into our municipal services, you should start thinking about what a deficit will do.

An override of Prop. 2 1/2 is an uneasy concept for many people to accept. As unsettling as that may be, you must be aware that many other communities have already voted to override Prop. 2 1/2. Some have done it on an annual basis. It is certainly not sinful to approve an override, and in some circumstances it has proved beneficial.

Cohasset's general override will guarantee the schools will continue to function at the same exceptional pace. The fire and police departments will not lose equipment or personnel. The landfill will continue to operate, and our town offices will be open for business.

Rejecting an override will result in dire consequences for our community. There will be deep, harmful budget cuts in every department. The schools, which carry the largest budget load, will be forced to reduce supplies and personnel.

Larger class sizes and less teaching materials do not produce quality, award-winning students. This is not a threat. This is reality.

Other town departments will not be able to survive penetrating reductions, and they could be forced to shut down.

This is not an issue of slicing away fat from our meaty town budgets. Our services are now provided by departments funded by bare bones budgets.

The proposal before the voters is whether you want town government to continue or whether you want lean tax bills and skeletal schools and municipal services. There is no choice here.

Please listen to everything our town officials have to state on this vital issue. It is imperative we all become knowledgeable about a situation that will affect everyone's future in this town.

Subscription rates: in-town $13 for one year, $22 for two years and out-of-town $20 for one year, $35 for two years.

Hockey has to stay

To the Editor:

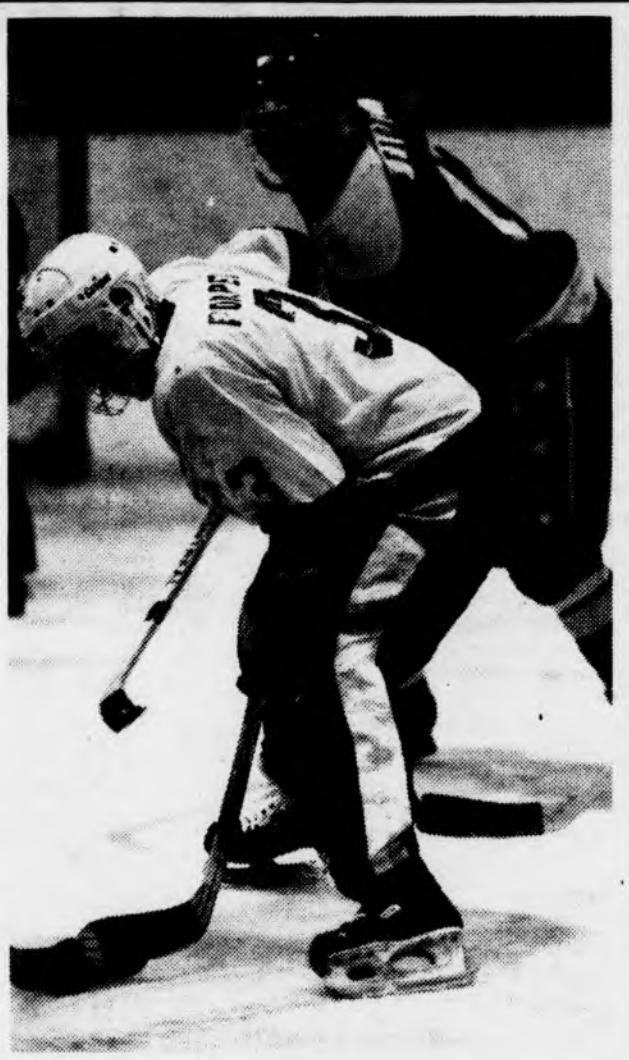
I would like to congratulate the girls and boys basketball teams of Cohasset High School for their great success in the Division III state basketball tournament. A special tribute is due Bryan Edwards for developing into the fine player that he has. Hopefully Bryan, great success will continue to come your way.

However I do feel that one Cohasset team has been slightly overlooked despite its feats this winter. The Cohasset High School hockey team came within one overtime goal of winning the South Sectional Division III hockey tournament. I think it should be pointed out that Cohasset could have "walked away" with the Division III state tournament in hockey; however the team is more satisfied with its achievements against Division II schools come tournament time. Evidence of the differences in the division could be felt when the Cohasset boys basketball team clashed with Division II Duxbury this past season.

For those of you who were not in attendance at Walter Brown Arena for Cohasset's two hockey appearances —sorry for you. All I can tell you is the excitement and electricity of those games were something that has not come close to being equalled at any of the basketball games.

I am sure that our twenty-two or so member hockey team and Bryan Edwards have met many times on the highway in the wee hours seeking our prospective athletic goals. The word is that hockey is trying to be abolished by the Cohasset School Committee. Before you make that mistake, let me only say that I have been around sports and life in general long enough to tell you there are few better character builders in life than playing ice hockey.

Jim Watson
Asst. Coach, Cohasset Hockey



Danny Pompeo (3) was a major factor in the great success of this year's CHS hockey squad.

Thanks to volunteers in Cohasset

Letters

To the editor:

Now at the time of the "Flowering of New England" it behooves us to bestow thanks upon the Volunteers of this lovely town.

First, I think of the Garden Club and because it makes the whole town sparkle at any season — "thank you". You make us more sensitive to the beauty of gardens —the trees, herbs, shrubs — and the value they bring to our lives and our town. The work, time and financial obligations you assume fill me with awe — and I am sure many, many others also. You labor 12 months of the year to make this a better part of our world — you fill us with a special joy — seeing you on your knees grubbing and working — getting soiled — some of you with babies in their prams while you do your big bit to enhance whatever project you are working.

My hear always gets a lift whan I see June Hubbard at the wheel of the Shuttle. She has always a big smile and she jumps down easily to help a less "frishy" person. She truly cares and is very "watchful" of all her charges on those special days. She will take the "long route" to show us something lovely — some jewel we might miss without her sense of sharing.

And a special thanks to Dorothy Roberts who for many, many years has visited the hospital and nursing home. So many volunteers have sad problems of their own — but they brush them aside several times a week to give a hug and a pat to a "friend" who needs her.

And of course we all love and appreciate the Council on Aging — who "light a candle" c hope for all of us

CANDIDATES

All candidates running for office were requested to answer the following two questions. Their answers appear under their names.

1. WHAT EXPERIENCE AND/OR SPECIAL QUALITIES DO YOU HAVE THAT WOULD HELP YOU PERFORM THE DUTIES OF THE OFFICE YOU SEEK?

2. WHAT ARE THE MOST SIGNIFICANT PROBLEMS AND OPPORTUNITIES YOU SEE FOR THIS POSITION DURING THE NEXT TERM OF OFFICE?

ASSESSOR

Vote for One 3 Years

MICHAEL C. PATROLIA, 15 Cushing Rd.

1. Assessor for 18 years. Completed appraisal courses at Burdett College and Boston Center for Adult Education. Completed course conducted by Department of Revenue on Assessment, Law, Procedure, and Valuation. Sixteen years in home construction.

2. The most important, as always, is to strive for assessments which are fair.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE

Vote for Two 3 Years

BARBARA BLISS, 72 Summer St.
DID NOT RESPOND

J. RUSSELL REIDY, 170 Fairoaks Ln.

1. I have been a resident of Cohasset for the past seven years and presently have three children attending the Junior/Senior High School and one a recent graduate. During this period of time I have served on the School Facilities Committee, Milliken Field Study Committee, various recreational department and athletic booster programs and President of the Cohasset Soccer Club.

My business experience has involved management of a national sales organization which includes municipal contracts, strategic planning and budgetory responsibilities.

I plan to bring to the school committee an open mind, concern for the well being of all students, and dedication to the task of maintaining the highest quality of education. The total well rounded student will remain my major concern.

2. In my opinion fiscal restraint and declining enrollment are the major difficulties facing the Cohasset School System today. These obstacles should not force the town to lower their existing educational standards. I feel it extremely important to provide opportunities whether it be academics, arts, or extracurricular activities to ensure that all students are provided the tools to prepare them for future objectives. The quality of the school system is everyone's responsibility. I look forward to working with the existing school committee, administration, teachers and active parent school organizations but most importantly the challenge to meet the total need of our school population.

BOARD OF HEALTH

Vote for One 3 Years

HUGH J. MORGAN, 24 Bow St.
DID NOT RESPOND

MICHAEL SULLIVAN, 161 Fairoaks Ln.

1. As a board member, I would provide a business perspective. I hold a Bachelor's of Science in Business Administration and currently manage my own business. Prior to starting my own business I held management positions at Prime Computer and Fidelity Investments.

Because of my concern for the community, I have become very involved with the technical and legal issues associated with the landfills in town and their respective impact on the community.

As a parent and a taxpayer I am committed to protecting the environment and maintaining the quality of life in Cohasset.

2. The most significant issues facing the Board of Health during the next three years are: Protection of our water supply; sewage (leaching fields, septic systems); landfills, transfer station, recycling.

As a board member I would focus on the following areas: Develop programs to closely monitor the flow of water toward Lilly Pond in order to effectively protect our water supply; work toward finalizing the agreements and plans to transport non-recycable waste; institute an effectively managed recycling program; explore the possibilities of utilizing innovative more cost effective techniques to build and repair septic systems and leaching fields; work closely with other town boards to insure decisions are made which will maintain the esthetic and environmental quality of Cohasset.

PLANNING BOARD

Vote of One 5 Years

ROBERT STURDY, 270 Jerusalem Rd.

1. As the present chairman of the Planning Board, I am completing my first five-year term. During this term I have gained considerable experience in and knowledge of the planning, engineering and legal issues that concern the Planning Board.

2. A) The need for below-the-market-rate housing in compliance with the Cohasset Zoning Bylaws, and the requirements of the Boards of Health and Conservation; B) Revision of the use portions of the Zoning Bylaws that relate to business and light industrial use to more properly reflect the intent to limit the impact of use on the surrounding area; C) Harbor land-use planning; D) Preserving the quality of life in Cohasset, while allowing for growth.

J. STEPHEN BJORKLUND, 15 Marion Way

WATER COMMISSIONER

Vote for One 3 Years

JAMES R. SHEERIN, 105 Border St.

1. I served as a volunteer firefighter from 1970 to 1976. I was then appointed as a permanent firefighter in 1976. I became an emergency medical technician in 1978 and left the department in 1982.

I worked for the water department for seventeen months from the end of 1985 to mid-1987. I also worked for the harbor department for some fifteen years. I feel that I know the community very well and I think I possess the knowledge about the water supply and distribution system that no other candidate running for the office has in the past.

2. The most significant problem facing the water department is contamination. Not only must we strive for polution-free watershed areas, we must train our people in the proper steps to take in the event of a contamination source. Quick action and confinement of any solution will negate the clean-up and cost of such clean-up in the future.

SEWER COMMISSION

Vote for One 3 Years

RAIMUND G. VANDERWEIL, 500 Jerusalen Rd.,

1. I am a registered professional engineer with 25 years of experience. For five years, the last three as a sewer commissioner, I have been working to develop a rational approach to the sewer issues facing Cohasset.

2. (1) Continued optimization of our plant performance within the state permit requirements. (2) Continued effort to implement a cost effective approach to sewering based on: (a) extension of central sewering to the Veterans and Hillside areas and other locations outlined in the Ward Plan, and (b) on-site corrections for the remaining parts of town.

LOT W. BATES, 56 Red Gate Ln.

1. I Have worked with a Cohasset contractor for seventeen years, specializing in excavating and installing leaching areas and sewer connections. Hence, I am thoroughly familiar with the construction of on-site sewer systems and public sewer facilities. More specifically, I am doing this work in Cohasset, and because of this I better understand the various types of problems that will manifest when pipes and connections are installed to our present sewer system.

I have had hands-on experience working on the construction of a large municipal sewer plant in Danvers, Ma. Specifically, we transformed this plant into a pumping station much like Cohasset is planning to do. I am, therefore, familiar with the many aspects and problems encountered with this type of project.

I also worked on the Cohasset Water Treatment Plant during the construction phase. Also, I was the superintendent of a major school project in Plymouth, Ma., where we installed a large sewer treatment system. This afforded me additional problems, and hands-on experience.

Because I was a 1987 Sewer Commission candidate, I feel that I have kept abreast of the issues, not only for the election, but in general.

2. Should I be elected to the Sewer Commission, my goals and priorities would be:

(1) I do not believe it the task of the Sewer Commission to regulate growth of our community. Rather, their function would be to address the problem areas of Cohasset that are inundated with sewer problems.

(2) I would like to approach our problems with an open mind, analyzing various, rather than only one, avenues of solutions, having options where possible.

(3) I feel very strongly that town departments should be involved in the planning of our sewer system, such as the Board of Health, Selectmen and you, the voters and residents of Cohasset.

(4) I feel the Sewer Commission should keep the residents of Cohasset more informed of their work, throughout the year, not just at election time. I am tired of hearing that our connection with Hull is imminent, and we are making great progress, but nothing comes of it except further disappointments.

(5) I would, if elected, use my energy in a positive, rather than negative directions.

(6) If elected, I would want to make certain that the contract for operating the plant was put to bed, not awarded to the first company that came along. The city of Boston, because of a like situation, lost control.

RECREATION DEPARTMENT

Vote for One 5 Years

RICHARD BARROW, 283 King St.

1. I have been a member of the Cohasset Recreation Commission for over 14 years, and chairman for the past 13 years. During the past 14 years, we have spent much effort developing a recreation department and full-time program serving the recreational needs of all aged residents of our community.

Because of my longevity as a member and chairman, I have watched and helped play an integral role developing our long-range goals and objectives. My experience coupled with my interest in the town of Cohasset, and my interest in recreation and leisure, qualify me, I believe, to perform the duties of my elected office. I wish to continue to serve the best interests of our community.

2. During the past few years the recreation commission has concerned themselves with, not only recreation programs, activities and services, but many of the peripheral areas of recreation as it concerns Cohasset.

The Commission has put much effort and input into the various problems of Cohasset Harbor, representing the recreational boater and the community at large. One member of the Recreation Commission is also a member of the Harbor Study Committee, and acts as liaison between the two boards.

The Recreation Commission has spent a great deal of time and effort addressing facility and ballfield needs of our community as well as investigating and researching other possible recreational sites and facilities that could benefit the town.

The seven member recreation commission has always been a well motivated, multi-interest group who have applied their individual expertise and knowledge to serve our community. Our problems and opportunities during the next few years will be a continuation of group efforts regarding expansion of recreational facilities and opportunities for all residents of Cohasset.

TRUSTEE OF PAUL PRATT MEMORIAL LIBRARY

Vote for Three 3 Years

ELIZABETH EATON, 30 Beach St.

1. One of the finest assets a town can have is a good library. Cohasset is fortunate to have a very good library.

I have lived here for 42 years and during that time the library has greatly enhanced the quality of my life by providing me with learning and pleasure.

In partial recompense for what the library has done for me, I hope I will be elected to serve as a trustee for another three years.

AGNES McCANN, 104 Doane St.

1. Four years on the board of trustees, lawyer and mother of two children, all library users.

2. Maintaining standards of excellence and top quality of the collection and services of the library.

SIGRID CAREY, 8 James Ln.

1. I am a long time resident of Cohasset and a frequent user of the library. I am also the chairman of the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council and the librarian of the South Shore Spinner's Guild.

2. I see no significant problems at the library. This is a good opportunity for me to participate in town government.

KATHERINE H. STURTEVANT, 40 Ripley Rd.

1. Experience. I have worked professionally and as a volunteer in libraries and a book store. I read a great deal, my time schedule is free of other demands and I would enjoy doing this job.

2. Problems and opportunities. I would be better able to answer this question after serving on the board. From being a volunteer, I am impressed with what the library accomplishes and the helpful attitude of the staff.

Thanks to all the town's volunteers . . .

-with their parties and their sharing — their time and their planning. They are indeed our friends.

As I sit here — their faces, and deeds pass before me —they are numerous and they are "there" always — these volunteers.

My own special love is Muora Ditmar who is a volunteer for the Elder Art Class. She is our "encourager" and we easily call her "friend." She has a very busy life but she finds time to do this special class. Muora sets the "tone" for the group and while we might not have "come a long way, baby" — we are in there painting our hearts out — we have this obligation to " excel" — and it is a goal that some day we will, hopefully, reach. She keeps us plugging and we would be pretty lonesome without her.

And the last is not a Person but Persons that work at the Parish House which is so important an edifice for us — we all think of it as "our" so I guess that is the highest compliment you can give to an old building that is NOT and City Hall. We like you "old building" and we need you always.

At this time of the year — this special season for all of us — Jew and Christian — and others — it seemed appropriate to commend those busy people who take time out to "Make a Joyful Noise Unto the Lord."

Happy about stories

To the editor:

We have just finished with the Annual 6th Grade Writing Contest and are happy that your newspaper could publish so many of the students stories. Although not everyone's stories were submitted the contest was a success with many prize winning stories.

With the efforts of your newspaper many people around Cohasset had the opportunity to read over our stories. Of course it is thrilling to have our stories published, as students, and even children who did not have stories published could read classmates stories and would be proud of their peers. The contest will continue next year with the new 6th graders and I am looking forward to seeing their stories in the paper.

Sincerely,
Christa Ansbergs

Stories great to read

To the editor:

As you know you have been publishing our 6th grade writing contest stories. We would like to express our appreciation to you by writing you this note. We loved seeing all of our stories in the Mariner. All the stories were great to read, and it added more fun into reading the Mariner.

Thank you very much!

Sincerely,
Julie Good
Vicki Maynard
Emily Spencer

Thanks for publication

To the editor,

I think it's been a great opportunity to see Deer Hill School's writing papers from the writing contest published in the Cohasset Mariner. You published our poems, stories, and fairy tales in the paper. I enjoyed reading them, and I can't thank you enough! I really appreciated it!

Sincerely yours,
Lauren Almeida

P.S. - I hope you'll continue doing this for other stories that are sent to you.

Juried art exhibit awards

The South Shore Art Center's All New England Juried Exhibit this month attracted a diverse group of work from the Boston region and Rhode Island.

The juried exhibit of nearly 100 works continues through the end of March at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset.

First prizes were awarded to David Lehr of Cohasset for his oil "Yellow Room"; to Virginia Avery of Marshfield Hills for her watercolor "Reflective Mood"; to Tom Lucas of Cohasset for his oil and pastel "Pathway"; to Mary Tudino of Hope, Rhode Island for a collage "Players in Motion"; and to Richard Bertman for his sculpture "Standing Woman." John Lanza of Hingham was awarded Best Abstract prize for an untitled oil.

Spring registration

It is time to register for Spring classes at the Cohasset Community Center.

FOR KIDS

There is a Lex America Language Playgroup, starting Friday, April 8 from 10:30 a.m. to noon. Children ages 1-3, with their mothers, gather to sing, dance and play to music and stories in five languages. Children of this age acquire the languages naturally and will learn the basics as well as an awareness of other cultures.

Kodaly Music is offered Tuesday and Wednesday mornings to kids ages 1-2 (with moms) and 3-4 (without moms). This method employs folk songs, rhymes and games to teach basic musical elements. The course begins April 5 and 6.

Tiny Tot Chef begins Thursday, March 31 from 10-11 a.m. and offers kids, ages 3-5, fun in the kitchen using simple recipes yielding edible results.

Science and Nature for kids ages 3-5 includes fair weather nature discovery walks and indoor nature crafts on inclement days, beginning Thursday, March 31 from 10-11 a.m.

A new Mothers and Infants (birth-18 months) Group begins Monday, April 4 from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. This is a six-week parenting workshop covering the gamut of infant related issues. Also, a Pediatric Safety and Accidents workshop will take place Thursday, March 31, from 7:30 to 9 p.m., offering invaluable information that could save young lives. Both courses will be taught by a Pediatric Nurse Practitioner.

Don't miss these special kids events at the Center: Lunch with the Easter Bunny (Saturday, March 26 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.), Easter Egg Making Workshop for kids grades K-5 (Thursday, March 31, 3:30 to 5 p.m.) and Pre-school Puppet Show (Friday, April 8, 10:30 a.m.) featuring "The Tortoise and the Hare."

FOR TEENS:

Ingenue Charm Course, beginning Thursday, April 7 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. teaches girls ages 9 to 14 poise, confidence, grooming and personality awareness, and is taught by a professional model.

4-H Babysitting starts Wednesday April 13 from 3:30 to 5 p.m. and offers teens age 10 and over a better understanding of young children, their care and safety, and ways to amuse them.

SAT Preparation courses in Math andEnglish will be offered Wednesday and Thursday evenings beginning March 23. Classes are held at Cohasset High School from 7 to 9 p.m. and pre-registration is required since class size is limited.

FOR ADULTS

No Sweat is a new fitness program at the Center consisting of stretching exercises which are designed for relaxation, stress release, increased energy levels, balance and flexibility. Participants begin their day with this healthy boost and then continue on to work or other activities. Class time will be 7 to 7:45 a.m.

Aerobics continues Monday-Friday from 9 to 10 a.m. take as many or as few classes as you like. Dancercise is scheduled for Wednesday evenings from 7:30 to 8:45 p.m. and combines elements of dance and aerobic exercise.

A new course is our eight-week Weight Loss, Nutrition and Exercise program, where you will learn to change your lifestyle so you will never have to diet again: beginning Tuesday, April 5 from 6:45 to 8:15 p.m.

A course in Flower Arranging will begin Thursday, March 24 from 9 a.m. to noon for four weeks. The instructor is a qualified flower arrangement judge.

The P.S.O. nominating committee convened to prepare a slate of nominees for the 1988-89 executive board.

A list of candidates will be mailed to the general membership in April and voted into office at the annual meeting, May 12.

If you are interested in serving on the executive board, would like to make a recommendation, or would like more information, please contact any nominating committee member.

Chairman, Olga Nohe (1273); Sue McNamara (6945); Barbara Meehan (6785); Patty McCarthy (9783); Claudia Story (6976); Priscilla Sullivan (9792).

A big thanks

With the help of Loni Colwill, Ryan Wiggs and Geoffrey McWilliams, Den 6 Cub Scouts cleaned the Osgood playground. Many thanks to Cub Scout Ryan McWilliams, Jeremy Williams, Matt Conley and Bobby Meehan.

Junior high spelling bee

Friday, March 11, the Cohasset Junior High Spelling Bee was held. The winner of this preliminary round will attend the regional competition to be held at South Junior High School in Weymouth.

The educational event, sponsored by the Patriot Ledger as part of the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain, is designed to help students become more conscious of their spelling, improve their spelling, and increase their vocabularies. Congratulations to the following winners:

Catherine deLima, school champion; Christian Ford, runner-up (alternate); William Bruns, grade 8 champion; Bridget Leung, grade 8 runner-up.

The following students also participated in the assembly by winning individual class competitions:

Grade 7—Joseph Andrade, David Aronson, Peter Collins, Jim Herzog, William Jordan, Michelle LeMar, and Justin Littlehale.

Grade 8—Chip Anderson, John Brister, Christopher Brown, Cecilia Candia, Lisa Coates, Thomas Faulkner, Ian Fitzpatrick, Kevin Mulcahy and Steve Pattison.

School champions received medals provided by the Patriot Ledger. All participants received a certificate and a silver dollar provided by the P.S.O.

Student Magazine

Whispers and Shadows, a student literary and arts magazine is published yearly with help from the P.S.O. Arts Boosters. The following are excepts from the 1987 publication.

Softly Swaying

Swiftly, softly sway the trees
With a sure-footed mellow ease.
The snow tumbling gently down
Cresting the bourns into a crown.
The splendor of this bright, cold day
Is that I am not in the cold's way;
For he and I've had many a strife-
One in which I could've lost my life.
So now I stand and profess my plight,
The one which dealt with many a night.
Though saved I am from Winter's dues,
Seeing my friends is what I choose.
Surrounding me now are caring old folks,
But I should be out there joining the strokes
That winter bade my family do.
Oh, I should be swaying, too.

Joe Mazza

Walking

Walking in the surf in rolled up tattered blue jeans
Lost in thought
As dusk begins to consume the horizon
Thinking only of yesterday's bittersweet memories and tomorrow's rosy dreams-

I walk to remember
I walk to forget
If I walked forever I would never regret
As the everlasting waves
Crash and pound, crash and pound against the welcoming, open-armed shore

The Lion's Lunch

A parrot sat upon a branch
In a jungle quite so green.
And just a few feet away
Lay a lion, very mean.

The parrot thought he could tease the lion
Because he was so great.
He flew right down
With a bound, he was swallowed up and ate!

The Old Man from Tiraffe

There once was a man from Tiraffe,
Who wanted to ride a giraffe,
But when he got on,
It's neck was too long
So he decided to split it in half.

Third grade field trip

Friday, March 11, all third grade classes at the Joseph Osgood School went on a field trip to the Museum of Science.

Mrs. Alcott's, Mrs. Atkinson's, Mrs. Montuori's and Mrs. Shadhauser's classes visited the planetarium, followed by an exciting demonstration at the electricity show.

After that, they travelled in small groups with chaperones and teachers to pursue their individual interests. Children, teachers and chaperones agreed that it was an "awesome" trip!

A weekend to remember for two championship teams

Coach Eddie Minelli had a disappointing day during last Saturday's game against St. Joseph's. But it was a great season!

Cindy Spooner grabs for the ball against a tough Frontier opponent, Althea Danielski.

There's no doubt anymore! Liz O'Leary (3) and Debbie Hartley (14) proudly point out who's the best basketball team in the state.

School news

Reading is fundamental

Is reading fun? Well, at the Deer Hill, we have proven it is.

Since January 12th, the day we began our Reading is Fundamental Program which encourages outside reading. The Deer Hill children have outdone themselves. Upon completion of their book, the children answer questions about the book and fill out a paper link with the title and their name. This is added to other links to form a chain which encircles the school. Right now, March 10th, we are three quarters of the way around the school. Hurrah for Deer Hill!

Valentine cabaret

Many thanks to the 20 students who exhibited and donated work for the valentine art show and auction. It was a huge success — over $300 was raised. The students involved: Chipper Weier, Dennis Leary, Coleby Mantz, Bob Pattison, Brian Ormiston, Steve Migliaccio, Erin Powell, Kirsten Pounder, Allie Redfield, Liana Adams, Corey DeSantis, Scott Caristo, Melissa Nothnagle, Jacob Poville, Peter Kasperowicz, Arthur Meachum, Felicia Bartow, Dudley Bryan and Liv Ohlsson.

Youth ministry get-together

A program for the teenagers of Cohasset, grades 9 through 12, will be held on the Town Common, Sunday, April 10, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The event, sponsored by the Townwide Youth Ministry Task Force, will include fun, recreation, entertaining enlightenment for ecumenically active teenagers.

Providing the ingredients for a make-your-own-sundae bar will be five of the local churches: First Parish Unitarian Universalist, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, Second Congregational UCC Churches, and the Vedanta Center.

In case of rain, the festivities will be held in Bates Hall of the Second Congregational Church (next to town hall).

The activities will include eating, volleyball, "new games," eating, frisbee, sharing time, music, eating, need and purpose discussion, eating, etc.

All teenagers (no matter their religion preference) are welcome and urged to attend.

Leadership conference

High school students from 10 South Shore high schools explored the nature of leadership and prejudice during the first NCCJ South Shore Leadership Conference. Conference sponsor is the Northeastern Region (Greater Boston office) of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, in cooperation with teachers and administrators from Abington, Braintree, Cohasset, Hanover, Norwell, Randolph, Scituate, Silverlake Regional, Quincy and Weymouth South high schools. The conference will be facilitated entirely by high school and college students from the NCCJ Youth Council.

Conference participants were ninth and tenth graders who represented the various ethnic, racial and social groups in their schools. They examined the intergroup conflicts that exist in their schools; They explored the role of the student leader in resolving intergroup conflicts; they learned skills for interrupting and dismantling prejudice; and they worked with their schoolmates to create, develop and ultimately implement an innovative solution to an intergroup conflict in their own schools.

Art news

Four students at CHS, Dennis Leary, Ian Knox, Andrew Ross, Allie Redfield, were involved in the Photographic Resource Centers' photojournalism project entitled "A Day in the Life..." Over 400 Massachusetts students spent Feb. 24 "shooting" pictures representing a day in their life. The results of this project will be presented in a photo show at P.R.C. Comm. Ave., Boston later this spring.

Sixth grade parents' meeting

Cohasset Junior/Senior High School staff members will hold an informational meeting for parents of sxith graders Tuesday, March 29 at 7:30 p.m. in the studio room at the high school.

Department chairpersons, the director of guidance and the principal will be present to assist parents in course selections and to answer questions.

Ninth grade humanities news

By Fran Cronin and Joe Bouchard

Throughout the winter ninth grade students have been learning about ancient Greek and Roman civilizations, their history and their literature. Recently several activities have occurred or have been planned which have enhanced the daily classwork of the classical unit.

Monday, March 7, Mrs. Terry, a parent who is a volunteer tour guide at the Museum of Fine Arts, presented a lecture about the Greek and Roman Classical Collection. Using excellent representative slides of the pottery, sculpture, and artifacts which the students will be viewing, Mrs. Terry introduced some artistic themes and sparked student interest and questions. On March 15 the students will have a guided tour of the Classical Collection and an unguided tour of the Egyptian collection.

Also, students have been researching individual classical topics in preparation for a Classical Day, a day of "show and tell," in which students demonstrate what they have created (i.e. mosaic, model, sculpture, jewelry, etc.) and explain what they have learned. These projects were presented in the auditorium on March 8-10. Directors chosen from the morning classes, Maggie Moore, David Cullinare, and Matt Norris, and the afternoon classes, Katie McNamara, Jan Hunter, and Kerri Miele, organized the program and introductions.

The final activity of the unit will be the presentation in the auditorium of Anthony's funeral oration from the play "Julius Caesar". Each student has memorized the speech and will present it dramatically.

Kindergarten dinosaurs

Mrs. Moody's Kindergarten is involved this month with Dinosaurs. We are learning about past periods in time, changes in the earth, and facts about dinosaurs. We have "Dinoland" a bulletin board made to look like a swampy bog with dinosaurs created by the children. Soon we will each be making a fossil. We are not only responding to the science and social studies aspects, but are also including creative writing. Each child will be completing a two sentence story starter.

Here are some examples of kindergarten creative stories:

Peter Rabbit meets Dinosaur

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He decided to skip down the path. Along the way he met a bunny trying to find some carrots. Behind the dinosaur's back is hidden a carrot. Dinosaur gives the carrot to the bunny. They become friends. They finish walking along the path. At the end of the path Dinosaur invites rabbit to come home with him for tea and carrots. Rabbit says yes and they have a wonderful afternoon together.

by Meagan Leahy

The Vicious Dinosaur

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. He passed by the secret path and went into a dark tunnel. He found a golden treasure with a triceratops spirit guarding it. They had a fight and the dinosaur killed the triceratops. He takes home the gold treasure. With the treasure he bought dragonflies for his cubs. He and his cubs live happily ever after.

by Darius Amiri

Dinosaur Meets Tyrannosaurus Rex

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a tall building he saw a secret path. Being a big, brave dinosaur he decided to go through the path. He walks slowly and carefully looking for danger. Suddenly from out of a cave Tyrannosaurus Rex came charging at dinosaur. They fight and the dinosaur wins. The dinosaur likes the secret path so much that he decides to live there forever.

by Billy Good

The Dinosaur's Treasure Hunt

One day a dinosaur was walking down the street. As he passed by a building he saw a secret path. He decided to walk down the path. After he walked down this path he found another path. On this path he finds a treasure. He takes the treasure home and lives happily ever after.

No doubt now about number one team!

Centrum, riding to victory was simply a matter of feeling out their opponents in the early going and figuring out the strategy that would prove most effective.

In the game's opening minutes it truly appeared the Skippers might be in for some serious difficulties, especially in matching up up front. Frontier rushed out to a 5-0 lead, sparked by the inside play of the Danielski sisters, Althea (a 6' senior forward) and Juliane (the 6'2" junior center). Cohasset truly seemed frustrated; they were intimidated at the offensive end and overwhelmed in the paint on defense.

However, somewhere around the four-minute mark of the quarter, the tempo of the game went from one extreme to the other. This spelled the beginning of the end for Frontier. Intensified pressure on the ball by the Skippers almost instantly began to turn things in the Skippers favor.

They forced a rash of turnovers and even, thanks primarily to Cindy Spooner (10 rebounds, 7-points) and Marge Murphy (8-points), began controlling things under the boards at their end, both of these developments making it possible for them to start taking advantage of their decidedly superior transition game, and behind their jack-rabbit of a point guard, Liz O'Leary (a career high 23-points), who scored six of her eight first period points on fastbreak lay-ins, Cohasset went on a 10-1 run to take a 10-6 advantage after one.

"It's been like this for most of the year", said O'Leary, a senior, after the game. "They (Murphy and Spooner, both seniors as well) knew exactly how I'd break when they got a rebound."

As the game progressed, it became increasingly evident that the Skippers overall speed was to much for the much larger and half-court oriented Frontier squad. The Cohasset front line more than held their own under the glass, making up for what they lacked in size and strength with hustle and determination.

In the second quarter the Skippers, with surprising ease, managed to hold their opponents to very few shorts and practically no second opportunities. This enabled them to really get the transition game rolling. And when the running game was slowed, the halfcourt offense proved almost as formidable, thanks largely to some excellent interior passing. Everything considered, the consensus at the intermission seemed to be that Frontier was indeed fortunate to be trailing by just 11, 29-18.

To start the second half, any thoughts of a big turnaround or a miraculous comeback were all but wiped out, as the Skipper picked right up where they had left off, hitting Frontier with a 6-0 spurt in the opening two minutes to break many a heart and quickly dampen all remnants of spirit which may have been reignited in the locker room.

Following this, with the exception of a few more long outlets to O'Leary, Cohasset slipped into a posture of maintaining: working the clock, taking care of the ball by keeping it primarilly in the hands of Murphy and O'Leary, searching out the high percentage shots, and, most importantly, not allowing the regional school girls to get quick or easy hoops. Needless to say, for the most part, these objectives were carried out effectively.

The Skippers led in the second half never slipped under double figures, as they waltzed home. The lead went as high as 17, 35-18, and the final margin of 10 was the closest Frontier came.

"Unitl this year, we never really had an all-star caliber to effectively compare to the boys team," said an ecstatic Billy Fallon in the post-game interview. "The 1985 team (who lost in the State Championship game to Quaboag) had talent, but this team reached its highest peak. They executed everything they needed today."

THE BOYS

The boys, unfortunately, did not enjoy the success their counterparts did. There were a number of reasons for this, and there could be a long list of excuses given, but the bottom line is that they were outplayed by St. Josephs, who Cohasset Coach Eddie Minelli called "the better team," and the score, 75-57, gives an accurate indication of the one-sidedness of the contest.

However, after it was all over, Minelli was not anxious to dwell on what his team could or could not do, had or had not accomplished. The loss of this single game was not the loss he was most concerned with.

"I'm losing eight seniors," said the coach after the game, "and that the most difficult thing. A lot of these kids have been with me for years. It's the end of an era for me, and I'm a little saddened by that."

In the last four years there has been two state championships and three Eastern Mass. Titles. For five years running they have not lost a single game in their South Shore League small division (60-0). So, needless to say, the good greatly outweighs the bad.

There was a sense among the still sky-high Skipper faithful (following the girls victory) almost from the opening tip that something was wrong.

In the first quarter it was a couple of disturbing things. As he had so many times all season, Minelli opted to start by forcing the issue inside. Frontcourt men Mike Smith and Matt Maloney, both of whom have been solid forces down low all season long, were rendered virtually ineffective by the quick collapsing St. Joseph's defense. And, after having several of their early scoring chances thwarted, they began to lose confidence and hurry their shots.

Only Bryan Edwards, who scored a game high 34 points (thus ending his high school career 82 points ahead of Ronnie Perry's previous state scoring record of 2,481), seemed able to function offensively.

However, shortly after tying the score at 16-16 with five quick points to start the second quarter, Bryan was forced to the bench for the remainder of the half suffering from the flu and a reoccuring sprained ankle.

With Edwards out, the Cohasset offense stagnated, and St. Josephs, lead by the exceptional play of off-guard Paul Calop (26 points), took command, out scoring the Skippers 17-5 over the last six minutes to take a comfortable 32-21 lead into the intermission.

That's right, the high powered Skipper offensive machine, which scored over 100 points four times this year, had been held to 21-points, by far their low-water mark on the season.

In the third quarter, Cohasset came out pressing, but without the inside game and without Edwards at 100 percent, the efforts were fruitless.

There was a momentary scare for St. Joe's however, late in the third. After taking their biggest lead of the game, 48-30, they suddenly became complacent and sloppy, which enabled the Skippers to run off nine unanswered points. Edwards and fellow senior backcourt man Dave Schultz (four points) keyed the comeback bid, each making two steals apiece, but a buzzer beating lay-in by St. Joseph's center, Chris Unsworth (16 points) ended the run and stemmed a great deal of Cohasset's momentum.

In the final quarter, Cohasset commited a number of desperating fouls, unfortunately, their opponents did not squander the opportunities. Four times in the period Culpo sank both ends of one-and-one, this alone being enough to stave off the Skippers bid.

Troop 28 in district swim meet

Saturday, March 12, Boy Scouts from Old Mills District of Old Colony Council BSA attended a Swim Meet at Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay.

Scouts from Cohasset Troop 28 participated in the event, along with scouts from Norwell, Scituate, Hingham and Hanover. They competed in 12 events and two divisions. Division A was for boys under the age of 14; and Division B for those boys 14 and over.

The Cohasset winners were:

150' Backstroke (Division A)

1st, Troop 28 Cohasset — Josh Roth

Medley Relay 75' (Division A)

3rd, Troop 28 Cohasset — Trevor Cook, Scott Herzog, Jay Nothnagle and Dan Silvia.

Trophy Winners for each category were:

Division A

3rd, Three way tie — Troop 90 Scituate; Troop 1 Hanover and Troop 28 Cohasset.

Art center programs

March 28 marks the start of the spring term at the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset. Advanced registration is required for all courses at the Center.

Courses in the drawing and painting department include Basic Portrait by Katherine Smith, Mondays from 1-3:30 p.m.; "Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain" by Syma, Mondays from 9-11:30 a.m.; Figure Drawing by Clement Micarelli, Mondays from 7:30-10 p.m.; Drawing from Nature by Albert Abany, Tuesdays, 9:30 a.m.-noon; Defining Style and Expression, Susan Rodgerson, Tuesdays, 7:30-10 p.m.; Watercolor, Virginia Avery, Wednesdays, 9:30-noon and 1-3:30 p.m.; Introductory Drawing and Introductory Painting, both by David Tandy, Wednesdays, 7:15-10:15 p.m.; Oriental Brush Technique, Eleanor Avakian, Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.; Draw and Paint in Watercolor & Acrylic, Mary Lizotte, Thursday, 9 a.m.-3 p.m.; Portraiture, Clement Micarelli, Thursdays, 7:30-10 p.m. and Life Drawing, Rosalind Farbush, Saturday, 9:30-12:30 p.m.

Rodgerson's Defining Style and Expression is a painting workshop designed to help artists expand their personal style through brave experimentation. So often an artist will reach a technical level and not progress beyond that level. Rodgerson will work with students to reach beyond to new dimensions in their works.

Syma's "Drawing on the Right Side of the Brain" is a course designed to help students strengthen the right side of the brain which is the side that governs the dreamer, the artificer and the artist in people. She will use exercises designed to give students confidence in their own creative abilities and to use the functions of the whole brain.

Abany's Drawing from Nature is designed for beginners and those artists wishing to brush up on basic landscape skills in order to create better paintings. The group will meet every other week outdoors and return to the Center studio on alternate weeks to create new drawings based on field studies.

In the 3-D department, Judy Rossman and George Dalton will teach Clay for Adults Tuesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. and Walter Horak will teach Carved Wood Sculpture Thursdays, 7:30-9:30 p.m. Handbuilding techniques and intensive wheel throwing will be taught in the Clay for Adults course. In Horak's class students will begin with drawings and/or clay models of a design followed by carrying out the design in wood.

In the printmaking department, Berj Kailian will teach Monotype/Collage, Fridays, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Abany will teach Printmaking Without a Press on Tuesdays from 12:30-3 p.m. In Kailian's class students will use a combination of collage techniques and the printing process to explore their individual creativity. Abany's class will work with simple relief processes including rubbings, monoprint and lineocut.

In the critical studies department Judith Hanhisalo will teach Understanding the Visual Arts, a non-historical slide course designed to promote a deeper understanding of art. This course meets on Thursdays, 7:30-9 p.m. and will focus on sculpture. Museum visits will be arranged.

Louise Kalish continues her half-day tours to galleries and museums in Boston and Cambridge. The group meets every month on the third Thursday at 10 a.m. at a designated location.

An independent art history course may be arranged with Beverly Stanley. Students can select any area of art history and pursue it with instructor guidance, resources and visuals. Students will be as a group to set up projects and come together again at the end to present projects.

Three special courses include Color and Composition taught by Louise Kalish, Mondays from 9:30 to noon, Tapestry Weaving by Joan Hausrath, Tuesdays from 7-9:30 p.m. and Collage/Assemblage by Audrey Colby, Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m. Hausrath's Tapestry Weaving is a beginning course based on Gobelin techniques. Students will build portable tapestry looms on which they will weave small pieces.

Colby's course will cover methods, history and ideas of collage and students will combine found materials with painting and drawing techniques to create artwork. A museum visit will be arranged during the term.

For students wishing to learn the secrets to good photography and the methods to becoming more creative with a camera, the photography department offers four courses: Tom Hannon's Beginning Photography, Mondays from 7:30-9:30 p.m.; Paul Fortin's Intermediate Photography, Wednesdays from 7:30-9:30 p.m.; Fortin's Masters of Photography, Mondays 7:30-9:30 p.m.; and Amy Whorf's Beginning Darkroom, Wednesdays, 7-10 p.m.

For further information, call the South Shore Art Center, 383-9548. Programs of the Center are funded in part by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities, a state agency.

Drawing a dream at art center

Translate the content of a dream into visual images on canvas at a South Shore Art Center "Drawing on Dreams" workshop with artist and teacher Roy Pardi.

Pardi comes to the Center, 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset, for a one-day workshop, Saturday, March 26 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. to explore with participants developing imagery from dream contents. Advanced registration is required for this Saturday workshop.

Local leagues sponsor solid waste symposium

Plans are in place for the solid Waste Symposium and Fair, sponsored by the Leagues of Women Voters of Weymouth, Hingham and Cohasset, scheduled for this Saturday from noon to 5 p.m. at the Weymouth North High School 105, Commercial St., East Weymouth.

Arlene Stamm, president of the LMV-Hingham, will moderate the speakers program, scheduled to begin at o'clock in Daniel L. O'Donnell Auditorium.

Dr. Paul Connett, professor of chemistry at St. Lawrence University, will deliver the keynote address.

As head of Work on Waste, U.S.A. Dr. Connett speaks at national forums on solid waste issues and is considered a leading proponent of source reduction through municipal recycling programs.

Becky Secrest, manager of the Wilton, N.H. recycling program and marketing chair of the N.H. Resource Recovery Association, will discuss how the NHRRA acts as a broker to communities in sourcing markets and selling materials.

Peter Karter, president of Resource Recovery Systems, and firm involved in the state's first material recovery facility (MRF) scheduled for Springfield, will give a slide presentation on the design an operation of the MRF.

Also speaking is Ted Gentile of New England Crinc of Billerica. Crinc has been selected as prime contractor for the plant in Rhode Island that will separate, process, and recycle glass, metals, plastics and paper.

In 1987, Rhode Island adopted an statewide mandatory recycling program. Crinc recently received a Massachusetts Centers of Excellence grant award from the state for its research on plastics waste recyling with the University of Lowell.

Gordon Sutin, general manager of SEMASS, will explain extensive regional waste to energy project for Southeastern Massachusetts, located in Rochester.

Willa Kuh, director of municipal assistance for the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering, will review the state's $260 million Solid Waste Act of 1987, and financial incentives available to towns to assist in solid waste disposal, recycling and composting.

John Silva, Hull selectman and chair of the South Shore Coalition, will outline goals and strategies for a comprehensive solid waste plan for South Shore communities.

Sen. William B. Golden, who represents the three participating League towns, will join Kuh and Silva on a panel to answer questions from the audience. He will also present awards to winners in the league poster contest at the end of the program.

Beginning at noon, vendors and exhibitors will display and provide information on a wide variety of subjects, involving current technologies and educational materials on solid waste. Videos from the states of New Jersey and Massachusetts will focus on recycling and composting. Community and environmental groups, including Weymouth's Citizens for Responsible Waste Disposal (CROWD), and the Autumn Hill Association of Hingham will exhibit information on the Back River estuary and landfills. Greenpeace will also attend.

Several companies will demonstrate via presentations, videos, discussion and brochures how their technologies meet the needs of municipalities for solid waste disposal.

These include: National Ecology of Timonium, Md. (Refuse to energy plants); ORFA (mixed waste processing) with a plant soon to operate for Philadelphia's mandated recycling program; Reuter Resource Recovery of Minneapolis, Minn. (design and operation of mixed waste processing facilities); Laurent Bouillet Howard (design and operation of waste to energy plants.

Also Agri-Tech Industries of Urbana, Ill. (development of municipal and industrial packaging products made from natural resins, such as biodegradable trashbags, containers); Stumpsoil (Processing methods and equipment for land/yard waste); Energy Resource Systems of Denver, Colo. (municipal waste processing); Oxford Tire Recycling of Mass. in Walpole, (recycling and products from processed tires); and Great Eastern Packing and Paper Stock of Weymouth (paper and corrugated recyclers).

Great Eastern and Oxford Tire will participate in a newspaper and tire recycling collection during the event. Boys Scouts from Pack 73 and Troop 19 will collect deposit bottles and cans.

Public officials from the three communities and the 30 other area towns contracted by the leasees are invited to participate in this event.

The leagues are also encouraging local residents and students to attend this important community awareness program."

More information is available by calling Janet Quinland 331-3283; Nancy Darr 335-088; Barbara Zia 749-6040; Madeline Olney 383-1492.

Town displays love for two terrific teams

By Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Mothers, sisters, brothers, grandparents, friends and fans gathered on the common Saturday afternoon to show their support for the deserving athletes of Cohasset High School.

As the First Parish bells pealed from the tower overlooking Cohasset Common, the sounds of police and fire engine sirens roared as they escorted the championship basketball teams back to town.

It was about 4:30 in the afternoon when the boys' and girls' team members exited from the buses, into the crowd of well-wishers. The day's bright sun was setting behind the bare branches of trees along North Main Street, and a brisk wind caused havoc with the blue and white balloons held by the faithful fans of Cohasset High.

The boys were dejected as they walked from the bus to the back of a pick-up truck which were used as temporary staging for this townwide rally. Many of the performers, including Co-Capt. Bryan Edwards, had already departed for home.

But Athletic Director Clark Chatterton urged the boys not to be disappointed at the outcome of Saturday's game. It marked only their third loss in the season for the 1988 Division III Eastern Massachusetts champions.

There was no need to console the girls, who had earlier that day captured the state Division III crown.

"Thank you for all your support all season," a smiling Co-Capt. Marge Murphy told the crowd.

Her coach, Bill Fallon, also thanked everyone for their support throughout the long season. "I'm happy for everyone on this team. The girls worked real hard for this," he added.

One-by-one, the members of the state championship team were called to the stage by Chatterton. "This team finished with a 25-1 record. Incredible!" he yelled throughout a bull horn, rousing the crowd into louder cheers for the hometown champs.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle hopped aboard the truck to congratulate the team members. "Congratulations to the superintendent of schools, his staff and the parents, but mostly to the kids. To think we have two teams from one tiny little town like Cohasset (to go to the state finals)!" he said.

Before introducing the members of the boys' team, Chatterton noted that Rev. John Keohane from St. Anthony's Church earlier advised him that the boys should not have played St. Joseph's High School on that day - St. Joseph's Day.

There was no question in anyone's mind who was number 1 as the girls' team headed into Cohasset for a town-wide rally.
(Alan Chapman photo)

Coach Eddie Minelli thanked everyone for their season-long support. "The kids are a little down right now, but what's most important is that the girls won - and the great hockey team we had. They deserve a lot of credit, along with the great wrestlers."

He continued, "The most difficult thing in sports is that someone has to win, and someone has to lose. I like to think that today, St. Joseph's won. What's most important is the great wins we had to get us here. I'm very proud of them."

Members of the boys' team stepped to the improvised stage to express their congratulations to the girls' team. David Shultz added, "I'm sorry we couldn't have won too. But at least they did. They don't get as much credit as they should."

Championship team member Cindy Spooner told the crowd that their coach lead them into the championship despite ill health during recent weeks. "If we had a different coach," she said. "We wouldn't be here now."

Chatterton thanked everyone for attending the rally, and commended the student body for their exemplary behavior during the many post-season games.

He estimated that about 1,800 Cohasset fans attended Saturday's final competition at the Worcester Centrum.

There's more than one litter problem in your neighborhood.

They never asked to be born. But their mother's owners figured the local animal shelter would surely find them good homes.

They didn't realize that most of the 13.5 million unwanted animals put to death each year are not strays. They're puppies and kittens born in nice homes like yours that have to be killed to make room for more.

Having your pet spayed or neutered is the only way to reduce the sad number of ownerless dogs and cats destroyed this year. It will also increase your pet's chances of living a longer and healthier life. That responsibility is yours alone. You'll never stop your pets from acting naturally. But if you love them, you'll have them fixed.

Sewer articles prompt another town meeting wastewater treatment plant. This plan, which has already received state approval, will be 90 percent funded by the state and federal government.

The second article will ask voters to borrow $1.8 million to simultaneously design and construct phases one and two of the Cohasset sewer service areas. The principal and interest on the money would be paid by users of the new sewers over a 25 - year period.

The third article will become necessary if Hull voters reject the intermunicipal agreement a second time. The Cohasset article will propose that the town rehabilitate, modernize and expand the present plant in order to treat 300,000 gallons of sewage per day. The same areas would be sewered under this plan that has yet to receive state approval.

The cost for the third option to update the Elm Street plant will be about $1.5 million. But sewer commissioner Ted Guild said the commission still favors the Hull-Cohasset plan. "We're very optimistic that Hull will approve this agreement," he said. "But we have acontingency plan, just in case. Both options are an imminently satisfactory solution to Cohasset's wastewater problems."

He continued, "the commissioners favor the Hull option because primarily, it has already received state approval and is therefore our preferred solution. It will get Cohasset out of the wastewater business. We're too small to be in the wastewater business. It also solves our discharge permit violation, protects the ecology and eliminates the threat of a $10,000 daily fine to Cohasset at the time when that plant was in violation of its discharge permit."

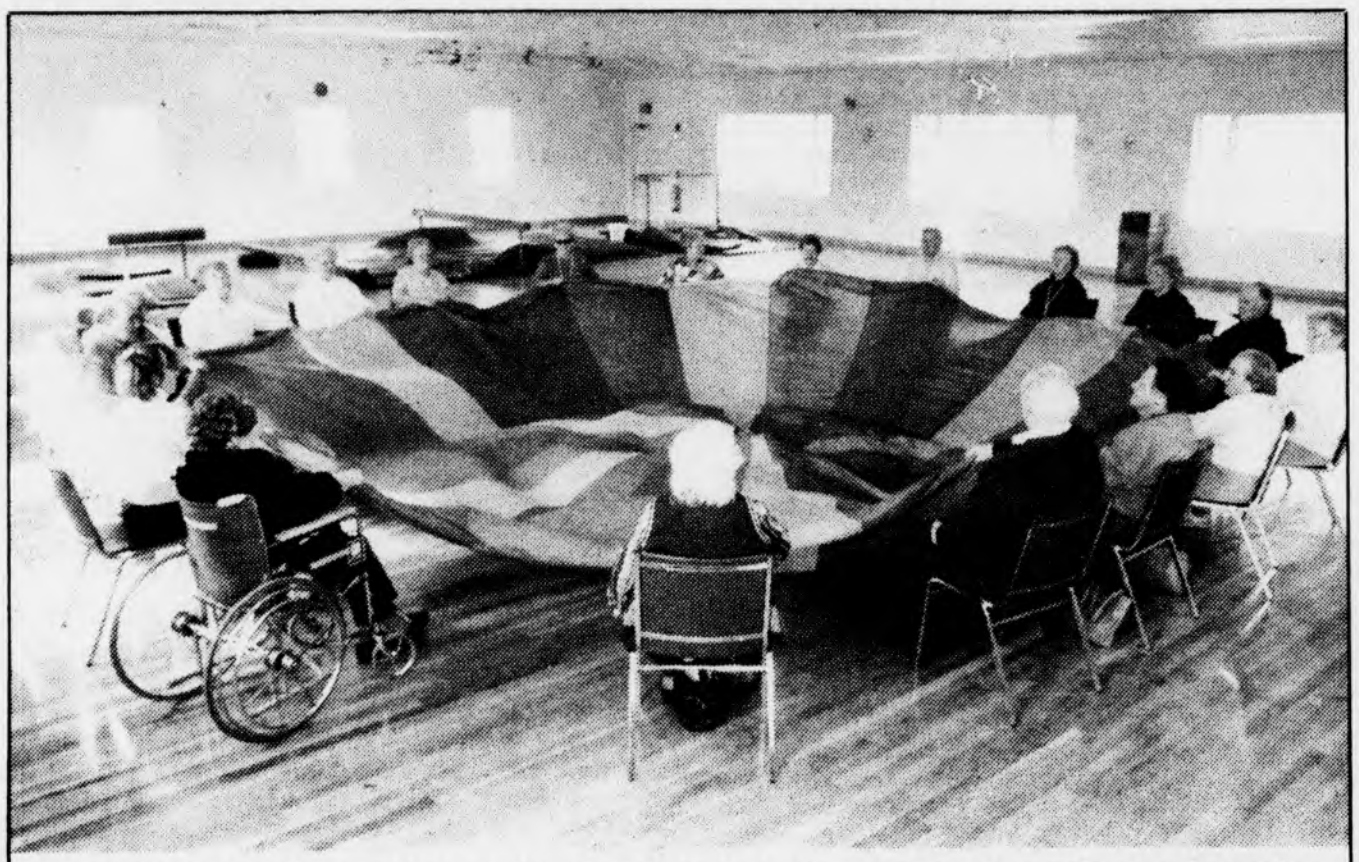
Regarding the town's current precarious fiscal situation, commissioner Guild stated that whatever sewer option is approved, it will cost the town added money. But he noted the town is also under court order to undertake solutions to its wastewater problems. "Any expenditure will be added money to the town's budget. But we're under court order to find a solution now," he added.

Although the renovations to the Elm Street plant are not preferred by the commission, Guild said, "we'd be surprised if the state did not approve what we have planned."

In the past, he explained, the state has rejected plans to expand the Elm Street plant, citing an invasion of the adjacent wetlands, and the need for an outfall into Cohasset Harbor rather than Jacobs Meadow.

The current option to renovate the Elm Street plant will not increase the land usage at the station. And with a specially-designed sand filter, the actual discharge following a terciary treatment will be less than is currently discharged from the plant.

Although selectmen raised concerns about a fresh water outfall into Cohasset Harbor and its detrimental effect on lobsters, Guild said studies have shown there is no effect to the shellfish. "The amount of water that comes down James Brook and the gulf into the harbor will dwarf the amount of fresh water discharged from the plant, even in a flooding situation," he answered. "It will be nothing compared to what comes down from mother nature."



The popular parachute exercise is a favorite workout for the members of Claire Gurnett's therapeutic exercise class at the senior center. (Kym Marcella photo)

Cohasset recreation sponsors Easter egg hunt

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct the 12th annual Easter Egg Hunt for children 3 through 11 years, Saturday, April 2, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

There is once again the possibility that the Easter Bunny and helpers will make an appearance. There also will be live animals at this year's hunt, and the other attractions.

Children will be divided into three separate groups: Group 1. Ages 3 & 4 (with parent); Group 2. Ages 5 - 7; Group 3. Ages 8 - 11.

Please gather around your designated area sign before noon. Bring a small paper bag or container for your candy.

Individually-wrapped chocolate eggs will be scattered about the designated area. In each group, some of the eggs will be wrapped with masking tape and will have a number on the tape. Hold on to the numbered eggs to be eligible for a prize from the Easter Bunny.

This year's program sponsors are: Cohasset Rotary Club, Cohasset Firemen's Association, American Legion Post #118, the Cohasset Police Association, and the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The Rain date will be Saturday, April 9, at noon at the Deer Hill School field.

Afterschool sports program

The Cohasset Recreation Department will conduct an afterschool sports and low-organized game program for the following days and times at the Deer Hill School gym:

Tuesday's, 3:30 to 5 p.m., beginning March 22, grades K through 2; Wednesday's, 3:30 to 5 p.m., beginning March 23, grades 3 through 5.

The program which consists of low-organized games and team sports, will be conducted by recreation department staff members. It will provide a structured and supervised environment for children.

Registrations will be accepted by calling the recreation office at 383-6791. There will be an $8 per person fee, with a 50 percent family discount offered for the second and subsequent children for the six-week program. Classes will be registered every six weeks from now until May.

During the winter months, the activities will be held in the Deer Hill School gym, and during the spring months activities will be held outside whenever weather permits.

Because of the gym size, classes will be limited in size and the program will be registered on a first-call, first-enrolled basis. Checks, payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class.

Dog obedience classes

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for beginner and intermediate dog training classes taught by Mrs. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday evenings at the GAR Hall in Scituate, beginning Wednesday, April 6.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., on Wednesday evenings. The fee for the eight-week program will be $25. Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class, Wednesday, April 6. Dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

The purpose of beginner classes is to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects include proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included.

The training will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the recreation department beginner class.

Owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed. It is also suggested that handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes the fee is $25 per dog for the eight-week, one-hour per week program.

To register, call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791. Registrations will be accepted on a first-call, first-enrolled basis. Classes are limited in size.

Creative writing

Jaimee Colbert will teach a creative writing workshop at Northeastern University, Weymouth campus, beginning Thursday, April 7, 8-10 p.m. for eleven weeks. The course is titled: Writing for the Marketplace, and will involve fun writing exercises in different genres, feedback on each student's work, and discussion of how to market various types of writing. Colbert teaches literature and writing at N.U. and has won several awards for her fiction and poetry. All levels of interest and experience welcomed. Call 437-2400 for registration information, and 545-9778 for course information.

St. Mary's Parish services

Lenten penitential service for all parishioners of St. Mary of the Assumption Parish in Hull, at 7:30 p.m., Friday, March 25, at St. Ann's Church, Lewis and Samoset Streets.

Stations of the Cross held Wednesdays during Lent at 7:30 p.m., St. Ann's Church. Stations also held at 3 p.m., Good Friday, April 1, St. Ann's Church.

Also, children's liturgy at 4:30 p.m., Saturday, March 26, St. Ann's Church. All parishioners urged to attend.

And St. Mary's Knights of Columbus hosts a family communion supper with complete roast beef dinner; 6:30 p.m., Saturday, March 26. Tickets $5 per person. Call 925-0680.

Chatfield named to bishopric

Robert E. Chatfield of Norwell, former bishop and stake leader of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in Hingham, is now serving as a "counselor" (assistant) to Bishop Bradley K. Johnson. Chatfield will be joining John Alico of Duxbury in this capacity.

The LDS Church is a lay church. Its leaders devote time and effort, without financial compensation, to the operation of the church and its many programs.

In celebration of Easter

The family-worship-hour at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will be an Easter program, with song and music, celebrating the resurrection and divinity of Jesus Christ.

The service will begin at 9 a.m. and is followed by Sunday School for children and adults. The Relief Society (women's organization) lesson will be on the Savior — the power of His words, the power of His deeds, and the power of His love, from 11 a.m. to 12 p.m. Visitors are welcome.

First Parish

Parish news

Correction: Arnold and Alice Weeks celebrated their 68th anniversary March 13th and not their 67th as reported last week.

Walk for Hunger

This year First Parish will be participating in Project Bread's Annual Walk for Hunger, Sunday, May 1. We would like to involve as many church members and friends as possible. There are many different ways to participate in this church project. We will need walkers, sponsors, drivers, etc.

By walking, you'll be showing your concern for the hungry in a very real way. And you'll have a great time, too. We hope to have walkers who will walk from as little as 1 mile to as many as 20 miles. (By the way, it takes from 5 - 8 hours to walk 20 miles.)

It's not a matter of how far you walk. What really counts is that you join us in some capacity in The Walk for Hunger.

Schedule Changes at the Carriage House School:

There has been an increased need and request for nursery school classes particularly for four-year olds. The Carriage House has responded to and met this need. As of September, 1988, a new class for 12 four-year olds will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoons from 12:30 - 3 p.m. in the Carriage House and will be staffed by Sally and Barbara. If you have any questions, please call Sally at 383-9785.

Youth Group news

Calendar of upcoming events: March 27 - First Parish of Kingston hosts Ballou Channing Youth Groups; April 2 - Easter Party: FP Youth hosts an Easter Party for preschoolers of Wellspring House in Hull, 10 a.m. to noon.

Free Tax Assistance for Older Persons

Volunteer counselors trained by the Internal Revenue Service will be available in many cities and towns in Massachusetts until April 14, 1988. Persons using this service should bring with them copies of their previous year's federal and state tax returns and forms for the current tax year, including W2s, 1099s and other relevant materials showing income for the year. Please call Betty Van Slyck (383-1561) or Mildred Harrington (383-0216) for an appointment.

Second Congregational Church

CHURCH SCHOOL: Parents, please note Saturday March 26 at 10:30 a.m. the children will practice the Palm Sunday hymn with the choir.

LENTEN STUDY SERIES: Thursday evening March 28 from 8 to 9:30 p.m. in Bates Hall. Topic: Life After Death. Please join us, even if you didn't come last Thursday. Some interesting questions (and a few answers) await us.

ORGAN DONOR CARDS: and driver's license indicating stickers are available from the minister. One possible blessing out of tragedy.

PICTORIAL DIRECTORY: coming soon. Sign up sheet now posted in Bates Hall. Please pick a time and sign up as soon as you can (that will save us some phone calls in the weeks ahead). The date for "sittings" is Saturday, April 30.

FOR THE COMING WEEK: Thursday, March 24, 6 p.m., youth group; 8 p.m., Lenten Study. Saturday, March 26, 10:30 a.m., choir; children's rehearsal. Sunday, March 27, 10 a.m., Palm Sunday parade and worship; 5-7 p.m., Girl Scout supper.

Saint Anthony's Parish

SUNDAY MASSES: 8 a.m. 9:30, 11:30 a.m., Saturday, 5 p.m. Daily Mass 7 a.m., Saturday, 8 a.m. followed by Novena and Rosary. Mass every Friday during Lent at 5 p.m. Sacrament of Reconciliation: Saturday from 4:15 to 4:45 p.m.

BAPTISMS: James P. Donovan

BANNS OF MARRIAGE: Amy Cifrino and William Rooney, Dr. Lee Welky and Julie Curran.

CCD: Grade 4, thank you to Jessica Sullivan and Kelley Dwyer of Mrs. Gail Collins' class for reading at the 5 p.m. Masses, Friday March 4 and 11. Stations of the Cross for children will be Monday, March 28 from 3:30 to 4:15 p.m. Parents are asked to attend, also.

Weddings/ Engagements

Linda M. Whitlow

Whitlow/Sullivan

Mrs. Ann M. Whitlow of Mashpee, and Mr. Duane L. Whitlow of New Milford, New Jersey have announced the engagement of their daughter, Linda Marie, to James Michael Sullivan. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Sullivan of Cohasset.

Miss Whitlow is a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School and a 1986 graduate of Curry College School of Nursing. She is currently serving in the Navy at Balboa Naval Hospital, San Diego, California.

First Lieutenant Sullivan is also a 1980 graduate of Cohasset High School and a 1984 graduate of Norwich University. He is currently stationed at Camp Pendleton, California.

A July 3 wedding at St. Anthony's Parish Church in Cohasset is planned.

School budget to stay despite fiscal woes . . .

percent inflationary increase and a four-to-five percent step raise. "In the schools, more than 70 percent of the teachers are at top level and do not receive step increases," he explained. "I think the town employees get a greater increase than the school staff."

Advisory chairman Jane Goedecke said it is difficult to compare teachers' salaries to those of other town employees. "You always have employees in all businesses who think the other guy is getting a better deal," she said. "We have to make sure that this is mostly griping, and not mostly true."

But the school committee members warned that in order for Cohasset to attract the better quality teachers, the system must offer competitive, attractive salaries.

Gjesteby noted that the chances of approving an override are better if the requested amount is limited. "Is there something you can cut to show that you people are trying to meet this problem?" he asked.

Supt. Hart explained that in the last three years, the department has used "every last penny" within the budget. He explained that in the unexpected event a family moves into Cohasset next year with a special needs student who must be institutionalized, Cohasset will be faced with the mandatory cost of educating that student. "We could be hit with a $50,000 to $60,000 program anytime," he added.

"I couldn't in good conscience, knowing the amount we have in this budget, cut it without having any effect," he answered.

Gjesteby answered, "but if we don't get this override, there'll be some serious cutting"

"Everybody knows the firefighters are in mediation. If the town does not fund this override, the salaries will stand, but there will be fewer people to spread that around," chairman Goedecke added.

At the Monday night school budget public hearing, Supt. Hart explained that if there is no override, and the town is faced with a $781,000 deficit, fifty percent of that amount will be taken out of the schools. That will be equivalent to $390,000, he said.

He has not designated where those cuts could be, but the superintendent will be meeting with school administrators to "see what this would really mean."

Committee members noted that if the large cut was forced by defeat of an override, such options as user fees for school programs and athletics may have to be instituted,

"There would have to be staff reductions, which mean a change in class sizes," Supt. Hart added. "I'd trying to be realistic, (reducing) where there is least importance. But there is no way it will not have a significant impact."

School committee members emphasized the public must be made aware of the impact a defeat of the override proposal would be to the school system. "We see this as a real bare bones budget," member Christopher Ford said. "And we will take whatever steps are necessary to maintain this budget, we'll support."

In addition to the overall budget, there are several separate warrant articles sponsored by the school committee at the annual town meeting.

They include: $140,000 to complete the second phase of the renovations to seven science labs; $16,000 for a new stake body truck; $20,000 to repair the slate roof at the Osgood School. This will finish the roof renovation project at the three schools; $55,000 to purchase two new school buses. According to state law, no school bus built before 1979 can be used. The school department has been phasing in two new buses every year; $90,000 to replace leaking windows in the rear of the high school. This will complete the window repair project at the school.

When asked to prioritize the requests, Supt. Hart said he would first choose those capital items that directly affect education.

The advisory committee took no action on the proposed budget and warrant articles.

Nature trails 'an outdoor class'

Two nature trails connecting forested land between the Osgood and Deer Hill schools should be opened within the week and ready to use for "outdoor classrooms" as soon as teaching materials are available.

David Clapp, director of the South Shore Regional Center of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, is assisting the Community Garden Club with the trail clearing. Within the next week, he told club members, the two trails covering 59 acres of land between the elementary schools, will be cleared. The local Boy Scouts will be assisting in this task.

Clapp said that with about $1,000 for teaching supplies and materials, including training sessions for teachers, the trails will create "a wonderful educational opportunity for kids. This will work," he assured club members. "And they'll love it."

He showed several slides of the forested area which includes red maple wetlands, creeks and stone walls. Clapp has been involved with this project in coordination with the Community Garden Club. The 59 acres comprise a parcel of open space controlled by the school department.

"This will expose students to our natural environment - to have that understanding to work toward goals which will provide resources for people in the future," he stated. "All this begins by understanding other components of this planet, and that begins with understanding plant life and wildlife."

One trail will lead from the back of the Deer Hill School. The second trail will begin at the rear of the Osgood playground area. It follows the old railroad bed through the woods. Clapp will assist with clearing the trails, while he creates topic ideas to be used by the teachers during their outdoor classroom activities.

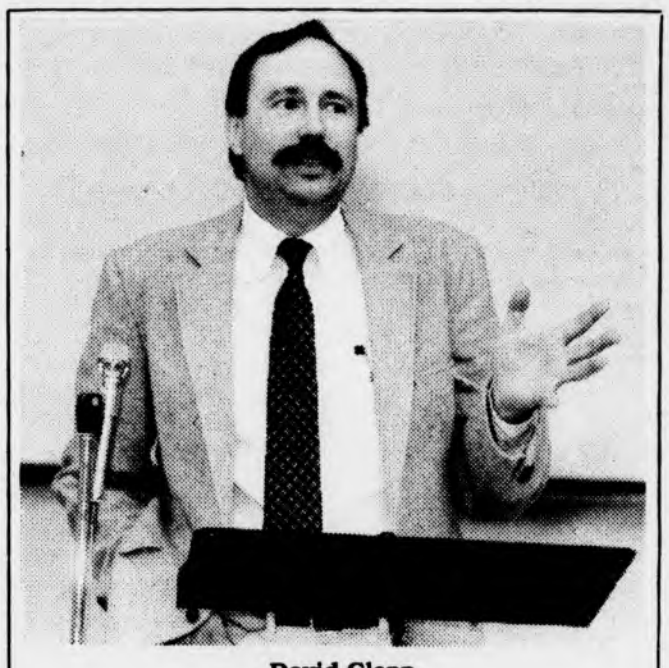
He envisioned the future development of maps showing various vegetation and wetlands. Specific points of interest could be marked off as the trails are layed out.

It is most important, he explained, to make the teachers aware and knowledgeable about the areas. Before they begin to teach, they must be familiar with the concepts and the environment they are entering, he stated.

Another future project, he said, could be a sitting place or amphitheatre for students to rest during their outdoor classes. Telephone poles are a good material for this use, Clapp suggested.

He called the forested area off Pleasant Street an interesting mix of ash, beech and red maple trees. The small creek could be a sanctuary for unusual wildlife, including salamander and tree frogs.

History could become part of the woodland classroom if students are required to trace the background of this land according to old maps and local history books. There are several old foundations, a bridge of granite blocks about 100 years old, and many other links to the town's past, Clapp said.



David Clapp

"This could be a very nice, quiet, well-used trail," he said. "It's beautiful in the fall, interesting in the winter, and reborn in the spring. It will provide an environment that the town can live with - something that will command the attention of a child."

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 88E0015-P1

To Margaret Elgin of Milton in said County, Quincy Savings Bank of Quincy in said County and to all other persons interested.

A petition has been presented to said Court by Thomas F. Manning, Jr. of Cohasset in the County, of Norfolk representing that he holds as tenant in common an undivided part or share of certain land lying in Cohasset in said County and briefly described as follows: The land and the buildings situated in Cohasset in Norfolk County, bounded and described as follows:

EASTERLY: by the Westerly line of a New Right of Way, as shown on plan herein after referred to, two hundred fifty-seven and 75/100 (257.75) feet;

SOUTHERLY: by Lot D and by L E7, two hundred ninety-seven (297) feet;

NORTHWESTERLY: by the Southeasterly line of a Way, three hundred thirty-eight and 02/100 (338.02) feet; and

NORTHERLY: by a curved line on said Way, forty-three and 89/100 (43.89) feet.

See Land Court Plan 1924X Certificate No. 13768, Book 69, setting forth that he desires that all—of said land may be sold at private sale for not less than four hundred thousand dollars and petitioner further prays for compensation more fully set out in said petition, and further prays that partition may be made of all the land aforesaid according to law, and to that end that a commissioner be appointed to make such partition and be ordered to make sale and conveyance of all, or any part of said land which the Court finds cannot be advantageously divided, either at private sale or public auction, and be ordered to distribute the net proceeds thereof.

If you desire to object thereto, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham before ten o'clock in the forenoon on the thirtieth day of March 1988, the return day of this citation.

Witness, ROBERT M. FORD, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this eleventh day of February 1988.

Override proposal hot topic at election forum

For the first time, it was explained this week that if residents approve a general override of Proposition 2 1/2, it will mean an increase in property taxes anywhere from 72 cents to $1.23 per $1,000 valuation.

At the League of Women Voters candidates forum Tuesday night, it was not the candidates who attracted the most attention. The hottest topic of debate was the proposed override.

It was explained that if the town approves an override for the amount of the Fiscal 1989 budget deficit of $517,000, it will mean a tax rate of $13.70 per $1,000 valuation. That new deficit figure, lower than the $800,000 deficit projected last week, was presented Tuesday night after budget cuts were authorized by selectmen, or were recommended by the advisory committee.

For a house assessed at $100,000, that means a property tax of $1,370 per year.

Advisory Committee Chairman Jane Goedecke further explained that if $200,000 in town meeting warrant articles are added to the budget deficit for a total shortfall of $700,000, the tax rate will increase from its current level of $12.98 to $14 per $1,000.

And if the optimum amount of warrant articles are approved at an additional increase of $127,775, the tax rate will be about $14.23 per $1,000, or $1423 for a home assessed at $100,000.

Goedecke explained to about 60 persons attending candidates' night, that the procedure will call for the annual town meeting April 2. Town meeting will be informed that if article four, the main budget article, is approved, it will necessitiate a subsequent override of Prop. 2 1/2. Another option would be to defeat article four, or to amend it.

But the budget deficit of $517,000, plus any other approved warrant articles which require appropriations raised through taxation, will be rolled together for a specific override proposal amount.

Selectmen will then have to vote to call for an override, and approve the override with a majority vote. The override question, with an amount specified, will be presented by secret

Town meeting will proceed step-by-step, dollar-by-dollar when it commences Saturday, April 2 at 10 a.m. at the high school gymnasium.

Town officials anticipate a $517,000 Proposition 2 1/2 override just to cover town budget expenses. Any further appropriations will be voted upon Saturday. A continual tally of the appropriations to be raised by taxation will be given each time, so voters will understand how large the budget deficit has subsequently expanded.

It will take several weeks after town meeting for officials to calculate the amount needed for an override proposal. Once that amount is known, there will be a special election sometime in late April to decide the fate of an override.

Article four is the town's operating budget, encompassing every municipal department and school expenses for the coming fiscal year. The total for this coming year is $11,337, 523. Last year's grand total was $10,538,359. The largest portion of that budget is allocated to personnel salaries.

There are a couple of articles in the annual town meeting that will add much-needed revenue to the town's operating budget. A hike in the water useage rates for home and business owners will add about $158,000 to the water department's income. With the current water rate it is expected the department's anticipated receipts will fall short by about $150,000.

The advisory committee is also supporting a four percent boarding room occupancy tax. Although town meeting defeated this article last year, advisors feel the additional $16,000 to $40,000 in state revenues to the town is worth a second look at this town meeting.

The room tax, which some residents felt was discriminatory, will affect only Kimball's By The Sea motel.

The advisory committee was expected to take a vote this week on whether to recommend a proposed 6.9 percent increase in the school department budget. The largest percentage increase in this budget is in staff salaries.

The proposed school budget is $5.1 million.

New math method will ease anxiety

By Sheila Casey
Special to the Mariner

For those who have experienced the humiliation and frustration of being a student who 'can't do math,' help is at hand in the unlikely form of a gregarious MIT scientist.

Dr. Alan Natapoff from the Department of Aeronautics at MIT, has developed a new method of teaching math to children and adults who suffer from "math anxiety." He demonstrated this process at the Deer Hill School March 23.

Although Dr. Natapoff has conducted seminars in 12 states with groups ranging from second graders to adults, he labeled the Cohasset demonstration his most ambitious so far. Dr. Natapoff spent two and a-half hours with students who possessed a wide range of ability. The group of fourth graders included very bright students, average students, those with varying degrees of learning disabilities. For all the students, this was their first encounter with long division.

Dr. Natapoff instructed each child to work out a problem on the board. Using a lot of positive reinforcement, remembering each child's name, and frequently calling out praise and encouragement in his booming voice, he reminded them of a few basic rules: Never repeat the question (it confuses the short term memory), and say eight two and eight two zero when multiplying by ten instead of eighty-two and eight hundred and twenty (it helps the brain make the connection between the two numbers faster).

He occasionally "throws them a curve ball" by asking the same question in a different tone to make sure they understand. Judging by their performance, all the children learned very quickly, and it was almost impossible to tell who was the brightest student and who had the most severe learning disabilities. The ten year-olds all agreed it was "more fun than regular math class," although the fact that all their math teachers were present may have inhibited further comment.

Dr. Natapoff, who uses his technique in teaching a physics class at MIT, began his research in 1967 at the Man Vehicle Lab at MIT, while studying the performance of the brain and nervous system of astronauts. Study of the brain in stressful situations led to the study of how children deal with the abstraction of math, and to eventually develop his method of teaching which he calls the Strategic Mathematics Pedagogy Consortium.

Natapoff's basic technique is to break down the problem into small units or 'packages' in much the same way as a computer. He uses the binary language of computers by employing multiples of 1 2 4 8 and so on. "We can teach our students anything as long as we break it up into small enough pieces for them to digest, and use the proper language," was a theme he repeated.

His method does not require students to memorize tables or carry numbers in their heads. And his criticism of the memorization of multiplication tables is scathing. "Learning tables is intellectually vacuous," he snapped. "We expect students to memorize tables when they are so anxious they can't memorize their own names. We are spending $1 billion a year to teach our children to calculate as fast as a $1 calculator."

Natapoff explained his method may be slower, but he is simultaniously teaching the process and the theory. He also noted there is little room for error. Demonstrating a complicated problem using the traditional method, he made several errors. "I never do it this way," he exclaimed, "and it's tragedy that our students are forced to."

He claims that 98 percent of all students, including learning disability students, can learn math using his

Cable TV vacancy

Selectmen announced Monday that a vacancy exists on the Cohasset Cable TV Committee. Residents interested in the post should contact the selectmen's office at Town Hall.

Town dump closed April 3

The Cohasset Municipal Landfill will be closed Sunday, April 3 for the Easter holiday and will be opened Monday, April 4.

The Board of Health reminds townspeople that all trash is required to be bagged prior to disposal at the landfill. Businesses which dispose of their trash are required to secure a Business Dump Permit from the Board of Health; fee for an annual permit is $50. Cohasset regulations prohibit disposal of any automobile parts.

PSO Nominating Committee

The PSO Nominating Committee has convened to prepare a slate of nominees for the 1988-89 Executive Board. A list of candidates will be mailed to the general membership in April and voted into office at the Annual Meeting on May 12. If you would be interested in serving on the Executive Board, would like to make a recommendation, or would like more information, please contact any Nominating Committee member: Olga Nohe, Chairman (1273); Patty McCarthy (9783); Sue McNamara (6945); Claudia Story (6976); Barbara Meehan (6785); Priscilla Sullivan (9792).

Transportation topic

State Senator William B. Golden (D-Weymouth), Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, and Mariner publisher David Cutler will be appearing on the Continental Cable television program, "Cohasset Talks: Pierson to Person" with host, Wigmore Pierson.

They will be discussing solutions to the transportation problems on the South Shore including the commuter boat, possible increases in MBTA bus and train service, the restoration of commuter rail service, and improvements in the condition of the region's highways.

They will also discuss the success of the South Shore Coalition in beginning to seek solutions to regional problems such as solid waste management, transportation, ground water protection and housing.

The program is scheduled to air Wednesday, April 6, at 8 p.m. on Channel 3 in Cohasset.

Town meeting update

Although selectmen voted to reschedule the second special town meeting to May 2, sewer commissioner Charles DeSantis said Tuesday night that will be too late for the three sewer commission-sponsored articles.

Last week, the commission proposed a special town meeting in order to finalize plans for the design of an intermunicipal sewer pipe to Hull. Selectmen agreed to schedule the meeting for April 25.

This week, selectmen were advised by Town Counsel Richard Henderson that official notice of the first special town meeting scheduled for April 2, had not been properly posted. According to state and local bylaw, notice of special town meeting requires public posting two weeks in advance. Selectmen were three days late with that posting.

Selectmen decided Monday night to push back the special town meeting, including the three sewer articles, to May 2, giving appropriate time to post public notice of the meeting.

But DeSantis objected Tuesday night, saying the sewer articles could not wait until May 2. The state must review and approve the design before the end of the state fiscal year, and the May 2 meeting would not give commissioners enough time to develop a plan, he said.

DeSantis also warned advisors that the cost for the design and construction of the plans might warrant a debt exclusion override of $156,000. Although that money would later be paid back through user fees, DeSantis said as a show of good faith to the state, the town should have up-front money to construct the project. Because of the current budget crunch, the commissioner figured the money would require a debt exclusion override.

methods, as opposed to 60 or 80 percent using traditional methods. "The important factor is that only 2 percent would require remedial classes," he said. "The problem is not with the teachers but with the strategy. The methods we currently use were developed around 1900 and there has been no new research since then. The concept is outdated and too obscure for many of our students to grasp."

He likens the current learning method to being in a foreign country without having first learned the language. "The best skill we can teach our children is a fluency in mathematical language," he stated.

Fear of failure and humiliation create "math anxiety" in adults and L.D. students, he said, get paradoxically, these two groups are his most enthusiastic students. "Adults are at first surprised at how well it works, and the most excited by their performance," he said. "And the L.D. students, facing failure day after day, give so much more of themselves when they begin to experience success." The L.D. child's intelligence is not impared, he explained, and this method works with their native intelligence.

"It allows them to translate the abstract to the visual, and the problem is then laid out like a picture, more like a drawing than a math problem," Dr. Natapoff added.

Four teachers attended the session, including Patricia Chase, Marion Atkinson, Pauline Gallagher and Bette Rega, (both Gallagher and Rega are also L.D. specialists) and the general consensus was "extremely enthusiastic." Gallager said they are excited about Dr. Natapoff's technique and she noted, "we are going to try to incorporate it into our curriculum."

Gallager views this as an educational breakthrough with a lot of potential, particularly in teaching L.D. students. "As we have seen demonstrated, all the children can do it," she said. And self esteem is so important in the learning process. As Dr. Natapoff has pointed out, current methods are outdated and we must keep up with what is contemporary in mathematics and sciences."

In order to fully utilize the potential, Gallagher sees the need for more input from Dr. Natapoff and specific training for teachers.

"We need to train the people who will be working with the children, and we need to watch the children and see what happens when they are exposed to this new technique," Gallagher said, noting she would be interested in seeing how older students would handle it — those who would have to "unlearn" traditional methods.

Dr. Natapoff is scheduled to give an additional demonstration at Deer Hill School April 6.

Selectmen to investigate hunting complaints

By Bill Bowers
Mariner correspondent

Selectmen discussed the proposed town-wide hunting ban Monday with residents Richard and Geraldine Farwell of Beechwood Road.

The Farwells expressed that concern for their safety led them to summon the police on several occasions during the past three hunting seasons. Farwell was once struck by bird shot that came through the trees and bounced off his clothing, they said.

Richard stressed he is a hunter, and he and his wife are not opposed to the sport. Their concern is for safety, they agreed.

"It's dangerous," Geraldine said. "We're afraid to go outside during hunting season."

The area around the river behind their property is a popular hunting spot during duck season, and some days there is a great deal of shooting, the Farwells said.

"Sometimes it's like World War III out there," Richard said. "You can hear the shot coming through the trees."

Geraldine showed selectmen a letter she said she'd received Monday. The letter, from the Mass. Gun Owners Action League (GOAL) urges Cohasset residents to oppose Article 54 of the annual town meeting warrant. The article, proposed by Selectman James Gallagher, would prohibit hunting "anywhere within the Town of Cohasset." The GOAL letter states in part that no problems associated with hunting have been reported in the town.

"That's just not true," Geraldine said. "This will give people in Cohasset the wrong idea." She added she had called the police several times about people hunting close behind her property.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle stated that in 60 years as a Cohasset resident, he had never before known of any incidents or problems associated with hunting in the town.

"This is the first I've heard of it," he said. Laugelle thanked the Farwells for bringing the matter before the selectmen and promised the board would investigate police reports of hunting complaints in Cohasset.

In other business, selectmen discussed the proposed 1988-89 school department warrant articles with Supt. Stephen Hart.

The school department requested $140,000 to renovate four science laboratories at the junior/senior high school. However, the advisory committee recommended half the cost be put off until next year. The most vital part of the renovation, the refurbishing of the science lab ventilation system, will be done first, provided town meeting approves the $70,000 price tag, Hart said.

Selectmen also voted to recommend Article 26 of the town meeting warrant, which would provide $20,000 to repair the slate roof at the Joseph Osgood School. Supt. Hart said it is important that the repairs not be put off for another year, because rainwater has been leaking through the roof and could cause serious damage if the problem is not corrected.

"Because of the possibility of structural damage to the attic we thought it was imperative to do it right away," Hart said.

Hart also said he thought it important that the town approve Article 27, which asks for $55,000 for 2 new school buses.

"We're going through a plan of replacing school buses," Hart said.

He added that the state law prohibits school buses with a chassis older than the 1979 model year. Hart pointed out that only three of the town's present buses had been considered roadworthy enough to make the trip to Waltham for a recent sporting event.

"Could you lease buses instead of buying?" Selectman Gallagher wanted to know.

Supt. Hart replied that he had investigated the possibility of leasing but found that this would cost about $60,000 more than the present plan of buying new buses gradually. He also explained that buying used school buses is not really a viable option, because the law demanding post-1979 chassis on school buses has driven up the demand and the price of serviceable older vehicles.

"Maintenance costs for the older buses are very high," Hart added. He explained that this is due to the fact that the state requires school buses to pass very stringent safety inspections.

"The buses, they're really in need," commented Selectmen Chairman Laugelle.

ballot at a special election sometime at the end of April, Goedecke stated. A simple majority of votes will be needed to pass the override.

If the vote fails, then another special election can be called. Or, voters could return to another special town meeting where an amended budget would be presented at a lesser amount.

Only those articles which require appropriations to be raised by taxation will be included in the override total, she said. Any items which will be purchased by borrowing, will not effect the budget deficit.

Goedecke further explained that no override vote will be taken at Saturday's town meeting. If an override is necessary, a special secret ballot election will take place sometime in late April. "You will come to town hall and vote, just as you would in any other election," she stated. If the override vote fails, the town could call for another special election, or go to a special town meeting with an approrpiately-reduced budget.

She warned the audience, "it is most important to remember. You can't come to town meeting and vote yes on the warrant articles, if you are not prepared to vote yes on the ballot (for an override).

"We need to be realistic," Goedecke continued. "Those who come to these meeting may be thwarted by those who go to the ballot box to say no. There is a danger that those who are uninformed will win out against those who are informed."

When asked what an override will cost taxpayers if they "buy the candy store" - meaning approval of all warrant article appropriations, Executive Secretary Donald Andrew calculated the tax rate would increase to about $14.22 per $1,000 valuation. That is a $1.23 increase per $1,000 over the current rate.

Andrew cautioned voters that Saturday's town

Warm weather greeted racers

By Mike Spellman
Mariner correspondent

There were near-perfect weather conditions for the twelfth annual Cohasset "Race By The Sea."

Those who organized the 10-kilometer run and those who ran in it were counting their blessings on Sunday afternoon.

The race got underway promptly at 1 p.m. with the sun shining brightly and the temperature hovering near 60°.

An estimated 650 runners from as far away as Winnetka, Illinois, and ranging in age from nine to 73, turned out for the 6.2-mile jaunt; 507 finished.

John Fitzgerald, 23, of Brighton, won the event with an outstanding finishing time of 31:11, breaking the tape well ahead of John Nolan (31:57), 25, of Green Harbor.

These two runners pulled away from the pack early and were neck and neck for approximately three and a-half miles. But at that point, Fitzgerald proved to be the stronger hill runner along Forest Avenue and he gradually pulled away.

In the woman's race Liz Miller, 29, of Peru, VT, took top honors (16th place overall), posting an impressive time of 35:08, coasting home almost unchallenged ahead of Sheila Barry of Milton (38:34).

Other first place finishers: Mens — under 14 — Mike Holland, 11, Hingham; 14-17 — Glenn Rand, 16, Duxbury; 40-49 — Stoddard Melhado, 42, Littleton; 50 and over — David Sheehan, 54, Fall River.

Women — under 14 — Allegra Snyder, 13, Cohasset; 14-17 — Kerry Kirkendall, 17, Cohasset; 40-49 — Linda Foote, 46, Medford; Over 50 — Mary Cowan, 53, Cohasset.

Negotiating with developers controls housing

By John Magadieu
Mariner staff

South Shore towns can control affordable housing growth through active planning and negotiation with developers.

That was the message imparted by consultants Stockard and Engler at the South Shore Coalition's affordable housing seminar in Scituate Saturday.

"Suddenly, the South Shore is on the map for development," said coalition chairman John Silva, a Hull selectman. "The changes are exciting and scary."

One thing that has changed on the South Shore, he noted, is that there doesn't seem to be any affordable housing for the young, the elderly, or for people who work in the towns.

"I bought my house four or five years ago for $73,000," Silva said. "Recently, I was approached by a developer who offered me $200,000 for it; he said if I could come up with another $100,000, I could get a house on the water.

"Our access to Boston, our amenities and services are discovered," he said. "Selectmen and planning boards are dealing with housing daily. It's a good time for planners, like a child getting locked in a candy store."

But Silva noted that the average house in Duxbury sells for $259,000.

"A young person just out of college in his first $30,000-a-year job would have to work 20 to 30 years to buy a house there," he added. "If he grew up in Duxbury and wants to move back home, that's a frustrating situation."

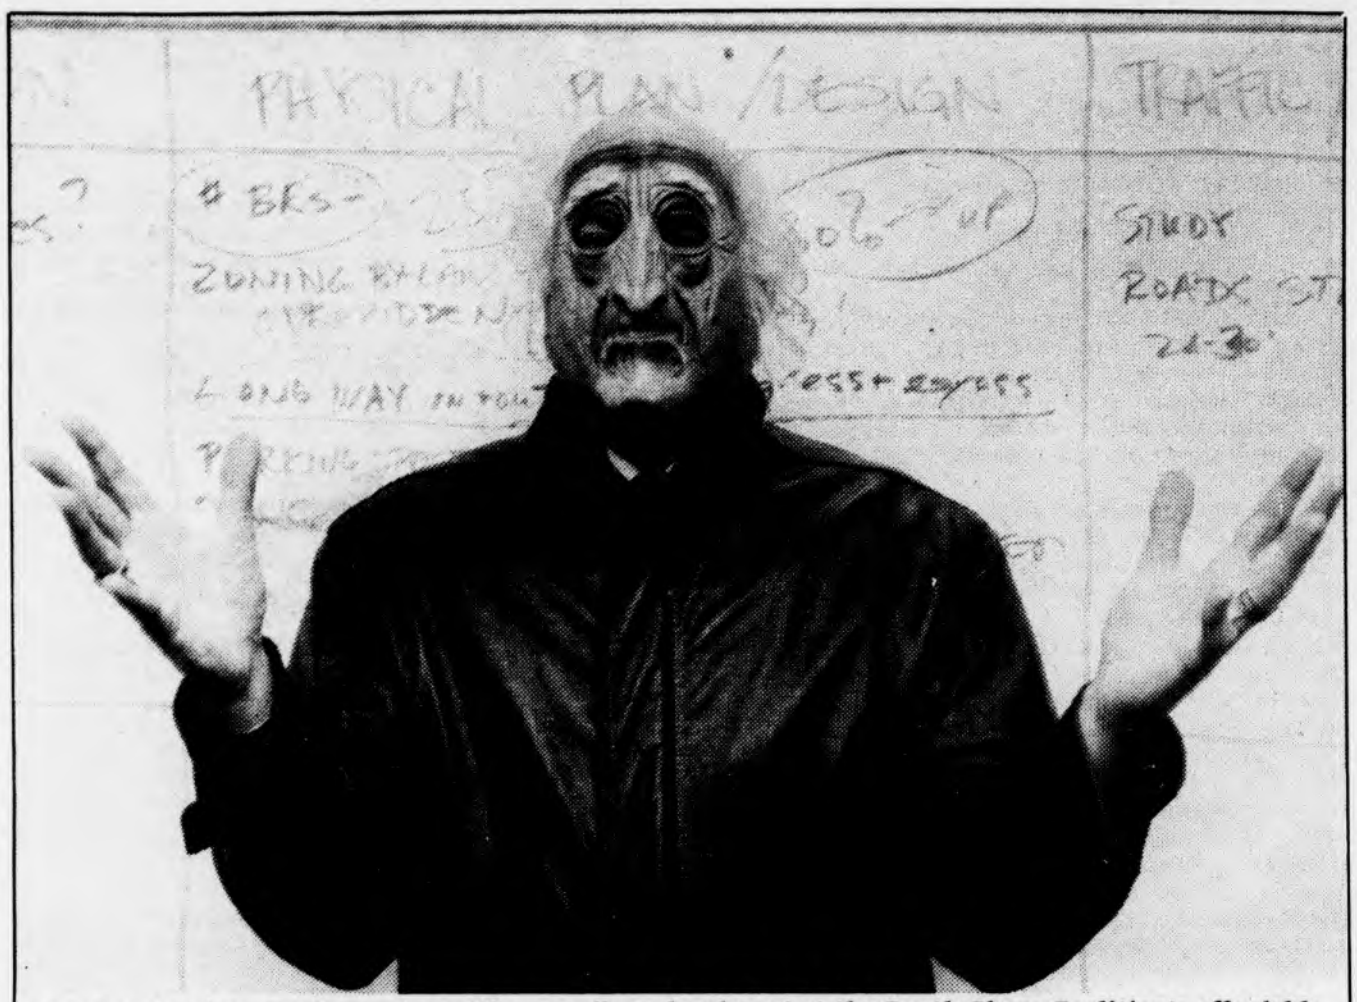
With the state mandating that towns set aside 10 percent of their housing stock as affordable housing, many local governments are facing for the first time, developers coming before them seeking to take plans through the "comprehensive permit process."

Also called the "anti-snob zoning act," the comprehensive permit process was established by the state in 1969. It allows developers to bypass the usual subdivision review by the local planning board, and instead go before the board of appeals for what in essence is a variance request.

Town officials often describe the comprehensive permit process as "new and scary" because it overrides the local zoning controls. Stockard and Engler told them how towns can provide affordable housing, and do it in a way that maintains the character of and quality of life in the town.

Consultant Robert Engler said, "When looking at the affordable housing issue, most people in suburban communities do not see the link between their well-being and affordable housing.

He predicted that without it, the economy will go south, "literally and figuratively.



Consultant Robert Engler portrays 'the scurrilous developer' at the South Shore Coalition's affordable housing conference in Scituate Saturday.

"You can't simply be anti-development," he said. Since 1976, 350,000 new jobs have been created in Massachusetts, yet only 28,000 people have moved into the state in the past seven years.

Projections show only 40,000 to 50,000 more people will move into the state by the year 2000, Engler said. "People cannot afford to come here.

"If we can't provide housing for our workforce, the economy will get worse and worse over the next few years."

Engler said town officials think the comprehensive permit process is scary because it overrides local planning.

A town can control whether such developments are "good" or "bad," he said, not by the review and regulation usually employed by planning boards, but by planning and negotiation by local housing partnerships and selectmen.

Because land costs are so high, developers often must seek state and federal subsidies to build affordable housing.

Engler said when a developer applies for a state grant, he needs the partnership and selectmen to agree to the concept if he is to be successful in acquiring funding. The state weighs heavily the opinions of local officials.

He urged members of local housing partnerships to Youth soccer teams begin season

Eleven of Cohasset's youth soccer teams begin play this weekend in the South Shore's Coastal League. Four of the teams will play at home at Milliken Field. The remaining games will be away.

The league's opening day schedule will follow Cohasset Youth Soccer's first ever Uniform Day which was held March 26 at Cohasset High School. It featured a mini-clinic conducted by two members of the Boston Bolts, a the new American Soccer League pro franchise.

The two players — Briton David Pike and Duxbury's Jeff McAvoy — played a series of mini-games against 20 selected youth soccer team members. A crowd of more than 200 watched the pros and the children scrimmage.

"We're delighted the Boston Bolts thought highly enough of the Cohasset program to volunteer their time and effort," said league coordinator Larry Shultz later. "We're hoping to make this an annual event, and would be delighted if the Bolts would participate in the future."

Shultz announced the league's first week schedule as follows. All this week's games, he said, will be played Saturday, April 2.

Home: Girls Under 12-1 vs. Plymouth, 10:15 a.m.; Girls Under 14-2 vs. Marshfield, 11:30 a.m.; Boys Under 10-2 vs. Carver, 1 p..m.; Boys Under 14-2 vs. Marshfield, 3:30 p.m.

Away games: Girls Under 10-1 at Scituate; Girls Under 10-2 at Pembroke; Girls Under 12-2 at Plymouth; Girls Under 14-1 at Marshfield; Boys Under 12-1 at Halifax; Boys Under 12-2 at Hanover; Boys Under 14-1 at Marshfield.

take a "proactive, rather than reactive role" by finding properties in town suitable for such development, approaching developers they trust, and negotiating for the needs of the town.

It is important that negotiators determine community concerns, then establish a positive bargaining atmosphere.

"Good negotiators can gain a lot of control," Engler said. The town can ensure the developer abides by agreements by "documenting everything" and attaching those documents to the grant application.

Chartis Langmaid of Cohasset's housing partnership commission, said officials from her town learned that because of the comprehensive permit process, the planning board can no longer be the "lead board" in evaluating development proposals.

"We also found out that when the town is focusing on its need to significantly increase affordable housing, it is smart to be proactive," she said.

Because of its openly hostile attitude toward providing affordable housing, Cohasset has been banned from benefitting from any state funding or participating in any state-sponsored program.

They are scared of higher-density housing that gives the appearance of multi-family development, and would prefer scattered-site single family housing, she said.

There is an article in Cohasset's town meeting warrant that would allow 10 percent higher density in return for including more affordable housing units.

"The housing partnership commission can be a more, proactive mediator and negotiator, analyzing the needs of the town and seeking out developers through their reputations," Langmaid said.

"We are the only town in the state banned from state-funded programs because of our open unwillingness to allow affordable housing, but there is a new agreement that went to Boston last Friday, and we hope the ban will be lifted.

Ironically, under the ban, Langmaid was excluded from participating in a state-sponsored seminar on affordable housing.

The South Shore Coalition conference, she said, "made people stop and think that a housing partnership "really can shape a development.

"Given that it will occur," she said, "it is better to have a voice about what will be developed, where it will be developed and who will do it."

Marshfield town planner Michael Almada said he believes the conference was worthwhile.

"It was useful for towns like Marshfield to realize the importance of the board of selectmen and zoning board taking an active role in the negotiating process," he said.

Almada said the conference taught Marshfield officials the importance of various boards working as a "one-town team."

He added, "it was helpful for them to clarify the role of the local housing partnership; they can have a coordinating role.

"It's a difficult role, to make a judgment on a preliminary action. The crucial point was learning that you have to make decisions and be effective early.

Shannon Pride has her face painted by Goldie the clown during Saturday's festive luncheon with the Easter bunny. (Kym Marcella)

□ All of us are anxiously awaiting summer, but Karla Kennedy is on pins and needles! Karla, who found out after a three week wait, is heading for Wheaton College on July 23 through August 13. Karla was one of three hundred hopefuls to try out for the childrens Summer Workshop, then the cut was made to twenty, then ten! She will be part of the group formed by ballet artists from all over the country. Sponsored by the Boston Ballet Workshop at Great Woods, it certainly sounds like it will be a grand experience for her, and she will undoubtedly be Cohasset's new Laurie Young some day. Karla is a sixth grade student in Mr. Shultz' class at Deer Hill School.

□ When you are rushing out to buy that Easter finery for your dining table this week, you'll undoubtedly be heading for the Linen Chest. Be sure to go to Brook Street as the planned moved that was to take place this past weekend has been indefinitely postponed. While you are there you are sure to find several ideas to make your Easter a festive one, so go early.

□ Larry and Darlyn Evans will certainly have a special Easter to remember, Marissa Anne arrived in time for the Bunny's visit.Marissa Anne was born on March 2 and there are more than just Larry and Darlyn that are full of joy. Grandparents Ann and Frank Evans and Don and Sally O'Neill are estatic! We are sure you will all have a happy day.

□ Chad Fox had good news for his folks recently, he is coming home! Chad is in the Air Force, and has not been home since November. He is located in Washington State right now, and is in Technical training. He will be home the first week in May, then he is off to Edwards Air Force Base, where he will be training for crew chief. We'll bet that Chad's mom, Kathy, is already planning all of his favorite meals! and, it will be good news for the CHS class of 1985, they will be happy to see their fellow classmate again.

□ News from a different branch of the service. . .Army to be exact. Pfc. Jason W. Gath, son of George and Leslie Gath, has completed training as an Army military police specialist under the station unit training program at Fort McClellan, Ala.

□ Here's hoping that Steve Ritts is on the mend, he had foot surgery last week. If you see him "hopping around town," now you'll know the reason why. Hope the surgery did the trick and you are fine, Steve.

□ Congratulations go to Ed Mulvey, who was recently honored for having been at the Pilgrim Co-Operative Bank for 30 years. In honor of the event, Ed was given a canoe, and cannot wait to go on his first canoe trip. We do hope that it takes place before the first of May, because that's a very special day. . .right, Ed?

□ Hats off to Veneta Roebuck, who is the new member of the Conservation Commission. We are sure she'll do a wonderful job. After all we all know the saying "ask a busy person." She surely is that, as well as a conscientious one.

□ Speaking of busy people, what about Chris Keating! he was extremely busy while playing football for the Buffalo Bills, as he was their player rep in '83 and '84, and now he is really carrying a load on his shoulders. He has joined the Boston Company's Institutional Markets Group as vice president of its principal subsidiary, Boston Safe Deposit and Trust Company, he is enrolled at Suffolk University Law School, and is a member of the International Foundation of Employee Benefit Plans. And, he's a wonderful son to mom and dad, Margaret and Gerard Keating, as well as being a husband and father. Now that's a schedule to keep up with.

□ Travor Stockinger had great success in the recent Mass. State Tang Soo Do Karate Tournament. He won first place for sparring and first place for form. Congratulations to you, Travor.

□ Hallmark 100 Properties recently recognized Jayne Nussdorfer as the top performer for the last quarter in their Cohasset office.

Nussdorfer has been an active real estate broker in Cohasset for seven years and was one of the original members of Hallmark 100. She holds her GRI designation. Nussdorfer lives on Jerusalem Road with her husband, Dan, and their two daughters.

□ David Kierce of Cohasset has been inducted into the Delta Mu Delta National Honor Society at Nichols College.

Kierce, a junior majoring in marketing at Nichols is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Kierce of South Main St., Cohasset.

Delta Mu Delta is a national college honor society for students in business administration.

□ The Mass. Basketball Coaches Association's Top 80 Games, featured the state's outstanding seniors. They played at St. John's of Shrewsbury on Sunday.

Holly Grinnell of Foxboro, Alison Corbett of Hanover, Terri Ahlstrom of Weymouth South, Ellen Carey of Abp. Williams and Marge Murphy of Cohasset were on the girl's South Team, which played the North at 11:30 a.m. Walpole's Sue Brainard and Elaine Holbrook of Oliver Ames, were the South Coaches.

□ If by chance you saw the lights on late at the high school last weekend, it was for a mighty good reason. The Student Council Leadership Training Program was taking place; it was presented by Paul Bernard of Westbrook College, who presents programs all over the country. The program began at 5 p.m. with a pizza supper at 6:15, then a workshop until 10:45 p.m. The students watched a horror film together, and finally got to sleep around 3:30 a.m. with the boys in the senior study and girls in the AV studio. Mr. Delorenzo and Ms. Gallagher chaperoned the entire program, including waking up the students at 6:45 am. (probably the hardest part of the weekend) for a great breakfast prepared by the P.S.O. under the direction of Mrs. Reidy and Mrs. Wunschel. Teachers Mrs. Lahage and Mrs. Wondolasui also participated. The program concluded at noon with the awarding of the stuffed animal contest (each student brought in a stuffed animal.) for cutest, best dressed, and most unusual. A salute to the hard workers of the P.S.O.: Mr. Reidy, Mrs. Hurley, Mrs. Baird, Mrs. Marsac, Mrs. Ellinger, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Bronstein. And of course, Mr. Delorenzo and Ms. Gallagher for all of their efforts (we bet long naps were the order of the day on Sunday!!).

Please call me with your newsworthy event.

Public relations campaign for Vo-tech

By Patricia Masterson
Mariner correspondent

Radio and television commercials advertising student programs at the South Shore Regional Vocational High School are in the works after months of discussion. Committee members watched and listened to a series of one-minute radio spots and two television spots at their March 16 meeting.

The commercials are one part of VokePro, a public relations program for student recruitment. The ideas for commercials and strategies of VokePro are used by vocational schools across the country, and are implemented by a New York communications group.

South Shore students are profiled in the commercials. The theme is "That's the VokePro advantage. Be a VokePro and learn to earn."

In the commercials, students tell the audiences that the shop and academic programs are thought-provoking and captivating. Each program, such as marine technology, graphic arts and carpentry, are represented. The students also say that South Shore VoTech gives them the background to go on to college or into a profession.

Radio spots are being aired on WATD and WBET, and television spots are being aired on cable networks MTV, USA, CNN, Lifetime and VH1. Radio commercials air two to three times a day, while the television commercials air seven to 10 times a day.

The committee voted $28,000 for the total public relations package. After the initial radio and television campaign, the advertisements will be run in newspapers and on other radio stations.

Committee members were pleased with the commercials, but there are no results on the program's success to date.

VOTECH APPOINTMENTS

The committee also voted on appointments at their meeting.

David Sahl was appointed varsity baseball coach, while Paul Blanchard is junior varsity baseball coach. Two junior varsity coaches, rather than one varsity coach, are appointed for girls' softball. Kathy O'Donnell and Richard Infascelli will be the coaches.

"This is a transition year for girls softball," said Superintendent Clifford Easton. "The possibility to develop the team is good this year. We have 30 girls enrolled in the program and many of them are sophomores and freshmen. We hope to emphasize girls' athletics in the coming years."

In other appointments, Karen Hendrickson and Marie Butler were named to the mathematics curriculum to cover general mathematics, consumer mathematics and albegra I.

TUITION HIKE

In other decisions, committee members voted a tuition hike for the 1989-90 year from the current $4,495 to $4,700.

Editorial

The choice is ours

This Saturday will be the first test- the first indicator of the public's support or opposition to an override of Proposition 2 1/2.

At the annual and special town meetings which begin this Saturday, voters will not be asked to approve an override. They will, however, be kept continually aware of how much money will be needed to keep town government afloat.

The more appropriations approved by voters, the more money will be needed and the larger the override proposal will be. A running tally will be announced after each appropriation approved by town meeting voters.

Currently, without any capital budget appropriations, the town is about $517,000 in the hole. Thus, if voters decide Saturday to finish renovating the high school science labs, or to purchase a $50,000 truck for the highway department, that amount will be added into the deficit.

Each capital item will increase the town's deficit, and thus the override amount will grow in proportion.

It's easy to see that the 1988 town meeting is a must for all taxpayers of Cohasset. A quorum of 100 voters should never decide, especially this year, what should or should not be purchased or postponed for the entire town. These are vital issues which should be decided by many voters, not a few.

No matter the amount, an override for the town of Cohasset is very likely a necessity. The simple fact is, if we had to cut $517,000 from the town's operating budgets, it would mean severely cutting some departments, and killing others.

The school department would be forced to cut about $300,000 from that budget. No doubt it would reduce services, materials and ultimately, teachers. Many residents still feel the Osgood School should be closed, and the school's population combined with Deer Hill. Whether or not that is true, it is a solution that arrives too late to consider at this late date.

We can not ponder the what if's at this point. There is no solid plan at this time as to the logistics and costs of closing down one school and combining another. The only choice we have, should an override fail, is to cut deeply into a town operating budget and school services that contain little or no extras.

There are no added teachers in this year's school budget. There are no fancy new programs planned, or lots of high-tech materials requested. As advisory committee member William Lean stated, this school budget simply maintains the current level of service - there are no improvements.

It would be devastating to take away a budget that simply provides, and replace it with a budget that takes away from our children.

We are not saying that this huge, stinging deficit could not have been uncovered before now - so we could face better alternatives. If somewhere along this complicted scenario someone had seen this dilemma, perhaps we could have planned a school closing with adequate time to study its effects. We could have seriously debated, without severe time constraints, the effects of big budget cuts in town departments.

But that is a luxury we are not afforded this year. For now, we are faced with a rather simple choice. Either we bite the bullet and promise to do better in the future and vote for the override, or we refuse the override and face the reduction of town and school services, a cutback of our teaching force, and the elimination of some town departments and employees.

The choice is ours to make. And the place to begin is town meeting, Saturday, April 2 at 10 a.m.
